In a prosecution for incest, the trial court did not err in failing to order a blood test of the prosecuting witness to ascertain whether she was actually the defendant's blood relative where the defendant had never denied that the girl was his daughter and had admitted on direct examination that she was his daughter; nor was it error for the court to admit evidence of prior sexual acts between the defendant and the prosecuting witness. Insofar as Skinner v. State (1945) 198 Miss 505, 23 So. 2d 501, held that evidence of more than one crime of incest was inadmissible in a prosecution for a single incestuous offense, that decision was in error. Speagle v. State, 390 So. 2d 990 (Miss. 1980).

A conviction for adultery would be reversed where the state did not prove that at least one of the parties to the alleged act was married at the time; the trial court also erred in permitting the state to amend the indictment to change the date of the alleged offense where, in light of the fact that each separate act of adultery constitutes a separate offense, the amendment in effect charged a new and distinct offense from that for which the grand jury indicted defendant. Van Norman v. State, 365 So. 2d 644 (Miss. 1978).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.
2. Indictment.
3. —Sufficiency of indictment.
4. Proof.
5. —Presumptions and burden of proof.
6. Defenses.
7. Instructions.

1. In general.

A substantive element of the charge of bigamy and of the testimony is the fact that the first wife was alive at the time of the second marriage. Grace v. State, 212 Miss. 784, 55 So. 2d 495 (1951).

Where a district attorney represented the wife in divorce proceedings and a decree was rendered on February 6, 1950 instead of February 7, 1950, when defendant married second wife, the district attorney should have foreseen that more than likely he would be called upon to testify in bigamy prosecution and he should have withdrawn from the prosecution or refrain from testifying. Turner v. State, 212 Miss. 590, 55 So. 2d 228 (1951).

2. Indictment.

Indictment for bigamy must set forth something in nature of allegation with reference to time, place and circumstance of former marriage, or it must name person with whom former marriage is alleged to have been contracted. Wash v. State, 206 Miss. 858, 41 So. 2d 29 (1949).

An indictment charging bigamy under Code 1942, § 2019 need not set out the exceptions contained in succeeding section [Code 1942, § 2020]. Bryant v. State, 179 Miss. 739, 176 So. 590 (1937).

Essential averments with respect to first and second marriages stated; indictment must sufficiently charge each element of offense to enable accused to prepare defense. Graves v. State, 134 Miss. 547, 99 So. 364 (1924).

3. —Sufficiency of indictment.

Insufficiency of bigamy indictment may be raised for first time on appeal when indictment is fatally defective for failure to set forth time, place and circumstance of former marriage, or name of person with whom former marriage is alleged to have been contracted. Wash v. State, 206 Miss. 858, 41 So. 2d 29 (1949).

An indictment charging that defendant married a certain party when he was then and there legally married to another was sufficient to charge that such other was living when the second marriage was consummated. Bryant v. State, 179 Miss. 739, 176 So. 590 (1937).

Indictment charging that defendant on a certain day and at a certain place, being legally married to a certain party, did wilfully, unlawfully, feloniously, knowingly, and bigamously marry and have for his wife a certain other, was sufficient. Bryant v. State, 179 Miss. 739, 176 So. 590 (1937).

An indictment charging that marriage relation still existed than and there between accused and a certain party when he then and there married another sufficiently alleged that accused had two living wives at the same time. Bryant v. State, 179 Miss. 739, 176 So. 590 (1937).

Indictment held to sufficiently negative statutory exceptions. McQueen v. State, 143 Miss. 787, 109 So. 799 (1926).

4. Proof.

It is necessary to allege and prove that a spouse of a first marriage is living when a second marriage is contracted, to constitute bigamy. Bryant v. State, 179 Miss. 739, 176 So. 590 (1937).

In prosecution for bigamy, where guilt of defendant was fully established by other evidence, introduction of first wife who was sworn but withdrawn before she had testified against defendant was harmless error. Bryant v. State, 179 Miss. 739, 176 So. 590 (1937).

Proof by state of ceremonial marriage by person introduced by defendant as minister at parsonage or home of such alleged preacher was sufficient without proof that minister was ordained or authorized to perform ceremony. McQueen v. State, 143 Miss. 787, 109 So. 799 (1926).

Corroborative proof of ceremonial marriage under law of Louisiana by showing cohabitation and birth of children is not error. McQueen v. State, 143 Miss. 787, 109 So. 799 (1926).

State must prove valid marriage contracted before second marriage; common-law marriage relied on must be recognized in state where contracted; defendant's common-law marriage in Louisiana not former marriage constituting basis for bigamy prosecution. Graves v. State, 134 Miss. 547, 99 So. 364 (1924).

If the first marriage be proven by the minister who solemnized the rites, and the marriage license with the certificate thereon, it will be sufficient. It is not a valid objection that the minister was not properly ordained as a minister of the gospel according to the rules and regulations of his church. Taylor v. State, 52 Miss. 84 (1876).

5. —Presumptions and burden of proof.

In a prosecution for bigamy there is no presumption of a dissolution of the former marriage. Grace v. State, 212 Miss. 784, 55 So. 2d 495 (1951).

Burden is on the state to prove that a former spouse is still living at the time of a defendant's second marriage in order to establish the crime of bigamy since such fact is a vital part of the corpus delicti, and while the presumption of continuance of life may be recognized, such presumption is at least neutralized if not overcome by the presumption of innocence in a criminal case, so that in the absence of evidence in addition to the presumption of continuance of life there is no case for submission to the jury, and a defendant is entitled to a directed verdict. White v. State, 183 Miss. 351, 184 So. 303 (1938).

A presumption of innocence at least neutralizes, if it does not overcome, the presumption of life and in the absence of other competent evidence of probative value to aid the presumption that the former spouse is living there is no case for submission to the jury; the fact that the former spouse is living must not depend upon presumption merely, but must be established by proof, for the presumption of innocence supplemented by the presumption of the validity of the second marriage must prevail over the presumption that the former spouse is still living. White v. State, 183 Miss. 351, 184 So. 303 (1938).

Burden was on accused to prove that his second marriage was within the exception of Code 1906, § 1052. Bennett v. State, 100 Miss. 684, 56 So. 777 (1911).

6. Defenses.

In a prosecution for bigamy the fact that a subsequent divorce is a matter of affirmative defense and the state need not initially negative such defense by either allegation or proof. Grace v. State, 212 Miss. 784, 55 So. 2d 495 (1951).

The good faith of the defendant in contracting a second marriage on a mistake of law is no defense to a charge of bigamy. Burnley v. State, 201 Miss. 234, 29 So. 2d 94 (1947).

Defendant's misinterpretation of a summons in his wife's divorce action against him as setting the date of trial, and his mistaken belief that a decree for temporary allowances constituted a decree of divorce, were mistakes of law and no defense to a charge of bigamy predicated on his remarriage pending the divorce action. Burnley v. State, 201 Miss. 234, 29 So. 2d 94 (1947).

7. Instructions.

Where the first wife was known by two names, the question to be considered by the jury is the identity of the woman, and not her name, and the court may so instruct. Taylor v. State, 52 Miss. 84 (1876).

It is improper to charge the jury that a "marriage was good without any ceremony, and by the mere consent of the parties, if the parties intended marriage and that intent sufficiently appear." It is deficient (under statutes then in force) in not adding that such consent and intent must be followed by actual cohabitation thereunder as man and wife. Taylor v. State, 52 Miss. 84 (1876).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

3. Dissolution of first marriage.

1. In general.

The good faith of the defendant in contracting a second marriage on a mistake of law is no defense to a charge of bigamy. Burnley v. State, 201 Miss. 234, 29 So. 2d 94 (1947).

An indictment charging bigamy under a certain section of the statute need not set out the exceptions contained in this section [Code 1942, § 2020]. Bryant v. State, 179 Miss. 739, 176 So. 590 (1937).

2. Absence of spouse.

The law presumes, in favor of the validity of a marriage contracted by a person, where a husband or wife by a former marriage has been absent, and not heard from, and not known by such person to be living for the statutory number of years preceding the second marriage, that the absentee is dead; and the presumption will be acted on in a prosecution for bigamy. Gibson v. State, 38 Miss. 313 (1860).

So as to the presumptions of the validity of a marriage within the statutory number of years where the first spouse was not afterwards heard from, it will prevail. Spears v. Burton, 31 Miss. 547 (1856).

3. Dissolution of first marriage.

In a prosecution for bigamy there is no presumption of a dissolution of the former marriage. Grace v. State, 212 Miss. 784, 55 So. 2d 495 (1951).

CJS. 25A C.J.S., Dead Bodies § 4.

§ 97-29-25. Desecration of cemetery; desecration of human corpse.

(1)(a) Every person who shall knowingly and willfully dig up, except as otherwise provided by law, obliterate, or in any way desecrate any cemetery where human dead are interred, or cause through word, deed or action the same to happen, shall upon conviction be imprisoned for not more than one (1) year in the county jail or fined not more than Five Hundred Dollars ($500.00), or both, in the discretion of the court. In addition to any penalties that the court is otherwise authorized to impose the court may, in its discretion, order such restitution as it deems appropriate.

(b) In construing this subsection (1), a cemetery shall mean any plot of ground (i) on which are grave markers of stone, wood, metal or any other material recognizable as marking graves, or (ii) the boundaries of which are defined by a recorded plat, a fence line or corner markers, or trees, or are defined in any other discernible manner.

(2)(a) Every person who shall knowingly and willfully dig up, except as otherwise provided by law, or in any way desecrate any corpse or remains of any human being, or cause through word, deed or action the same to happen, shall upon conviction be guilty of a felony and shall be imprisoned for not more than three (3) years or fined not more than Five Thousand Dollars ($5,000.00), or both, in the discretion of the court.

(b) (b) The prohibitions of this subsection (2) shall not apply to the good faith harvesting of any organ for transplant or to any good faith use of a cadaver or body part for medical or scientific education or research.

§ 97-29-27. Incest; marriage within prohibited degrees.

If any person shall marry within the degrees prohibited by law, he shall be guilty of incest, and on conviction thereof he shall be fined five hundred dollars or imprisoned in the penitentiary not longer than ten years, or punished by both such fine and imprisonment, and such marriage shall be void.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.

Since a marriage between a white person and a negro is not incestuous but is miscegenetic, and an incestuous relationship is an element of the denounced offense, Code 1942, § 2000 is not violated where a white person and a negro cohabit, or live together as husband and wife, in absence of allegations as to an incestuous relationship. Ratcliff v. State, 234 Miss. 724, 107 So. 2d 728 (1958); Rose v. State, 234 Miss. 731, 107 So. 2d 730 (1958).

Construing Code 1942, §§ 457 and 458, as setting forth conditions under which marriages are prohibited as incestuous under this section [Code 1942, § 2234], there is no provision which clearly deals with specific act of son-in-law in marrying his mother-in-law and order sustaining demurrer to indictment should be affirmed. State ex rel. Dist. Att'y v. Winslow, 208 Miss. 753, 45 So. 2d 574 (1950).

A person who willfully and lewdly exposes his person, or private parts thereof, in any public place, or in any place where others are present, or procures another to so expose himself, is guilty of a misdemeanor and, on conviction for a first offense, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding Five Hundred Dollars ($500.00) or be imprisoned not exceeding six (6) months, or both. Upon conviction for a second offense within five (5) years, such person shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be punished by a fine of not more than One Thousand Dollars ($1,000.00) or shall be imprisoned not exceeding one (1) year, or both. Upon conviction of a third or subsequent offense within five (5) years, such person shall be guilty of a felony and shall be punished by a fine of not more than Five Thousand Dollars ($5,000.00) or shall be imprisoned for not more than five (5) years in the State Penitentiary, or both. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.
2. Search and seizure.
3. Jury instructions.

1. In general.

Statute only prohibited nudity accompanied by lewdness, to be constitutional, the statute had to include an exception in the case of a person engaged in expressing a matter of serious literary, artistic, scientific, or political value. Richmond v. City of Corinth, 816 So. 2d 373 (Miss. 2002).

Wilfulness and lewdness are essential elements of the misdemeanor charged in this section [Code 1942, § 2290]. Lott v. Potacocowa Creek Drainage Dist., 193 So. 2d 126 (Miss. 1966).

A woman sun-bathing in the nude on her husband's private tract of approximately 14½ acres of wooded land, not visible from any public road, who immediately began to clothe herself when uninited visitors appeared on the premises was not guilty of wilfully and lewdly exposing her person under the provisions of this section [Code 1942, § 2290]. Pendergrass v. State, 193 So. 2d 126 (Miss. 1966).

It is necessary under this section [Code 1942, § 2290] to charge that the exposure was "lewdly" made. Stark v. State, 81 Miss. 397, 33 So. 175 (1903).

2. Search and seizure.

Defendant's act of removing her shirt in a public parking lot, although not a violation of Miss. Code Ann. § 97-29-31 (Rev. 2000), gave an officer sufficient reasonable suspicion to authorize an investigatory stop; the question as to whether an officer acts reasonably in making an investigatory stop is not whether a driver is suspected of a felony or misdemeanor, but whether a law enforcement officer acts reasonably in stopping a vehicle to investigate a complaint short of arrest. Ginn v. State, 860 So. 2d 675 (Miss. 2003).

3. Jury instructions.

In a case in which defendant was convicted of enticing a child for sexual purposes, defendant was not entitled to a lesser included offense instruction on misdemeanor indecent exposure; based on the overwhelming evidence, no reasonable jury could have found defendant not guilty of any element of the principal charge. Delashmit v. State, 991 So. 2d 1215 (Miss. 2008).

§ 97-29-45. Obscene electronic communications.

(1) It shall be unlawful for any person or persons:

(a) To make any comment, request, suggestion or proposal by means of telecommunication or electronic communication which is obscene, lewd or lascivious with intent to abuse, threaten or harass any party to a telephone conversation, telecommunication or electronic communication;

(b) To make a telecommunication or electronic communication with intent to terrify, intimidate or harass, and threaten to inflict injury or physical harm to any person or to his property;

(c) To make a telephone call, whether or not conversation ensues, without disclosing his identity and with intent to annoy, abuse, threaten or harass any person at the called number;

(d) To make or cause the telephone of another repeatedly or continuously to ring, with intent to harass any person at the called number;

(e) To make repeated telephone calls, during which conversation ensues, solely to harass any person at the called number; or

(f) Knowingly to permit a computer or a telephone of any type under his control to be used for any purpose prohibited by this section.

(2) Upon conviction of any person for the first offense of violating subsection (1) of this section, such person shall be fined not more than Five Hundred Dollars ($500.00) or imprisoned in the county jail for not more than six (6) months, or both.

(3) Upon conviction of any person for the second offense of violating subsection (1) of this section, the offenses being committed within a period of five (5) years, such person shall be fined not more than One Thousand Dollars ($1,000.00) or imprisoned in the county jail for not more than one (1) year, or both.

(4) For any third or subsequent conviction of any person violating subsection (1) of this section, the offenses being committed within a period of five (5) years, such person shall be guilty of a felony and fined not more than Two Thousand Dollars ($2,000.00) and/or imprisoned in the State Penitentiary for not more than two (2) years, or both.

(5) The provisions of this section do not apply to a person or persons who make a telephone call that would be covered by the provisions of the federal Fair Debt Collection Practices Act, 15 USCS Section 1692 et seq.

(6) Any person violating this section may be prosecuted in the county where the telephone call, conversation or language originates in case such call, conversation or language originates in the State of Mississippi. In case the call, conversation or language originates outside of the State of Mississippi then such person shall be prosecuted in the county to which it is transmitted.

(7) For the purposes of this section, telecommunication and electronic communication mean and include any type of telephonic, electronic or radio communications, or transmission of signs, signals, data, writings, images and sounds or intelligence of any nature by telephone, including cellular telephones, wire, cable, radio, electromagnetic, photoelectronic or photo-optical

Companies organized to do business as commercial broadcast radio stations, television stations, telecommunications service providers, Internet service providers, cable service providers or news organizations shall not be criminally liable under this section.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.
2. Telephone harassment.

1. In general.

Statutory language clearly prescribed for punishment only a class of true threats, and not social or political advocacy. Shackelford v. Shirley, 948 F.2d 935 (5th Cir. 1991).

Because trial judge's jury instructions tracked language of statute, jury's verdict represented finding that defendant, on trial for violating statute by placing telephone call to former supervisor stating that next time supervisor came by defendant's premises he would be "toting an ass whippin," engaged in unprotected, threatening speech. Shackelford v. Shirley, 948 F.2d 935 (5th Cir. 1991).

Telephone harassment statute prohibiting making telephone call threatening to inflict injury or physical harm, with intent to terrify, intimidate, or harass, is not unconstitutionally overbroad on its face. Shackelford v. Shirley, 948 F.2d 935 (5th Cir. 1991).

Conviction of defendant for violation of state telephone harassment statute was upheld, and did not violate First Amendment, where defendant placed telephone call to former supervisor stating that next time supervisor came by defendant's premises he would be "toting an ass whippin." Shackelford v. Shirley, 948 F.2d 935 (5th Cir. 1991).

The State could properly proceed against a defendant under subsection (1)(c) of this section, which prohibits making a harassing telephone call, rather than under subsection (1)(e) of this section, which prohibits repeated harassing telephone calls, even though the defendant allegedly made 7 harassing telephone calls to a single individual, so long as the indictment was clear and unequivocal. Gray v. State, 549 So. 2d 1316 (Miss. 1989).

An indictment improperly joined 8 counts of making harassing telephone calls where the indictment charged the defendant with 2 different crimes on 2 different dates against 2 different victims. Gray v. State, 549 So. 2d 1316 (Miss. 1989).

A prosecutor's comments during closing argument in a prosecution for making harassing telephone calls that the defendant was "a coward and a terrorist" and that the calls were "a form of terrorism...that is employed by a coward" did not warrant a mistrial. Making harassing phone calls is a cowardly act and a strong argument could be made that in the context of the case, the terms used by the prosecutor were accurate to describe the sort of person who calls someone up for the purpose of making harassing phone calls. Gray v. State, 549 So. 2d 1316 (Miss. 1989).

Evidence was sufficient to support conviction for making an obscene telephone call, where an obscene call was traced to the defendant's residence, which was three doors down from the victim's, the victim positively identified defendant's voice as that of the caller's, and where the caller had stated his first name and his telephone number, and they were the same as defendant's; the testimony of the victim as to obscene calls she had received, in addition to the call for which defendant had been prosecuted, was properly admitted where the calls were interrelated, and were admissible to prove identity, guilty knowledge, intent, and motive. Weeks v. State, 465 So. 2d 334 (Miss. 1985).

Evidence of obscene telephone calls other than call charged in indictment is admissible if interrelated to charged call or if relevant to proof of identity, guilty knowledge, intent and motive. Weeks v. State, 465 So. 2d 334 (Miss. 1985).

Evidence obtained by use of telephone trapping device is sufficient to support conviction for making obscene telephone call. Weeks v. State, 465 So. 2d 334 (Miss. 1985).

The words "I want you," standing alone, were neither profane, vulgar, indecent, threatening, obscene, nor insulting, and defendant's demurrer to an indictment under this section [Code 1972, § 97-29-45] should have been sustained. Sanders v. State, 306 So. 2d 636 (Miss. 1975).

In a prosecution for using obscene language over the telephone, the testimony of the complainant that she had received other obscene calls was admissible to explain why a holding device was placed on her telephone by the telephone company, but it was error for the trial court to allow her to testify on redirect examination, over the objection of the defendant, that the voice of the person making the previous calls, for which the defendant was not charged, was the same as the one who made the call which was the basis of the indictment. Younger v. State, 301 So. 2d 300 (Miss. 1974).

Where the indictment fails to specify the allegedly profane language used by the defendant, a motion to quash should be granted. Spears v. State, 253 Miss. 108, 175 So. 2d 158 (1965).

It is reversible error not to require the state's prosecuting witness to testify orally to the jury the allegedly indecent words which were spoken to her by the defendant, such words being the gravamen of the indictment. Spears v. State, 253 Miss. 108, 175 So. 2d 158 (1965).

In a prosecution under this section [Code 1942, § 2291.5] it was reversible error to ask the defendant if he had not called up 17 women (naming them) in addition to the prosecuting witness and used the same indecent language to them. Spears v. State, 253 Miss. 108, 175 So. 2d 158 (1965).

Where the accused had not objected to the prosecuting witness testifying, the contention that the trial court erred in permitting the witness to testify that she was the former wife of the accused could not be considered for the first time on appeal. Likewise, contentions as to the amendment of an affidavit to show the language used, and the sufficiency of a justice of the peace court judgment which failed to state the name of the threatened person, could not be considered for the first time on appeal. Shortridge v. State, 243 Miss. 710, 140 So. 2d 89 (1962).

2. Telephone harassment.

In defendant's trial on charges of telephone harassment, a violation of Miss. Code Ann. § 97-29-45(1)(a), the trial court did not err in admitting the sheriff's rebuttal testimony in which the sheriff relied on his notes because defendant failed to establish that the prosecution violated Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R 9.04(A) by failing to tender the sheriff's notes during discovery. The sheriff's testimony was not exculpatory; the notes were used during rebuttal and not in the State's case-in-chief; and the testimony did not consist of a statement by defendant. Therefore, the notes did not constitute a written statement required to be provided to the defense during discovery under Rule 9.04(A). Yates v. State, 919 So. 2d 1122 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), writ of certiorari denied by 926 So. 2d 922, 2006 Miss. LEXIS 71 (Miss. 2006).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. Profanity.
2. Public drunkenness.

1. Profanity.

The circuit court committed manifest error in determining that the defendant's conduct gave rise to probable cause for his arrest for a violation of the statutory prohibition against public profanity where (1) during a conversation between the defendant and a police officer and another man, the defendant said, "I'm tired of this God d--- police sticking their nose in s--- that doesn't even involve them," (2) the officer warned the defendant not to use profanities, and (3) the defendant then voiced additional profane remarks towards the officer. Brendle v. City of Houston, 759 So. 2d 1274 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

The statute provides that the profanities uttered must be said in a public place and in the presence of two or more persons; however, there is no requirement that two or more persons testify that the vulgar words spoken were actually offensive or that the two present actually heard the words spoken. Brendle v. City of Houston, 759 So. 2d 1274 (Miss. Ct. App. 2000).

A state cannot, consistently with the constitutional guaranty of freedom of expression, excise, as offensive conduct, one particular scurrilous epithet from the public discourse, either upon the theory that its use is inherently likely to cause violent reaction, or upon a general assertion that the state, acting as the guardian of public morality, may properly remove this offensive word from the public vocabulary. Cohen v. California, 403 U.S. 15, 91 S. Ct. 1780, 29 L. Ed. 2d 284 (1971), reh'g denied, 404 U.S. 876, 92 S. Ct. 26, 30 L. Ed. 2d 124 (1971).

The conviction for disturbing the peace by offensive conduct of one who entered a county courthouse wearing a jacket bearing the plainly visible words "Fuck the Draft", would be reversed where the conviction rested solely upon speech and there was no showing of an intent to incite disobedience to or disruption of the draft, punishment for the mere assertion of a position on the draft being inconsistent with the First and Fourteenth Amendments. Cohen v. California, 403 U.S. 15, 91 S. Ct. 1780, 29 L. Ed. 2d 284 (1971), reh'g denied, 404 U.S. 876, 92 S. Ct. 26, 30 L. Ed. 2d 124 (1971).

"Public place," within purview of city ordinance making it criminal offense to profanely swear or curse or use vulgar or indecent language in public place, is one wherein, by general invitation, members of the public attend for reasons of business, entertainment, instruction or the like, and are welcome so long as they conform to what is customarily done there. Nelson v. City of Natchez, 197 Miss. 26, 19 So. 2d 747 (1944).

Restaurant is a "public place" within the meaning of city ordinance making it criminal offense to profanely swear or curse or use vulgar or indecent language in public place, even though only white people are admitted thereat. Nelson v. City of Natchez, 197 Miss. 26, 19 So. 2d 747 (1944).

City ordinance making it criminal offense to profanely swear or curse or use vulgar or indecent language in public place must be construed in accordance with its purpose, although its letter would admit a narrower interpretation. Nelson v. City of Natchez, 197 Miss. 26, 19 So. 2d 747 (1944).

Defendant stating while standing in church door after Sunday school, "Well, the 'damn' thing is done broke up," held guilty of "profanity." Orf v. State, 147 Miss. 160, 113 So. 202 (1927).

Evidence held not to sustain charge of using profane language in public highway; criminal statutes not enlarged or extended beyond letter. Cleveland v. State, 129 Miss. 400, 92 So. 555 (1922).

Affidavit charging use of profane language in a public place must allege the particular public place. Files v. State, 96 Miss. 257, 50 So. 979 (1910).

Code 1906, § 1295 is not violated by the use of the words, "Go to hell, you low down devils." Stafford v. State, 91 Miss. 158, 44 So. 801 (1907).

An indictment for blasphemy, under Code 1892, § 1219, is demurrable if it fail to designate the particular public place where defendant profanely swore or cursed. State v. Shanks, 88 Miss. 410, 40 So. 1005 (1906).

Under this section [Code 1942, § 2291] it is not necessary to profanity that the name of the Deity be used. State v. Wiley, 76 Miss. 282, 24 So. 194, 71 Am. St. R. 531 (1898).

The indictment must set out the profane language used since it constitutes the gist of the offense. Walton v. State, 64 Miss. 207, 8 So. 171 (1886).

2. Public drunkenness.

A defendant's arrest for driving while intoxicated was legal, and therefore the subsequent intoxilyzer test was not tainted, even though the arresting officer did not observe the defendant driving, where the defendant admitted to the arresting officer that he had been driving an automobile which was involved in an accident, and the defendant was publicly intoxicated in the presence of the officer and others in violation of this section. Goforth v. City of Ridgeland, 603 So. 2d 323 (Miss. 1992).

Defendant's conviction of being drunk in the presence of two or more persons in a public place was against the weight of the evidence where a doctor, who had examined defendant, testified that the injuries sustained by the defendant prior to his arrest rendered him unable to walk straight and caused him to stagger, and it appeared that opinion of police officers as to defendant's drunkenness was based on defendant's staggering and the odor of alcohol upon him. Brown v. State, 231 Miss. 5, 94 So. 2d 608 (1957).

A highway is public place within meaning of this section [Code 1942, § 2291]. State, ex rel. Kelley, v. Yearwood, 204 Miss. 181, 37 So. 2d 174 (1948).

Fact that person arrested under this section [Code 1942, § 2291] for public drunkenness was later docketed and tried upon charge of driving while intoxicated does not change lawful nature of original lawful arrest and detention. State, ex rel. Kelley, v. Yearwood, 204 Miss. 181, 37 So. 2d 174 (1948).

Drunkenness on public highway is drunkenness in public place within statute. Thompson v. State, 153 Miss. 593, 121 So. 275 (1929).

Authority to arrest defendants for drunkenness in public place carried with it authority to search their persons and automobile in which they were riding. Thompson v. State, 153 Miss. 593, 121 So. 275 (1929).

One cannot defend a charge of resisting an officer seeking to arrest him because drunk in a public place, to which he had necessarily been taken on account of his own wrongdoing. Brown v. State, 81 Miss. 137, 32 So. 952 (1902).

ATTORNEY GENERAL OPINIONS

Double jeopardy does not necessarily prohibit charging a defendant with public drunkenness under this section, even if that defendant has been acquitted of DUI under Section 63-11-30. The two are separate and distinct criminal charges and contain different elements. Moffett, June 6, 1995, A.G. Op. #95-0277.

§ 97-29-49. Prostitution; report to department of human services for suspected child sexual abuse or neglect if minor involved; immunity from prosecution if trafficked person involved.

(1) A person commits the misdemeanor of prostitution if the person knowingly or intentionally performs, or offers or agrees to perform, sexual intercourse or sexual conduct for money or other property. "Sexual conduct" includes cunnilingus, fellatio, masturbation of another, anal intercourse or the causing of penetration to any extent and with any object or body part of the genital or anal opening of another.

(2) Any person violating the provisions of this section shall, upon conviction, be punished by a fine not exceeding Two Hundred Dollars ($200.00) or by confinement in the county jail for not more than six (6) months, or both.

(3) In addition to the mandatory reporting provisions contained in Section 97-5-51, any law enforcement officer who takes a minor under eighteen (18) years of age into custody for suspected prostitution shall immediately make a report to the Department of Human Services as required in Section 43-21-353 for suspected child sexual abuse or neglect, and the department shall commence an initial investigation into suspected child sexual abuse or neglect as required in Section 43-21-353.

(4) If it is determined that a person suspected of or charged with engaging in prostitution is engaging in those acts as a direct result of being a trafficked person, as defined by Section 97-3-54.4, that person shall be immune from prosecution for prostitution as a juvenile or adult and, if a minor, the provisions of Section 97-3-54.1(4) shall be applicable.

Amendment Notes — The 2013 amendment deleted former undesignated paragraph which read: "It shall be unlawful to engage in prostitution or to aid or abet prostitution or to procure or solicit for the purposes of prostitution, or to reside in, enter, or remain in any place, structure, or building, or to enter or remain in any vehicle or conveyance for the purpose of lewdness, assignation, or prostitution, or to keep or set up a house of ill-fame, brothel or bawdy house, or to receive any person for purposes of lewdness, assignation, or prostitution into any vehicle, conveyance, place, structure or building, or to permit any person to remain for the purpose of lewdness, assignation, or prostitution in any vehicle, conveyance, place, structure, or building, or to direct, take, or transport, or to offer or agree to take or transport, or aid or assist in transporting, any person to any vehicle, conveyance, place, structure, or building, or to any other person with knowledge or reasonable cause to know that the purpose of such directing, taking or transporting is prostitution, lewdness or assignation, or to lease or rent or contract to lease or rent any vehicle, conveyance, place, structure, or building, or part thereof, knowing or with good reason to know that it is intended to be used for any of the purposes herein prohibited, or to aid, abet, or participate in the doing of any of the acts herein prohibited" and added (1) through (4).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.

Omission of words, "from the evidence," in instruction that all that was required was that jury believe that defendant was guilty beyond a reasonable doubt of having leased or rented a room knowing, or with good reason to know, that it was intended to be used for prostitution, constitutes reversible error, where such defect was not cured by any other instruction. Imbraguglio v. State, 196 Miss. 515, 18 So. 2d 294 (1944).

§ 97-29-51. Prostitution; misdemeanor procuring services of prostitute; felony promoting prostitution; penalties.

(1)(a) A person commits the misdemeanor of procuring the services of a prostitute if the person knowingly or intentionally pays, or offers or agrees to pay, money or other property to another person for having engaged in, or on the understanding that the other person will engage in, sexual intercourse or sexual conduct with the person or with any other person. "Sexual conduct" includes cunnilingus, fellatio, masturbation of another, anal intercourse or the causing of penetration to any extent and with any object or body part of the genital or anal opening of another.

(b) Upon conviction under this subsection, a person shall be punished by a fine not exceeding Two Hundred Dollars ($200.00) or by confinement in the county jail for not more than six (6) months, or both. A second or subsequent violation of this section shall be a felony, punishable by a fine not exceeding One Thousand Dollars ($1,000.00), or by imprisonment in the custody of the Department of Corrections for not more than two (2) years, or both.

(c) However, in all cases, if the person whose services are procured in violation of this subsection (1) is a minor under eighteen (18) years of age, the person convicted shall be guilty of a felony and shall, upon conviction, be punished by imprisonment for not less than five (5) years, nor more than thirty (30) years, or by a fine of not less than Fifty Thousand Dollars

($50,000.00) nor more than Five Hundred Thousand Dollars ($500,000.00), or both.

(d) Consent of a minor is not a defense to prosecution under this subsection (1).

(2)(a) A person commits the felony of promoting prostitution if the person:

(i) Knowingly or intentionally entices, compels, causes, induces, persuades, or encourages by promise, threat, violence, or by scheme or device, another person to become a prostitute;

(ii) Knowingly or intentionally solicits or offers or agrees to solicit, or receives or gives, or agrees to receive or give any money or thing of value for soliciting, or attempting to solicit, another person for the purpose of prostitution;

(iii) Knowingly induces, persuades, or encourages a person to come into or leave this state for the purpose of prostitution;

(iv) Having control over the use of a place or vehicle, knowingly or intentionally permits another person to use the place or vehicle for prostitution;

(v) Accepts, receives, levies or appropriates money or other property of value from a prostitute, without lawful consideration, with knowledge or reasonable cause to know it was earned, in whole or in part, from prostitution; or

(vi) Conducts, directs, takes, or transports, or offers or agrees to take or transport, or aids or assists in transporting, any person to any vehicle, conveyance, place, structure, or building, or to any other person with knowledge or reasonable cause to know that the purpose of such directing, taking or transporting is prostitution.

(b) Upon conviction, a person shall be punished by a fine not exceeding Five Thousand Dollars ($5,000.00) or by imprisonment in the custody of the Department of Corrections for not more than ten (10) years, or both. A second or subsequent violation shall be punished by a fine not exceeding Twenty Thousand Dollars ($20,000.00) or by imprisonment in the custody of the Department of Corrections for up to twenty (20) years, or both.

(c) However, in all cases, if the person whose services are promoted in violation of this subsection (2) is a minor under eighteen (18) years of age, the person convicted shall be guilty of a felony and shall, upon conviction, be punished by imprisonment for not less than five (5) years, nor more than thirty (30) years, or by a fine of not less than Fifty Thousand Dollars ($50,000.00) nor more than Five Hundred Thousand Dollars ($500,000.00), or both. There is no requirement that the defendant have actual knowledge of the age of the person and consent of a minor is not a defense to prosecution under this section.

(3) If it is determined that a person suspected of or charged with promoting prostitution is a trafficked person, as defined by Section 97-3-54.4, that fact shall be considered a mitigating factor in any prosecution of that person for prostitution, and the person shall be referred to appropriate resources for assistance. If it is determined that a person suspected of or charged with promoting prostitution is a minor under eighteen (18) years of age who meets the definition of a trafficked person as defined in Section 97-3-54.4, the minor is immune from prosecution for promoting prostitution as a juvenile or adult and provisions of Section 97-3-54.1(4) shall be applicable.

(4) Any partnership, association, corporation or other entity violating any provision of subsection (2) against the promotion of prostitution shall, upon conviction, be punished by a fine not exceeding Fifty Thousand Dollars ($50,000.00). If the person whose services are promoted is under eighteen (18) years of age, the partnership, association, corporation or other legal entity convicted shall be punished by a fine not exceeding One Million Dollars ($1,000,000.00). There is no requirement that the defendant have knowledge of the age of the person. Consent of a minor is not a defense to prosecution under this section.

(5) Investigation and prosecution of a person, partnership, association, corporation or other entity under this section shall not preclude investigation or prosecution against that person, partnership, association, corporation or other entity for a violation of other applicable criminal laws, including, but not limited to, the Mississippi Human Trafficking Act, Section 97-3-54 et seq.

Joint Legislative Committee Note — Pursuant to Section 1-1-109, the Joint Legislative Committee on Compilation, Revision and Publication of Legislation corrected an error at the end of (5) by substituting “Mississippi Human Trafficking Act, Section 97-3-54 et seq.” for “Mississippi Protection from Human Trafficking Act, Sections 97-3-54 et seq.” The Joint Committee ratified the correction at its August 1, 2013, meeting.

Amendment Notes — The 2013 amendment deleted the former undesignated paragraph which read: “It shall further be unlawful to procure a female inmate for a house of prostitution, or to cause, induce, persuade, or encourage by promise, threat, violence, or by scheme or device, a female to become a prostitute or to remain an inmate of a house of prostitution, or to induce, persuade, or encourage a female to come into or leave this state for the purpose of prostitution, or to become an inmate in a house of prostitution, or to receive or give, or agree to receive or give any money or thing of value for procuring, or attempting to procure any female to become a prostitute or an inmate in a house of prostitution, or to knowingly accept, receive, levy or appropriate any money or other thing of value without consideration from a prostitute or from the proceeds of any woman engaged in prostitution”; and added present (1) through (5).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.
2. Jurisdiction and venue.
3. Indictment.
4. Evidence.
5. —Corroborating evidence.

1. In general.

Although consent, either actual or implied, of a female to the act of intercourse is an essential element of the crime of seduction, if the victim ultimately assents or yields to the act of intercourse, the fact that she resisted the advances of her seducer for a time does not preclude the perpetration of criminal seduction.

Aldridge v. State, 232 Miss. 368, 99 So. 2d 456 (1958).

One guilty under this section [Code 1942, § 2374] may not exempt himself from prosecution by an offer to marry the woman. Williams v. State, 92 Miss. 70, 45 So. 146, 15 Am. Ann. Cas. 1026 (1908).

Under this section [Code 1942, § 2374], the previous chaste character of the woman is an essential element of the crime. Fooshee v. State, 82 Miss. 509, 34 So. 148 (1903).

Actual chastity and not mere reputation for chastity is required. Carroll v. State, 74 Miss. 688, 22 So. 295, 60 Am. St. R. 539 (1897).

2. Jurisdiction and venue.

Where the promise of marriage occurred in Forrest County and the act of intercourse occurred in Jones County, since both of these acts constituted essential elements of the offense of seduction, the jurisdiction thereof was governed by Code 1942, § 2429; and it being proper to begin prosecution in either county, the circuit court of Forrest County had jurisdiction. Aldridge v. State, 232 Miss. 368, 99 So. 2d 456 (1958).

Where the promise of marriage occurred in Forrest County and the act of intercourse occurred in Jones County, since both of these acts constituted essential elements of the offense of seduction, venue could be properly laid in Forrest County without contravening Mississippi Constitution § 26. Aldridge v. State, 232 Miss. 368, 99 So. 2d 456 (1958).

3. Indictment.

It is not necessary under this section [Code 1942, § 2374] that the indictment should aver that the woman is a single woman, this being a matter of defense though it is better practice to so aver. Norton v. State, 72 Miss. 128, 16 So. 264 (1894), later proceeding, 18 So. 916 (Miss. 1894); Hoff v. State, 83 Miss. 488, 35 So. 950 (1904).

An indictment under this section [Code 1942, § 2374] though failing to allege that the promise was made to the woman is sufficient after verdict, if not demurred to under Code 1892, § 1341 (Code 1906, § 1413), where the indictment does charge that the defendant had knowledge of the woman by virtue of a false or feigned promise of marriage. Norton v. State, 72 Miss. 128, 16 So. 264 (1894), later proceeding, 18 So. 916 (Miss. 1894).

It is not necessary to allege that the man was unmarried, though if married and the woman knew it, no conviction can be had under this statute [Code 1942, § 2374]. Norton v. State, 72 Miss. 128, 16 So. 264 (1894), later proceeding, 18 So. 916 (Miss. 1894).

Though not in terms so provided, it is essential to aver and prove under this section [Code 1942, § 2374] that the woman was of chaste character at the time of the intercourse. Norton v. State, 72 Miss. 128, 16 So. 264 (1894), later proceeding, 18 So. 916 (Miss. 1894).

There need not be positive averment and proof that the woman was unmarried; it is sufficient that the indictment and evidence reasonably show this. Ferguson v. State, 71 Miss. 805, 15 So. 66, 42 Am. St. R. 492 (1894).

4. Evidence.

Since evidence that after the commission of the crime of seduction the accused and the prosecutrix had lived together as man and wife for a number of months informed the jury that subsequent acts of intercourse had been committed, without regard to the question of admissibility of such evidence, the trial court did not commit reversible error in refusing to permit the accused to interrogate the prosecutrix relative thereto as bearing upon the question of the prosecutrix's previous chaste character. Aldridge v. State, 232 Miss. 368, 99 So. 2d 456 (1958).

Testimony of the prosecutrix that she was afraid of the accused and that she had yielded to his demands under the inducement of his promise to marry her, was sufficient to create an issue for the determination of the jury on the question of her consent, and to warrant the jury in finding that while she was reluctant to do so, she yielded to the act of intercourse under the accused's promise to marry her, even though the prosecutrix had testified on cross-examination that the accused had forced himself on her and that she did not consent to the act of intercourse. Aldridge v. State, 232 Miss. 368, 99 So. 2d 456 (1958).

While it is immaterial to the crime of seduction under this section [Code 1942, § 2374] whether the accused be married or unmarried, the fact that he is single is proper to be shown in evidence as illustrating the motive of the woman. Ferguson v. State, 71 Miss. 805, 15 So. 66, 42 Am. St. R. 492 (1894).

5. —Corroborating evidence.

Although Mississippi has required by statute that the complaining witness' testimony be corroborated in prosecutions for certain sexual offenses (e.g. Code 1942, §§ 2359, 2374), the state courts have specifically held that the requirement for corroboration is confined to those offenses wherein the statute expressly so provides, and no such corroboration is required in prosecution of defendant for disturbing the peace of the complaining witness, on allegations that the defendant had touched complainant's private parts. Henry v. Williams, 299 F. Supp. 36 (N.D. Miss. 1969).

The requirement that testimony of the outraged female be corroborated does not extend to prosecutions for an indecent assault on a female under 13. Pittman v. State, 236 Miss. 592, 111 So. 2d 415 (1959).

While it is necessary that the prosecutrix be corroborated as to the act of intercourse, and the burden was upon the state to prove this essential element, it was not necessary that this be done by direct evidence, but may be established by circumstantial evidence. Aldridge v. State, 232 Miss. 368, 99 So. 2d 456 (1958).

The fact that the accused and the prosecutrix spent the night together in a private room in a motel was a sufficient circumstance to be submitted to the jury for their determination as to whether the act of intercourse occurred, and to warrant the jury in finding that this was a sufficient corroborative circumstance to establish the fact of intercourse. Aldridge v. State, 232 Miss. 368, 99 So. 2d 456 (1958).

In seduction prosecution, testimony of prosecutrix as to her previous chaste character, the promise of marriage, and the act of seduction must be corroborated. Glover v. State, 117 Miss. 792, 78 So. 769 (1918).

Where there was no corroborating evidence, defendant was entitled to a peremptory instruction. Lewis v. State, 111 Miss. 833, 72 So. 241 (1916).

Letters alleged to have been written by defendant, identified only by the prosecutrix, cannot be regarded as corroborating the witness. Lewis v. State, 111 Miss. 833, 72 So. 241 (1916).

Evidence that defendant, with knowledge of her pregnancy, said that he would marry prosecutrix in a short time, was insufficient corroboration of prosecutrix. Long v. State, 100 Miss. 7, 56 So. 185 (1911).

To convict of seduction, seduced female must be corroborated as to her previous chaste character and the false or feigned promise of marriage. Carter v. State, 99 Miss. 206, 54 So. 805 (1911).

Although under this section [Code 1942, § 2374] the uncorroborated testimony of the woman is insufficient to convict, it is not necessary that she be corroborated in every fact essential to make out the crime; it is sufficient if she be corroborated as to the promise and the intercourse. Ferguson v. State, 71 Miss. 805, 15 So. 66, 42 Am. St. R. 492 (1894).

A person shall not keep a stallion or jack nearer than one hundred yards to a church, or in public view in an inclosure bordering on a public highway, or nearer thereto, than one hundred yards; nor shall any person stand such animals in open view of any public place, or negligently keep such animal or suffer it to run at large. Any such offender, upon conviction, shall be fined not less than twenty-five dollars, and shall be liable for all damages done by such animals so kept or running at large.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.

This section, which prohibits unnatural intercourse, is not unconstitutionally vague and overbroad. McDonald v. Department of Human Servs., 636 So. 2d 391 (Miss. 1994), reh'g denied.

Person who attempts to perform anal intercourse on another person but is prevented from doing so when other person flees may be convicted of attempted unnatural intercourse. Haymond v. State, 478 So. 2d 297 (Miss. 1985).

Where defendant's 19-year-old daughter testified at trial that she and defendant had engaged in acts of fellatio and cunnilingus, defendant was properly indicted under this section, and not § 97-3-95 et seq., which were enacted subsequent to the violation for which he was convicted, in that § 97-3-103 expressly provides that the sexual battery statutes do not repeal, modify or amend any other criminal statute. Contreras v. State, 445 So. 2d 543 (Miss. 1984).

This section is constitutional, notwithstanding defendant's contentions that it discriminated against persons engaged in unnatural sexual intercourse with female children and that the trial judge was given unconstitutionally wide discretion in the range of punishments he could impose. Davis v. State, 367 So. 2d 445 (Miss. 1979).

Statutory phrase "crime against nature" was not so vague as to violate the due process clause since long use of the phrase to characterize various offenses including sodomy, for which the defendant was indicted, gave fair warning of conduct proscribed. State v. Mays, 329 So. 2d 65 (Miss. 1976), cert. denied, 429 U.S. 864, 97 S. Ct. 170, 50 L. Ed. 2d 143 (1976).

A college newspaper run by students and operated with student funds could properly refuse to print an advertisement proffered by a primarily off campus and homosexual group, particularly in light of the statute [this section] proscribing unnatural intercourse, such statute not being unconstitutional, and in light of the fact that university officials had nothing to do with the rejection of the advertisement. Mississippi Gay Alliance v. Goudelock, 536 F.2d 1073 (5th Cir. 1976), reh'g denied, 541 F.2d 281 (5th Cir. 1976), cert. denied, 430 U.S. 982, 97 S. Ct. 1678, 52 L. Ed. 2d 377 (1977).

Indictment properly charged the offense of an attempt to commit the crime of sodomy. Taurasi v. State, 233 Miss. 330, 102 So. 2d 120 (1958).

In a prosecution for murder, an instruction to the jury that even if the deceased attempted to have unnatural intercourse with the defendant, but the danger of accomplishment of the crime by the deceased was over and at a time when such danger was not imminent or impending the defendant tied and gagged the deceased, and if the jury finds robbery, then the crime was murder, was proper in pre-sending defendant's theory of self-defense and the state's theory of felony murder. Burns v. State, 228 Miss. 254, 87 So. 2d 681 (1956).

Sodomy committed per os is punishable under this section. State v. Davis, 223 Miss. 862, 79 So. 2d 452 (1955).

Indictment charging accused with having unnatural carnal intercourse with a woman by sucking her private sexual organs with his mouth failed to show offense of sodomy, since penetration of the body is essential to the offense. State v. Hill, 179 Miss. 732, 176 So. 719 (1937).

§ 97-29-61. Voyeurism; trespass by “peeping Tom”; when victim is adult; when victim is child under sixteen.

(1) Any person who enters upon real property whether the original entry is legal or not, and thereafter pries or peeps through a window or other opening in a dwelling or other building structure for the lewd, licentious and indecent purpose of spying upon the occupants thereof, shall be guilty of a felonious trespass, and upon conviction shall be imprisoned in the custody of the Department of Corrections not more than five (5) years.

(2) When one or more occupants spied upon is a child under sixteen (16) years of age, a person who violates subsection (1) of this section shall be guilty of felonious trespass, and upon conviction shall be imprisoned in the custody of the Department of Corrections not more than ten (10) years.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.
2. Evidence.
3. Sentencing.

1. In general.

Evidence was sufficient for reasonable and fair-minded jurors to find defendant guilty of voyeurism where defendant was seen peeping into an apartment window and ran upon hearing someone approach; having run from a police officer, he was caught with his zipper down, and his car with the keys in it was found on the property. Ledford v. State, 874 So. 2d 995 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004), writ of certiorari denied by 882 So. 2d 772, 2004 Miss. LEXIS 1114 (Miss. 2004).

The fact that the accused is a “male person” is an essential or substantive element of the crime proscribed by this section [Code 1942 § 2412.5] which must be charged on the face of the indictment and proved at trial, and indictment failing to refer to or describe the accused as a male person was void. Burchfield v. State, 277 So. 2d 623 (Miss. 1973), but see Monk v. State, 532 So. 2d 592 (Miss. 1988).

The fact that this section [Code 1942, § 2412.5] applies only to persons of the male sex and is inapplicable to females is not, therefore, violative of the equal protection clause of the Fourteenth Amendment, for there exists rational justification for singling out males for punishment under Code 1942, § 2412.5 and the statute does not rest upon an invidious and patently arbitrary sex classification, but has a sound basis in the physical and psychological difference between men and women. Mississippi State Hwy. Comm’n v. Cook, 270 So. 2d 695 (Miss. 1972).

For evidence sufficient to support a conviction under this section [Code 1942, § 2412.5]. Thompson v. State, 206 So. 2d 829 (Miss. 1968).

On a trial under this section [Code 1942, § 2412.5], evidence of similar acts of peeping on the part of the defendant was admissible to show a common pattern of action. Riley v. State, 254 Miss. 86, 180 So. 2d 321 (1965).

This section [Code 1942, § 2412.5] is constitutional. Brown v. State, 244 Miss. 78, 140 So. 2d 565 (1962).

There was no error in an instruction which followed the law itself and told the jury that it could find defendant guilty if he, at the time and place testified to entered upon the property of another and peeped through the window of the dwelling house of a named person for the lewd, licentious and indecent purpose of spying upon the occupants thereof. Brown v. State, 244 Miss. 78, 140 So. 2d 565 (1962).

2. Evidence.

Court found a factual basis to establish the charges against an inmate for voyeurism under Miss. Code Ann. § 97-29-61 and touching a child for lustful purposes under Miss. Code Ann. § 97-5-23(1), given that (1) the inmate admitted the facts that surrounded the elements for both of the crimes, (2) the inmate’s daughter reported the same story to her grandmother and others, and (3) the daughter provided sufficient facts and detail to support the charges. Gaddy v. State, 21 So. 3d 677 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009), writ of certiorari denied by 559 U.S. 1078, 130 S. Ct. 2115, 176 L. Ed. 2d 741, 2010 U.S. LEXIS 3422, 78 U.S.L.W. 3611 (2010).

3. Sentencing.

Terms of an inmate’s sentences were within the statutory limits of Miss. Code Ann. §§ 97-29-61, 97-5-23(1) and thus the claim that the trial court erred in sentencing the inmate to maximum sentences was without merit. Gaddy v. State, 21 So. 3d 677 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009), writ of certiorari denied by 559 U.S. 1078, 130 S. Ct. 2115, 176 L. Ed. 2d 741, 2010 U.S. LEXIS 3422, 78 U.S.L.W. 3611 (2010).

§ 97-29-63. Photographing or filming another without permission where there is expectation of privacy; when victim is adult; when victim is child under sixteen.

(1) Any person who with lewd, licentious or indecent intent secretly photographs, films, videotapes, records or otherwise reproduces the image of another person without the permission of such person when such a person is located in a place where a person would intend to be in a state of undress and have a reasonable expectation of privacy, including, but not limited to, private dwellings or any facility, public or private, used as a restroom, bathroom, shower room, tanning booth, locker room, fitting room, dressing room or bedroom shall be guilty of a felony and upon conviction shall be punished by a fine of Five Thousand Dollars ($5,000.00) or by imprisonment of not more than five (5) years in the custody of the Department of Corrections, or both.

(2) Where the person who is secretly photographed, filmed, videotaped or otherwise reproduced is a child under sixteen (16) years of age, a person who violates subsection (1) of this section shall be guilty of a felony and upon conviction shall be punished by a fine of Five Thousand Dollars ($5,000.00) or by imprisonment of not more than ten (10) years in the custody of the Department of Corrections, or both.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. Rulings on evidence.

In defendant's trial for unlawfully filming another person, the tape that the victim found, State's Exhibit 8, was not given to defendant by the State, however, the victim's personal attorney had provided defendant with a copy of that tape, and it was similar but not identical to Exhibit 14 (the second tape provided by the State), thus, if there was a discovery violation, it was harmless. Moen v. State, 861 So. 2d 1066 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

ATTORNEY GENERAL OPINIONS

A violation of § 97-23-63[Repealed], which prohibits photographing or filming another without permission where there is an expectation of privacy, is not a "sex crime" for the purpose of determining eligibility for parole or the intensive supervision program. Johnson, June 14, 2002, A.G. Op. #02-0336.

§ 97-29-65. Strip clubs prohibited within one-fourth mile of church, school, kindergarten, or courthouse.

It shall be unlawful to locate within one-fourth ($\frac{1}{4}$) of one (1) mile of any church, school, kindergarten or courthouse any establishment where public displays of nudity are present. Any person found guilty of violating this section shall, upon conviction, be fined not more than Ten Thousand Dollars (\$10,000.00) or imprisoned for not more than one (1) year, or both.

For the purposes of this section the term “nudity” and “public display” shall have the same meanings as those terms are defined in Section 19-5-103.

§ 97-29-101. Distribution or wholesale distribution of obscene materials or performances; character and reputation as evidence; prosecutor's bond.

A person commits the offense of distributing obscene materials or obscene performances when he sells, rents, leases, advertises, publishes or exhibits to any person any obscene material or obscene performance of any description knowing the obscene nature thereof, or offers to do so, or possesses such material with the intent to do so. A person commits the offense of wholesale distributing obscene materials or obscene performances when he distributes for the purpose of resale any obscene material or obscene performance of any description knowing the obscene nature thereof, or offers to do so, or possesses such material with the intent to do so. The word “knowing” as used in this section means either actual or constructive knowledge of the obscene contents of the subject matter, and a person has constructive knowledge of the obscene contents if he has knowledge of facts which would put a reasonable and prudent person on notice as to the suspect nature of the material. The character and reputation of an individual charged with an offense under Sections 97-29-101 through 97-29-109 and, if a commercial dissemination of obscene material or an obscene performance is involved, the character and reputation of the business establishment involved, may be placed in evidence by the defendant on the question of intent to violate Sections 97-29-101 through 97-29-109.

Any person, other than a city attorney, county prosecuting attorney or district attorney, who shall sign an affidavit charging an offense prescribed by this section shall file a bond in the amount of five hundred dollars ($500.00) at the time such affidavit is lodged. Such bond shall be conditioned that the affidavit was not filed frivolously, maliciously or out of ill will.

II. UNDER FORMER § 97-29-33.

11. Validity.

This section's definition of "obscene, indecent, or immoral" was overbroad and violated the First Amendment to the United States Constitution according to the requirement set by the United States Supreme Court, and it could not be made constitutional by construing it and applying it or by reading into it the specificity and limitations required by the Supreme Court. ABC Interstate Theatres, Inc. v. State, 325 So. 2d 123 (Miss. 1976).

Decision stating that this section [Code 1942, § 2286] is not unconstitutional on its face or as applied would be vacated and remanded for reconsideration in light of recent U.S. Supreme Court decisions concerning obscenity. Hosey v. City of Jackson, 401 U.S. 987, 91 S. Ct. 1221, 28 L. Ed. 2d 525 (1971).

Decision stating that a criminal obscenity statute to be valid does not have to precisely describe the crime, and incorporate all of the judicial tests for proper determination as to the guilt, or innocence, of the offense, for such is not the office or function of the criminal statute which simply must impart sufficient notice or warning of the crime to accord the offender, as a reasonable person, an opportunity to avoid its commission would be vacated and remanded for reconsideration in light of recent U.S. Supreme Court decisions concerning obscenity. McGrew v. City of Jackson, 401 U.S. 987, 91 S. Ct. 1221, 28 L. Ed. 2d 525 (1971).

Decision stating that the absence of a requirement of scienter in this section [Code 1942, § 2286] is inapplicable to motion pictures would be vacated and remanded for reconsideration in light of recent U.S. Supreme Court decisions concerning obscenity. Hosey v. City of Jackson, 401 U.S. 987, 91 S. Ct. 1221, 28 L. Ed. 2d 525 (1971).

Decision stating that it is neither possible nor is it the function of a criminal statute to set out all the judicial tests for a proper determination of whether a violation of the statute has been committed; all that is required is that the statute give adequate notice and warning of what is prohibited in order that one may avoid such conduct, and this was done by Code 1942, § 2286 would be vacated and remanded for reconsideration in light of recent U.S. Supreme Court decisions concerning obscenity. Hosey v. City of Jackson, 401 U.S. 987, 91 S. Ct. 1221, 28 L. Ed. 2d 525 (1971).

Decision stating that in view of the standards requiring that the dominant theme of the material taken as a whole appeals to prurient interest, it is necessary that arresting officers view an allegedly obscene film in its entirety before the commission of this offense in their presence can be validly established, and the viewing of portions or isolated excerpts of the film is not sufficient would be vacated and remanded for reconsideration in light of recent U.S. Supreme Court decisions concerning obscenity. Hosey v. City of Jackson, 401 U.S. 987, 91 S. Ct. 1221, 28 L. Ed. 2d 525 (1971).

Decision stating that the seizure of an allegedly obscene film as an incident to lawful arrests for a crime committed in the presence of the arresting officers (the public showing of such film) does not exceed constitutional bounds in the absence of a private judicial hearing on the question of obscenity would be vacated and remanded for reconsideration in light of recent U.S. Supreme Court decisions concerning obscenity. Hosey v. City of Jackson, 401 U.S. 987, 91 S. Ct. 1221, 28 L. Ed. 2d 525 (1971).

City of Jackson*, 401 U.S. 987, 91 S. Ct. 1221, 28 L. Ed. 2d 525 (1971).

Decision stating that motion picture film which is a dull and offensive presentation of the illicit love life of two unmarried females and an unmarried male which, by the application of contemporary community standards, has a dominant theme which, taken as a whole, appeals to the prurient interest in sex and is patently offensive because it affronts contemporary community standards relating to the representation of sexual matters, and is utterly without redeeming social value would be vacated and remanded for reconsideration in light of recent U.S. Supreme Court decisions concerning obscenity. *McGrew v. § 97-29-103. Definitions.

(1) Material or performance is obscene if:

(a) To the average person, applying contemporary community standards, taken as a whole, it appeals to the prurient interest, that is, a lustful, erotic, shameful, or morbid interest in nudity, sex or excretion; and

(b) The material taken as a whole lacks serious literary, artistic, political or scientific value; and

(c) The material depicts or describes in a patently offensive way, sexual conduct specifically defined in subparagraphs (i) through (v) below:

(i) Acts of sexual intercourse, heterosexual or homosexual, normal or perverted, actual or simulated;

(ii) Acts of masturbation;

(iii) Acts involving excretory functions or lewd exhibition of the genitals;

(iv) Acts of bestiality or the fondling of sex organs of animals; or

(v) Sexual acts of flagellation, torture or other violence indicating a sadomasochistic sexual relationship.

(2) Undeveloped photographs, molds, printing plates and the like shall be deemed obscene material, notwithstanding that processing or other acts may be required to make the obscenity patent or to distribute it.

(3) "Performance" means a play, motion picture, dance or other exhibition performed before an audience.

(4) "Patently offensive" means so offensive on its face as to affront current community standards of decency.

(5) "Wholesale distributes" means to distribute for the purpose of resale.

(6) "Material" means any book, magazine, newspaper, advertisement, pamphlet, poster, print, picture, figure, image, drawing, description, motion picture film, phonographic record, recording tape, video tape, or other tangible thing producing, reproducing or capable of producing or reproducing an image, picture, sound or sensation through sight, sound or touch, but it does not include an actual three-dimensional sexual device as defined in Section 97-29-105.

The words "all you ladies that smoke cigarettes throw your butts in here," painted on the hood of an automobile, left in a public place, are within the prohibition of the statute, notwithstanding that the statute deals primarily with obscene or indecent literature, the question whether such language, as it would be commonly understood or interpreted, was such as to offend the public sense of real decency as distinguished from mere prudery, being for the jury, and the fact that the language may have been employed in the manner of a jest does not, under such public circumstances, alter the case. *City of Pascagoula v. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.
2. Indictment.
3. Evidence.

1. In general.

Since the state at trial chose to proceed on the indictment charging the defendant with distilling wine in violation of this section, it could not argue for affirmance of his conviction on proof that he did not have a valid permit issued under the Native Wine Act. Martin v. State, 501 So. 2d 1124 (Miss. 1987).

Possession of homemade intoxicating wine through own fermentation for household purposes not prohibited. Stepp v. State, 132 Miss. 132, 95 So. 838 (1923).

Failure to interfere with one manufacturing intoxicants not an offense. Powers v. State, 124 Miss. 425, 86 So. 862 (1921).

One loaning another whisky with understanding that a similar amount was to be returned cannot be convicted under this section [Code 1942, § 2631]. Jones v. State, 108 Miss. 530, 66 So. 987 (1915).

2. Indictment.

An indictment charging the defendant with violation of this section was not defective for failure to allege that the wine he possessed was not for personal or domestic use, but the case was reversed on the grounds that the charge for which the defendant was indicted and tried had been superseded, with regard to muscadine wine, by the Native Wine Act (§§ 67-5-1 et seq.). Martin v. State, 501 So. 2d 1124 (Miss. 1987).

Indictment charging manufacture of spirituous, vinous, malted, fermented and intoxicating liquors is not duplicitous. State v. Schmitz, 128 Miss. 463, 91 So. 129 (1922).

3. Evidence.

In prosecution for manufacturing liquor, evidence that witness at other times had seen things indicating liquor had been manufactured held improperly admitted. Craft v. State, 155 Miss. 465, 124 So. 488 (1929).

Evidence held sufficient to sustain conviction for unlawful manufacture. Kidd v. State, 137 Miss. 419, 102 So. 68 (1924).

Evidence showing preparation for manufacturing did not support conviction for manufacture. Hughes v. State, 96 So. 516 (Miss. 1923).

Evidence held sufficient to sustain conviction of attempt to distill. Powell v. State, 128 Miss. 107, 90 So. 625 (1922).

§ 97-31-23. Manufacturing or distilling unlawful; possession of still.

It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to own or control or have in his or its possession any distillery commonly called a still or any integral part thereof. But it shall not be unlawful to own or have in possession a distillery or still in the following circumstances:

(a) Where the same is used exclusively for the distillation of rosin products;

(b) Where the same is used exclusively for the distillation of water;

(c) Where the same is kept and lawfully used in any laboratory;

(d) Where the same is in the possession of any officers of the law, to be disposed of according to law;

(e) Where the person or corporation can prove that the same is in his or its possession for the purpose of being delivered up to an officer of the law to be disposed of according to law;

(f) Where the same is used exclusively for the distillation of ethyl alcohol to be used solely for fuel purposes.

Any person guilty of violating this section shall be guilty of a felony and on conviction shall be confined in the state penitentiary not less than one (1) year, nor more than three (3) years for his first offense, and for his second offense he shall be confined in the state penitentiary not less than five (5), nor more than ten (10) years.

2. Indictment.
3. Evidence.
4. —Admissibility.
5. —Sufficiency.
6. Instructions.
7. Miscellaneous.

1. In general.

Offense of possessing a complete still and offense of possessing integral parts of still are separate offenses. Wilburn v. State, 204 Miss. 92, 37 So. 2d 12 (1948).

Proof must be strict and facts applied with utmost caution before common articles of ordinary domestic use can be brought within statute prohibiting possession of integral parts of still. Grice v. State, 167 Miss. 771, 150 So. 659 (1933).

Articles of common domestic use, such as milk can and lid and discarded automobile gas line pipe, must have been used for successful production of intoxicating liquor, or must be about to be so successfully used, before statute prohibiting possession of parts of still is applicable. Grice v. State, 167 Miss. 771, 150 So. 659 (1933).

2. Indictment.

Indictment under this section [Code 1942, § 2632] charging in a single count that defendant owned, controlled and knowingly possessed a still for use in the unlawful manufacture of intoxicating liquor, did not include the alternative charge of possession of an integral part. Black v. State, 199 Miss. 147, 24 So. 2d 117 (1945).

The alternative offense under this section [Code 1942, § 2632] in respect to the integral parts of a still should be charged in a separate count or in a separate indictment so as to inform defendant of the exact nature of the charge in the indictment preferred against him. Black v. State, 199 Miss. 147, 24 So. 2d 117 (1945).

Indictment charging unlawful possession of still held not demurrable because it did not show that still was a whisky still. Powe v. State, 176 Miss. 455, 169 So. 763 (1936).

Indictment charging that defendant "wilfully" had in his possession part of still held sufficient without using word "knowingly." Ousley v. State, 154 Miss. 451, 122 So. 731 (1929).

Indictment for possession of integral part of still in language of statute held sufficient. State v. Hinton, 139 Miss. 513, 104 So. 354 (1925).

Exceptions in act, making possession of still offense, held negative by indictment. Mitchell v. State, 139 Miss. 108, 103 So. 815 (1925).

Indictment for possession of still must negative exceptions. State v. Speaks, 132 Miss. 159, 96 So. 176 (1923); Dawsey v. State, 136 Miss. 18, 100 So. 526 (1924); State v. Clark, 145 Miss. 207, 110 So. 447 (1926).

3. Evidence.

The prohibited possession may be established by circumstantial evidence and inferences from evidence. Shaw v. State, 248 Miss. 823, 161 So. 2d 629 (1964).

4. —Admissibility.

Evidence of search of defendant's premises and finding parts of still was admissible notwithstanding affidavit and search warrant were lost where state made oral proof of that fact and of the substance of those documents before the trial judge. Jefferson v. State, 207 Miss. 576, 42 So. 2d 772 (1949).

Evidence that parts of still were found by police officers while searching defendant's premises under warrant authorizing search for stolen beef is admissible in a prosecution under this section [Code 1942, § 2632]. Jefferson v. State, 207 Miss. 576, 42 So. 2d 772 (1949).

Evidence of finding of homemade whiskey on defendant's premises was competent in a prosecution for unlawful possession of an integral part of a still, since his possession of the distilled homemade whiskey at the same time he possessed a part of a distillery had a bearing upon whether he was engaged in that business by the use of a distillery. Crafton v. State, 200 Miss. 10, 26 So. 2d 347 (1946).

Evidence obtained under valid search warrant was admissible in prosecution for possessing integral parts of a distillery, where parts of the distillery were in possession of defendant at the place described in the search warrant. Williams v. State, 198 Miss. 848, 23 So. 2d 692 (1945).

Still seized may be offered in evidence on trial of persons arrested for possessing it. Kennedy v. State, 139 Miss. 579, 104 So. 449 (1925).

Witness having knowledge of use of stills may testify as to use of particular still, to negative lawful use. State v. Hinton, 139 Miss. 513, 104 So. 354 (1925).

5. —Sufficiency.

Possession jointly with another may be the basis of a conviction. Shaw v. State, 248 Miss. 823, 161 So. 2d 629 (1964).

Testimony showing without question that accused possessed a complete distillery is sufficient to sustain a conviction under this section [Code 1942, § 2632] of offense of having in possession integral parts of a still. Wilburn v. State, 204 Miss. 92, 37 So. 2d 12 (1948).

The finding of moonshine whiskey and a part of a still, known as a "worm", on defendant's premises, and indications of recent removal of the rest of the still, held sufficient to convict defendant of unlawful possession of an integral part of a still. Crafton v. State, 200 Miss. 10, 26 So. 2d 347 (1946).

Evidence that officers found wagon loaded with several mash and cooking barrels and cooking utensils, but that the coil was missing which was an absolutely essential part of a complete still, was insufficient to sustain conviction for unlawful possession of a still under this section [Code 1942, § 2632]. Black v. State, 199 Miss. 147, 24 So. 2d 117 (1945).

Conviction for unlawful possession of distillery held proper, where proof was clear and convincing beyond a reasonable doubt and was entirely undisputed, and nothing suggested lawful use of distillery or its possession for any other purpose than distilling of whisky. McLemore v. State, 178 Miss. 525, 172 So. 139 (1937).

Evidence that defendant was seen standing with one hand on still which was not on his land or close thereto held insufficient to sustain conviction for owning or possessing still or an integral part thereof. Ray v. State, 175 Miss. 623, 168 So. 617 (1936).

Evidence held insufficient to sustain conviction for possession of integral parts of still. Pickle v. State, 151 Miss. 549, 118 So. 625 (1928).

Evidence held to sustain conviction for unlawful possession of still. Reynolds v. State, 136 Miss. 329, 101 So. 485 (1924); Traxler v. State, 244 Miss. 403, 142 So. 2d 14 (1962).

6. Instructions.

Where indictment charged that defendant wilfully, unlawfully, and feloniously had a still in his possession, omission of word "wilfully" in instruction defining offense was not fatal defect, in view of evidence conclusively showing that possession of still was wilful, unlawful, and felonious. McLemore v. State, 178 Miss. 525, 172 So. 139 (1937).

7. Miscellaneous.

Where there was not a free, voluntary and intelligent plea of guilty and no intelligent, understanding, and competent waiver of counsel on the part of a defendant convicted of possession of a whisky still, his motion for permission to withdraw his plea of guilty should be granted. Plummer v. State, 252 Miss. 45, 172 So. 2d 547 (1965).

In prosecution for unlawful possession of still, affirmative defense of duress held not established in absence of proof of impending danger, present, imminent, and impending at time accused participated in crime of possessing still. Powe v. State, 176 Miss. 455, 169 So. 763 (1936).

Although evidence was insufficient to support conviction for owning or possessing a still or an integral part thereof, case would be remanded where defendant had not requested peremptory instruction at close of evidence. Ray v. State, 175 Miss. 623, 168 So. 617 (1936).

Law providing that it should become effective from and after passage was in effect when approved by Governor. Moree v. State, 130 Miss. 341, 94 So. 226 (1922).

(a) By a fine of not less than one hundred dollars, nor more than five hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail not less than one week nor more than three months, or both, for the first conviction under this section.

II. UNDER FORMER LAW.

24. Advertising of liquors prohibited.

I. UNDER CURRENT LAW.

1. In general.

The fact that in certain counties of the state local officials have openly refused to enforce the laws prohibiting the sale and possession of intoxicating liquor is not evidence of purposeful or intentional discrimination against a defendant charged with unlawful possession of liquor in a county where officers have made a determined and largely successful effort to enforce such laws, and for that reason such a defendant cannot assert that he has been denied equal protection and due process under the Fourteenth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution. State v. Wood, 187 So. 2d 820 (Miss. 1966).

There is no repugnancy between statutes imposing a tax upon the illegal sale of intoxicating beverages and a statute prohibiting the possession thereof. State v. Wood, 187 So. 2d 820 (Miss. 1966).

Where property misappropriated by dishonest employees consisted of a quantity of intoxicating liquors belonging to their employer engaged in an illegal business, the employer cannot recover for his loss under a blanket fidelity bond. Smith v. Maryland Cas. Co., 252 Miss. 81, 172 So. 2d 574 (1965).

Despite the fact that the issuer of a blanket fidelity bond contracted that it would not defend any claim on the ground that the insured employer was engaged in an illegal business, no recovery was permitted for the misappropriation by dishonest employees of a quantity of intoxicating liquors, the possession of which was statutorily illegal. Smith v. Maryland Cas. Co., 252 Miss. 81, 172 So. 2d 574 (1965).

Where it is impossible to determine, because of the confused state of the record, whether the defendant, charged with possession of intoxicating liquors, was convicted on the first or the second charge against him in a mayor's court or an ex officio justice court, the conviction must be reversed and the case remanded.

Suggs v. State, 250 Miss. 730, 168 So. 2d 514 (1964).

In view of the enactment of Code 1942, § 10112 the State of Mississippi does not have any sharply defined public policy affecting or relating to the practice of businesses entertaining or ingratiating themselves with their customers by serving or donating to them intoxicating liquors on which the state and its subdivisions have collected full tribute, and the deduction of the cost of such entertainment and donations by a taxpayer on his federal income tax returns is allowed. Stacy v. United States, 231 F. Supp. 304 (S.D. Miss. 1963).

This section [Code 1942, § 2613] does not make it illegal to drink intoxicants, hence consumer of liquor is not in pari delicto with seller, so as to preclude recovery for fall on dangerous steps in leaving premises. Fournier v. United States, 220 F. Supp. 752 (S.D. Miss. 1963).

Chapter relating to wine and beer repealed statute making it unlawful to sell beer. Hays v. State, 219 Miss. 808, 69 So. 2d 845 (1954).

Where a statute making it unlawful to sell beer was repealed by statute which authorized sale within the state and permitted counties to prohibit such sales, and where a majority of qualified electors in county determined that the sale of beer should not be permitted within the county, such a sale of beer thereafter was prohibited and punishable as violation of chapter relating to wine and beer. Hays v. State, 219 Miss. 808, 69 So. 2d 845 (1954).

In prosecution for unlawful possession of intoxicating liquors where defendant failed to file motion for continuance in a proper written form as prescribed by this section [Code 1942, § 2613], this was sufficient justification for the circuit court to refuse to grant the requested continuance. Smith v. State, 219 Miss. 741, 69 So. 2d 837 (1954).

The use of strong methods by collector to collect from delinquent taxpayers penalties on sale of intoxicating liquor, is not discrimination against such delinquents where such force is not necessary to secure payment by others. Bishop v. Bailey, 209 Miss. 892, 48 So. 2d 588 (1950).

Exceptions to this section [Code 1942, § 2613] are contained in Code 1942, §§ 2634, 2635 and 2636, prescribing how licensed retail druggists may sell under certain conditions pure alcohol for medicinal purposes; grain alcohol to chemists and bacteriologists engaged in scientific work; and wine to be used for sacramental purposes. Gilbert v. State, 198 Miss. 175, 21 So. 2d 914, 169 A.L.R. 164 (1945).

Code 1906, § 1746, as amended, and Code 1906, § 1797, create separate and distinct offenses, and proof of possession with intent to sell, without more, is not sufficient to support a conviction under the former act, as to "keep for sale" means to have on hand habitually. Collins v. State, 107 Miss. 619, 65 So. 645 (1914).

Also within 5 miles of state university. Wilburn v. State, 101 Miss. 392, 58 So. 7 (1912).

Enactment of state-wide prohibition law impliedly repeals local laws, among others that forbidding sale of liquor within 5 miles of the courthouse of a named county. Hughes v. State, 97 Miss. 528, 52 So. 631 (1910).

But a statute prohibiting sale of liquor within 5 miles of state university does not prevent conviction under local option law. Borroum v. State, 94 Miss. 88, 47 So. 480 (1908).

2. Validity.

This section [Code 1942, § 2613] does not violate the constitution. Dossett v. State, 211 Miss. 650, 52 So. 2d 490 (1951).

This section [Code 1942, § 2613] does not violate § 32, Constitution 1890, though liquor be possessed by one solely for his own use and consumption. Stepp v. State, 202 Miss. 725, 32 So. 2d 447 (1947), error overruled, 202 Miss. 731, 33 So. 2d 307 (1948).

3. Purpose.

The primary intent of the legislature in the enactment of statutes taxing the illegal sale of intoxicating liquor was to impose a penalty and a tax upon those persons deliberately violating the state's prohibition laws. State v. Wood, 187 So. 2d 820 (Miss. 1966).

This statute [Code 1942, § 2613] was enacted in aid of, and to make more effective, the law as against sales and giving away of intoxicating liquor. Stepp v. State, 202 Miss. 725, 32 So. 2d 447 (1947), error overruled, 202 Miss. 731, 33 So. 2d 307 (1948).

This section [Code 1942, § 2613] forbids sale of enumerated liquors without reference to whether or not they intoxicate, because they are known to be of an intoxicating character, and also any other drinks which will cause intoxication if taken to excess. Fuller v. City of Jackson, 97 Miss. 237, 52 So. 873 (1910).

4. Intent; belief.

Intent of possessor is immaterial. Lowe v. City of Jackson, 181 Miss. 296, 179 So. 568 (1938).

An intention to sell falls short of a violation of the statute. J. Livelar & Co. v. State, 98 Miss. 330, 53 So. 681 (1910).

Except in the case of pharmaceutical preparations, the law punishes selling intoxicants regardless of seller's intent. Bacot v. State, 94 Miss. 225, 48 So. 228, 136 Am. St. R. 574 (1909).

A seller is not protected by his ignorance of the fact that the liquor sold is intoxicating or his belief to the contrary. King v. State, 66 Miss. 502, 6 So. 188 (1889).

5. Sale, what amounts to.

One purchasing whisky with money of another is guilty of unlawful sale. Walters v. State, 127 Miss. 324, 90 So. 76 (1921).

One who loaned another whisky with the understanding that a similar amount was to be returned did not violate Laws 1908, ch. 113. Jones v. State, 108 Miss. 530, 66 So. 987 (1915).

One purchasing whisky for third person is liable. Brantley v. State, 107 Miss. 466, 65 So. 512 (1914).

Boardinghouse keeper serving beer or wine to boarders as part of dinner is guilty of selling liquor. Skermetta v. State, 107 Miss. 429, 65 So. 502 (1914).

One contributing to pool to buy whisky and helping consume it is guilty of selling liquor. Horton v. State, 105 Miss. 333, 62 So. 360 (1913).

Accused who ordered a keg of beer which was paid for and to be drunk by a number of persons, including himself, was not guilty of an unlawful sale. Dantzler v. State, 104 Miss. 233, 61 So. 305 (1913).

One may be convicted of illegal sale in this state although only delivery occurred here. Anglin v. State, 96 Miss. 215, 50 So.

492 (1909), error overruled, 96 Miss. 221, 50 So. 728 (1909).

Where accused wrote his name on a blank piece of paper and delivered it to persons who carried it to the express agent and gave it to him with $3.50 and received 4 quarts of whisky from the agent, this constitutes a sale although no words passed between any of the parties. Bennett v. State, 87 Miss. 803, 40 So. 554 (1906).

Delivery of liquor to purchaser of ticket entitling him to a quantity thereof constitutes a sale although the money was paid by purchaser when he received the ticket. Harper v. State, 85 Miss. 338, 37 So. 956 (1905).

A sale of personal property is ordinarily completed by its delivery to the purchaser. Delivery to a carrier for shipment, in the usual course of trade, is prima facie a delivery to the consignee. Pearson v. State, 66 Miss. 510, 6 So. 243 (1889).

6. Possession.

Since a person who is intoxicated may or may not have had unlawful possession of liquor, guilt of the unlawful possession does not necessarily follow from the mere fact of voluntary intoxication. Hutson v. Hutson, 239 Miss. 413, 123 So. 2d 550 (1960).

That one was in illegal possession of the liquor prior to drinking it does not preclude him from seeking relief against one who obtained a deed from him for no consideration while he was so intoxicated as not to know what he was doing. Hutson v. Hutson, 239 Miss. 413, 123 So. 2d 550 (1960).

One cannot be convicted of unlawful possession of liquor found on his premises where it is equally probable that some other person had possession and control. Hill v. State, 234 Miss. 64, 105 So. 2d 478 (1958).

Responsible possession of intoxicating liquor must be shown by the state to justify a conviction of one accused of possession of intoxicating liquor. Shumpert v. State, 229 Miss. 730, 91 So. 2d 745 (1957).

A presumption of possession of whisky when found on householder's premises does not apply where the accused lived in five-room house with two other men as tenants and also other men slept at the house and had access to the house, and where the officers found half gallon of whisky in the yard. Foster v. State, 49 So. 2d 258 (Miss. 1950).

Where evidence disclosed that officers, under proper warrant, searched defendant's place of business, followed a well used path therefrom, which divided into two forks, and uncovered liquor at end of each path, and that path served as access to no objective other than liquor, issue of whether defendant was guilty of possessing liquor was properly submitted to the jury. Chamblee v. State, 44 So. 2d 415 (Miss. 1950).

Unlawful possession by the owner of a public place of business is not shown where the whiskey is found in an unlocked cabinet frequently used by all employees of the establishment. Sellers v. City of Picayune, 202 Miss. 741, 32 So. 2d 450 (1947).

The rebuttable presumption that liquor found on premises of which a person is in possession and control is in that person's possession is warranted where whiskey is found at three different places near such person's place of business and from which places the person was seen coming to his place of business shortly before a search warrant was obtained. Ratcliff v. State, 199 Miss. 866, 26 So. 2d 69 (1946).

The presumption that liquor found on premises on which a person is in possession and control is in that person's possession is fully rebutted where it is undisputed that bottles of whiskey being broken when officers arrived had been brought by another less than a half hour before the arrival of the officers and that it belonged to such other person. Ratcliff v. State, 199 Miss. 866, 26 So. 2d 69 (1946).

Intoxicating liquor in bottles found in the pocket of a jacket of defendant's daughter on defendant's premises established the possession of defendant. Quick v. State, 192 Miss. 789, 7 So. 2d 887 (1942), cert. denied, 317 U.S. 630, 63 S. Ct. 51, 87 L. Ed. 509 (1942).

Where intoxicating liquor is found on the premises of which the defendant is in possession and control, a rebuttable presumption of fact arises that it was in his possession. Williamson v. State, 191 Miss. 643, 4 So. 2d 220 (1941); Quick v. State, 192 Miss. 789, 7 So. 2d 887 (1942), cert. denied, 317 U.S. 630, 63 S. Ct. 51, 87 L. Ed. 509 (1942); Shumpert v. State, 229 Miss. 730, 91 So. 2d 745 (1957).

Intent of possessor is immaterial. Lowe v. City of Jackson, 181 Miss. 296, 179 So. 568 (1938).

Wife's taking of jug of whisky brought in by another for her husband, and throwing it out and breaking jug held not unlawful "possession" within statute. Garland v. State, 165 Miss. 136, 146 So. 637 (1933).

The joint possession of husband and wife constitutes a prima facie case against the husband and not the wife. Wylie v. State, 151 Miss. 897, 119 So. 825 (1929).

On sufficiency of proof of possessing. Schillings v. State, 151 Miss. 361, 118 So. 137 (1928).

That liquor belonged to drunken person whom accused was helping home held no defense to prosecution for possession thereof. Adair v. State, 148 Miss. 240, 114 So. 345 (1927).

Mere visitor at home, knowing nothing of still therein, may not be convicted of having possession thereof. Brewer v. State, 142 Miss. 100, 107 So. 376 (1926).

Defendant's confession, without proof of corpus delicti, not sufficient to sustain conviction of having possession of liquor. Morton v. State, 136 Miss. 284, 101 So. 379 (1924).

7. Alcoholic content.

Where one is charged with the possession of "intoxicating liquors, to wit, whiskey, wine and beer", it is not necessary to prove that the alcoholic content of the wine and beer was such as to bring them within the description of intoxicating liquors. Warbington v. State, 234 Miss. 743, 107 So. 2d 578 (1958).

In prosecution for unlawful possession of intoxicating liquor for possessing malt liquor or beer, the affidavit must allege and the proof must show an alcoholic content in excess of 4 per cent by weight. Hall v. State, 199 Miss. 560, 24 So. 2d 780 (1946).

Mere fact that the malt liquor or beer may be intoxicating does not of necessity show that the alcoholic content exceeded 4 per cent by weight. Hall v. State, 199 Miss. 560, 24 So. 2d 780 (1946).

This section [Code 1942, § 2613] does not embrace a beverage which contains only .18% of alcohol by volume and .13% by weight. Fuller v. City of Jackson, 97 Miss. 237, 52 So. 873 (1910).

Malt ale which contains 2.71% alcohol by volume and 2.12% by weight is an intoxicant. Fuller v. City of Jackson, 97 Miss. 237, 52 So. 873 (1910).

8. Jamaica ginger; lemon extract.

Where affidavit charged violation of general statute, defendant, admitting sale of lemon extract, could not be convicted of possessing liquor, though another statute required permit for sale of such extract. McSwain v. State, 158 Miss. 643, 130 So. 696 (1930).

Defendant's admission of possessing lemon extract and sale thereof without license held insufficient to sustain conviction for possessing intoxicating liquors. McSwain v. State, 158 Miss. 643, 130 So. 696 (1930).

Sale of Jamaica ginger held for beverage purchases; buyers, detectives, asking for it for that purpose. Brown v. State, 142 Miss. 104, 107 So. 381 (1926).

Possession and sale of proprietary remedies or patent medicines with alcoholic percentage indicated thereon not unlawful, although producing intoxication if drunk to excess; tincture of ginger or Jamaica ginger, prepared in accordance with United States pharmacopoeia are not intoxicating liquors per se. Young v. State, 137 Miss. 188, 102 So. 161, 36 A.L.R. 717 (1924).

Mere possession of tincture of ginger or Jamaica ginger not unlawful, although sale as beverage unlawful. Young v. State, 137 Miss. 188, 102 So. 161, 36 A.L.R. 717 (1924).

Jamaica ginger is "spirituous" or "vinous liquor" within act imposing penalties for sale. Payne v. State, 125 Miss. 896, 88 So. 483 (1921).

A sale of tincture of ginger prepared in good faith as a medicine by a duly licensed druggist, does not violate this section. The test is whether the tincture, or essence, was sold in good faith as a medicine, or whether it was a sham preparation, really an intoxicating liquor and sold as a beverage. Bertrand v. State, 73 Miss. 51, 18 So. 545 (1895).

9. Indictment or information, generally.

To warrant conviction under this statute [Code 1942, § 2613], the indictment must refer to the statute. Barnes v. State, 239 Miss. 756, 125 So. 2d 293 (1960).

Circuit court had jurisdiction to try accused for unlawful possession of intoxicating liquor where no affidavit was filed with the justice of the peace so charging accused although justice placed accused under appearance bond to await action of grand jury. Humble Oil & Ref. Co. v. State, 40 So. 2d 307 (Miss. 1949).

It is unnecessary to charge in affidavit charging possession of whisky that the possession was unlawful, since possession of whisky is unlawful under all circumstances. Gilbert v. State, 198 Miss. 175, 21 So. 2d 914, 169 A.L.R. 164 (1945).

In charging offense of unlawful possession of wine, it is not necessary to negative exception of homemade wine. Forbert v. State, 179 Miss. 66, 174 So. 248 (1937).

An indictment under Laws 1908, ch. 115, may be amended by the insertion of the word "liquors" after "intoxicating." Keys v. State, 110 Miss. 433, 70 So. 457 (1916).

Neither justice nor circuit court could try accused on charge of illegally retailing liquor without proper affidavit. Hall v. State, 91 Miss. 216, 44 So. 826 (1907).

Upon appeal, it is error to permit the state to amend the affidavit charging a sale to certain persons by striking out their names and to prove a sale to a different person. Though the names were unnecessary in the first place, they became a part of the description of the offense. Hudson v. State, 73 Miss. 784, 19 So. 965 (1896).

Members of the grand jury are not competent to testify that the sale sought to be proved is or is not the one inquired of by it on which the indictment was found. Newman v. State, 72 Miss. 124, 16 So. 232 (1894).

It is unnecessary to aver the name of the buyer. Riley v. State, 43 Miss. 397 (1871); Lea v. State, 64 Miss. 201, 1 So. 51 (1886).

It is unnecessary to aver partnership in the indictment. Gathings v. State, 44 Miss. 343 (1870).

10. —Sufficiency.

Where an affidavit charged the defendant did wilfully and unlawfully sell one-half pint of liquor and it was amended to charge defendant with unlawful sale of intoxicating liquor, the affidavit sufficiently indicated the offense intended to be charged and the defect was on the face of it, it was amendable and the failure to demur to it constituted a waiver of defect. Perciful v. Holley, 217 Miss. 203, 63 So. 2d 817 (1953).

Where an indictment charged only that the accused did unlawfully sell intoxicating liquor, namely home brew, and there was no allegation that the sale of beer had been outlawed by an election in the county, the indictment was insufficient because no crime was stated. Riley v. State, 212 Miss. 746, 55 So. 2d 447 (1951).

Affidavit was not bad for failure to charge crime in that it did not aver that defendant unlawfully had in his possession intoxicating liquor commonly known as brandy, since it is unlawful under any and all circumstances to have brandy in possession except as to officers of the law who have seized it, and it is unnecessary to charge that defendant had it unlawfully. Mason v. State, 32 So. 2d 140 (Miss. 1947).

Affidavit charging sale of one pint of "intoxicating liquor" held sufficient. Pope v. State, 108 Miss. 706, 67 So. 177 (1915).

Affidavit need only allege facts which constitute the crime. City of Gulfport v. Martin, 96 Miss. 131, 50 So. 502 (1909).

Conviction reversed for failure of record to show affidavit charging crime in justice or circuit court. Woodson v. State, 94 Miss. 370, 48 So. 295 (1909).

It is not necessary for affidavit to allege sale was unlawful. Irby v. State, 91 Miss. 542, 44 So. 801 (1907).

An indictment is good which charges generally a sale of liquor without authority of law. West v. State, 70 Miss. 598, 12 So. 903 (1893).

An indictment is not bad as being double because it charges in the same count the unlawful sale of "vinous and spirituous liquors." Lea v. State, 64 Miss. 201, 1 So. 51 (1886).

11. —After previous conviction.

A proper indictment charging a defendant with a third offense of sale of intoxicating liquors must make specific and express reference to the statute or statutes under which he was previously convicted; otherwise it will not support a judgment of conviction. McGowan v. State, 269 So. 2d 645 (Miss. 1972).

Where an indictment which was in three parts, the first of which alleged unlawful possession of intoxicating liquors in March 1937 and a conviction thereof and the second part set out such conviction and alleged that in June 1941 the defendant was again convicted of a similar offense, and the third part alleged that after the two prior convictions, he did, in December 1946 have possession, as aforesaid, that indictment does not properly charge a second or third offense as such. White v. State, 214 Miss. 235, 58 So. 2d 510 (1952).

Where indictment attempting to charge defendant with felonious commission of the act constituting a third offense was void in its entirety for failure to charge his conviction of a first offense as a first offense, and his conviction of a second offense as a second offense, all under the same statute, trial court erred in failing to sustain demurrer thereto and in permitting amendment of indictment so as to charge a first offense; and no effect could be given such indictment under Code 1942, § 2523, authorizing a conviction for the commission of some other offense, the commission of which is necessarily included in the offense with which the defendant is charged in the indictment, since it neither charged a third offense nor any constituent offense. Ainsworth v. State, 206 Miss. 559, 40 So. 2d 298 (1949).

Affidavit is void and judgment of conviction of second offense of possession of intoxicating liquors is invalid when affidavit does not specifically refer to this section, since statute requires that the second and third convictions must be "under this section [Code 1942, § 2613]." Riley v. State, 204 Miss. 562, 37 So. 2d 768 (1948).

Indictment charging that defendant unlawfully possessed intoxicating liquor for the second time in violation of paragraph (b) of this section [Code 1942, § 2613], having once been convicted for possession of intoxicating liquor on a designated date in the circuit court of a specified county, was not invalid for failure to charge specifically that the first prosecution was had under this section [Code 1942, § 2613]. McGowan v. State, 200 Miss. 270, 25 So. 2d 131 (1946), error overruled, 200 Miss. 281, 26 So. 2d 70 (1946).

An indictment under paragraph (c) of this section [Code 1942, § 2613] charging possession of intoxicating liquor after having previously twice been convicted for the same offense, must specifically refer to this section [Code 1942, § 2613]. Rogers v. State, 198 Miss. 495, 22 So. 2d 550 (1945).

An indictment under paragraph (c) of this section, charging possession of intoxicating liquor after having been previously twice convicted for the same offense, was insufficient for failure to allege that the second conviction was on a charge of having intoxicating liquor in defendant's possession after a former conviction. Rogers v. State, 198 Miss. 495, 22 So. 2d 550 (1945).

Omissions in an indictment under paragraph (c) of this section charging possession of intoxicating liquor after having been previously twice convicted for the same offense, of specific reference to this section and of an allegation that defendant's second conviction was on a charge of having intoxicating liquor in his possession after a former conviction, go to the very essence of the offense charged, so that such omissions were not waived by defendant's failure to demur to the indictment. Rogers v. State, 198 Miss. 495, 22 So. 2d 550 (1945).

12. —Separateness of search warrant affidavit.

Recitals in both affidavit for search warrant and the search warrant itself that the possession of whisky by the accused was "in violation of law," were equivalent to recital that such possession was "unlawful." Gilbert v. State, 198 Miss. 175, 21 So. 2d 914, 169 A.L.R. 164 (1945).

Trial and conviction of accused for unlawful possession of intoxicating liquor in the circuit court on an indictment was valid, and fact that the intoxicating liquor in question was found and seized in accused's home under a search warrant issued to the sheriff by a justice of the peace did not place jurisdiction in the justice's court to the exclusion of the circuit court where no affidavit was made before the justice of the peace charging her with unlawful possession of intoxicants, since a charging affidavit is essential to jurisdiction in the justice court. Conner v. State, 196 Miss. 335, 17 So. 2d 527 (1944).

The affidavit for a search warrant is not, and cannot be, a substitute for the affidavit charging the offense of unlawful possession of intoxicating liquor so as to give a justice court jurisdiction of the offense. Conner v. State, 196 Miss. 335, 17 So. 2d 527 (1944).

13. —Where general prohibition laws suspended.

An indictment which charges an unlawful sale of intoxicating liquor in violation of the general prohibition laws fails to charge an indictable offense where the act occurred in a county where those laws had been suspended by an election held under the local option alcoholic beverage control law. Wortham v. State, 219 So. 2d 923 (Miss. 1969).

In counties where the general prohibition laws have been suspended through legalization of the sale of alcoholic liquors by an election held under the local option alcoholic beverage control law, in order to charge an unlawful sale the indictment or affidavit must charge that the local option law is in effect in that county, and sufficient facts to show a violation of one of the provisions of the local option law. Wortham v. State, 219 So. 2d 923 (Miss. 1969).

In a county in which the general prohibition laws had been suspended, it was error to permit the amendment of an indictment charging a violation of those laws so as to charge the commission of an offense prohibited under the local option beverage control law. Wortham v. State, 219 So. 2d 923 (Miss. 1969).

14. Variance between allegations and proof.

An indictment charging a sale of intoxicating liquors is not sustained by proof of a barter. Elkins v. State, 229 Miss. 323, 90 So. 2d 662 (1956).

Where an indictment charged that the accused unlawfully sold intoxicating liquors, while the state proved that the accused gave the prosecuting witness a gallon of liquor and $1.50 in cash in exchange for a car battery, there was a fatal variance between the indictment and the proof, and the accused was entitled to a peremptory instruction. Elkins v. State, 229 Miss. 323, 90 So. 2d 662 (1956).

Indictment charging sale of intoxicating liquor, not supported by proof of barter. Woodall v. State, 129 Miss. 854, 93 So. 366 (1922).

Conviction for unlawful sale of intoxicating liquor, not set aside because of variance between proof of time for sale and date alleged in indictment. Peebles v. State, 105 Miss. 834, 63 So. 271 (1913).

Fact that under indictment based on this section [Code 1942, § 2613], proof showed also a violation of another section, did not constitute variance and accused was properly sentenced under this section [Code 1942, § 2613]. Taylor v. State, 101 Miss. 857, 58 So. 593 (1912).

One charged with selling "vinous and spirituous liquors" could not be convicted by proof of the sale of beer, which as commonly prepared is a malt liquor. Smith v. State, 94 Miss. 255, 49 So. 113 (1909).

Though it is unnecessary to charge in an indictment to whom the liquor was sold, yet if a sale to two named persons is averred, this becomes essential as descriptive of the offense, and it is a fatal variance if the evidence is of a sale to one only. Tyler v. State, 69 Miss. 395, 11 So. 25 (1891); Dick v. State, 30 Miss. 631 (1856).

15. Evidence.

16. —Admissibility.

In a prosecution for possession of intoxicating liquor, the trial court erred in overruling defendant's motion to suppress evidence seized during a search of his home, based on his contention that the warrant was defective, where the underlying facts and circumstances portion of the affidavit, stating that a deputy had called the affiant and said that after several observations of defendant over a period of time "he was apparently selling whiskey," was insufficient as a matter of law. Washington v. State, 382 So. 2d 1086 (Miss. 1980).

Where the record revealed that all persons who wanted to do business with the defendant were impliedly invited to approach the house in which he was staying along a circular driveway to a point where the defendant met law enforcement officers to ascertain what he could do for them, and where the officers purchased and received from the defendant a bottle of intoxicating liquor but made no search of the person or premises of the defendant, the testimony of the officers was not inadmissible on the ground that the purchase was an illegal search or that their testimony was in effect a method of requiring the defendant to testify against himself. Lyons v. State, 195 So. 2d 91 (Miss. 1967).

Where, after prosecuting witness had obtained whisky from the defendant, he and two other witnesses were arrested while driving along the highway and the car searched without a warrant, and the whisky was found by the arresting officer, since the car searched was not the accused's, and he did not have it in his possession, nor was he anywhere near the place where the search was made, he could not complain, upon trial of the charge of unlawfully selling intoxicating liquor, that the whisky introduced in evidence was obtained by an illegal search. Elkins v. State, 229 Miss. 323, 90 So. 2d 662 (1956).

Evidence that defendant's place of business had a reputation of being place where intoxicating liquors were sold was properly excluded in a prosecution for unlawful possession of beer. State v. Sisk, 209 Miss. 174, 46 So. 2d 191 (1950).

Permitting two police officers to testify that defendant was under the influence of intoxicating liquor at the time they searched his car for intoxicating liquor, was reversible error. Patton v. State, 209 Miss. 138, 46 So. 2d 90 (1950).

Where sheriff hid himself near spot which he believed was being used to keep whisky in but without suspecting that defendant rather than someone else would appear, and shortly thereafter defendant appeared with something in his hand and sheriff after arresting him discovered whisky in the bottle, arrest was unlawful and evidence inadmissible. Thomas v. State, 208 Miss. 264, 44 So. 2d 403 (1950).

Where defendant failed to object to search warrant when offered in evidence but did request preemptory instruction, and, after trial, made motion in arrest of judgment, the supreme court will treat the question as though defendant made timely objection. Jenkins v. State, 207 Miss. 281, 42 So. 2d 198 (1949).

Evidence obtained by second search, under original search warrant, is inadmissible against defendant when second search is made after original search had been completed and evidence obtained, and after defendant was arrested, plead guilty and paid fine. Riley v. State, 204 Miss. 562, 37 So. 2d 768 (1948).

Passenger in truck being driven by its owner in compliance with contract of sale of cow and delivery thereof to defendant's home, could not object to the search of the truck cab by deputy sheriff without a search warrant, or to the admission of evidence secured thereby in prosecution for unlawful possession of intoxicating liquor. Smith v. State, 198 Miss. 788, 24 So. 2d 85 (1945).

Where arrest of defendant and the search of her person by a sheriff without a warrant therefor was illegal, evidence that he found on her person a key which fitted the lock of the door to a room in which whisky was found was inadmissible in prosecution for unlawful possession of whisky, notwithstanding that the room was in a house owned by the defendant for which the sheriff had a proper search warrant, where the defendant lived elsewhere. Lewis v. State, 198 Miss. 767, 23 So. 2d 401 (1945).

The admission of evidence in a prosecution for unlawful possession of whiskey that defendant's servant had on former occasions sold whiskey for defendant was not error since the testimony was relevant to show the fact and purpose of the employment and that the possession of the whiskey involved was with defendant's knowledge and consent, and under his direction. Grantham v. State, 190 Miss. 887, 2 So. 2d 150 (1941).

Evidence that accused believed wine in his possession did not contain over four per cent of alcohol, held inadmissible. Lowe v. City of Jackson, 181 Miss. 296, 179 So. 568 (1938).

Evidence obtained in search by city marshal and private citizen without warrant held properly excluded, although made outside of limits of municipality, where record shows marshal was acting under color of office. State v. Messer, 142 Miss. 882, 108 So. 145 (1926).

Where state's witness obtained whisky from defendant only once and was uncertain about the date, defendant should have been permitted to introduce testimony that sale occurred in another county. Mosley v. State, 107 Miss. 158, 65 So. 124 (1914).

Error to admit evidence that defendant had reputation of being a blind tiger keeper, where she had not placed her reputation in issue. Smothers v. City of Jackson, 92 Miss. 327, 45 So. 982 (1908).

Under indictment charging giving away liquor in town of D, evidence of giving away liquor outside of the town was inadmissible. Stanley v. State, 89 Miss. 63, 42 So. 284 (1906).

Under indictment charging giving away liquor, books of express company were inadmissible to show shipments of liquor from defendant's employer to parties in the town. Stanley v. State, 89 Miss. 63, 42 So. 284 (1906).

On prosecution for unlawful selling, evidence that defendant kept liquors of other parties on storage subject to their withdrawal at pleasure is immaterial and there was no error in its rejection. Donald v. State, 41 So. 4 (Miss. 1906).

17. —Sufficiency.

Where the state's witnesses testified that in response to their inquiry, the defendant stated that he had a named brand of whisky, giving the price thereof, and that defendant then disappeared but returned shortly with two half pints of whisky, which he delivered to the witnesses, receiving payment therefor, the evidence not only established a sale but was sufficient to warrant the jury in concluding that the defendant was in possession of whisky, and that the two half pints which he delivered to the state's witnesses were taken from the stored whisky which was in his control or charge; the state not being required to prove that defendant's control or possession of the whisky was exclusive, or that the defendant owned the whisky. McLean v. State, 230 Miss. 894, 94 So. 2d 231 (1957).

Where intoxicating liquor was found in an automobile, belonging to the accused's wife, parked upon the property of another, evidence, including undisputed testimony of the property owner that he could not estimate the number of times that he had seen the accused go to and from the parked automobile, and further that when he asked the accused to do something about the car being upon his premises the accused had replied that if the witness got caught the whisky would belong to the accused, was sufficient to sustain the conviction for the unlawful possession of intoxicating liquor. Bolin v. State, 229 Miss. 798, 91 So. 2d 847 (1957).

Where it was equally probable that a man found in a drunken condition upon the premises supposedly owned by the accused was in responsible possession of the intoxicating liquor found therein, and it was not shown when the accused had been on the premises in relation to the time the intoxicating liquor was found, the state failed to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the accused was guilty of responsible possession of the liquor. Shumpert v. State, 229 Miss. 730, 91 So. 2d 745 (1957).

Evidence indicating a beaten path from turkey pen going by place where whisky was found, and finding of ten empty kegs in toolhouse on defendant's property, was too remote and inadequate to submit to jury. Revette v. State, 209 Miss. 860, 48 So. 2d 511 (1950).

The prosecution for unlawful possession of intoxicating liquors, the so-called "beaten path doctrine" should be confined in its application to route which terminates at or near contraband, coupled with a limited or no access to premises by others, and to other relevant circumstances which might justify jury in finding possession. Revette v. State, 209 Miss. 860, 48 So. 2d 511 (1950).

Evidence that no intoxicating liquor was found in the room where defendant was seated and absence of evidence by the state that defendant exercised any kind of possession or control over the liquor found, warranted reversal of conviction of unlawful possession of intoxicating liquor, since mere presence in the place was insufficient to establish guilt. Baylis v. State, 209 Miss. 335, 46 So. 2d 796 (1950).

Testimony that defendant was first seen lying down about 6 or 8 feet from the still, there being no direct testimony of actual participation in the operation of the still, was insufficient upon which to form the basis of a charge of unlawful control and possession. Ratcliff v. State, 32 So. 2d 151 (Miss. 1947).

Evidence that officers found in defendant's home one jar of apple juice and a jar containing about a half gallon of "home-brew" was insufficient to sustain conviction of unlawful possession of intoxicating liquor under this section [Code 1942, § 2613], where there was no competent evidence as to the ingredients of the latter liquid or that it was intoxicating. Turner v. State, 198 Miss. 839, 24 So. 2d 84 (1945).

Mere testimony by one witness that he smelled the "home-brew" was insufficient to constitute an affirmative statement that it was intoxicating liquor. Turner v. State, 198 Miss. 839, 24 So. 2d 84 (1945).

However, if the officers had testified that the "home-brew" was whisky or some other beverage commonly known to be intoxicating, the state would not have been required to prove either its alcoholic content or that it would intoxicate if drunk to excess. Turner v. State, 198 Miss. 839, 24 So. 2d 84 (1945).

Evidence was insufficient to sustain conviction of unlawful possession of whisky found in a room to which defendant had no access even though defendant occupied one of the other rooms of the house, where there was no evidence that defendant had any connection with the whisky. Lewis v. State, 198 Miss. 767, 23 So. 2d 401 (1945).

Testimony as to defendant's statement at the time the enforcement officer made the search of defendant's premises for intoxicating liquors, to the effect that the defendant asked the officer to give him a little time, that he had about a thousand dollars worth of liquor and he could dispose of it within an hour, and requesting that the officer allow another person to plead guilty to the offense, if believed to be true, was sufficient to show that the liquor belonged to him and was in his possession and constituted ample evidence to support conviction. Smith v. State, 187 Miss. 96, 192 So. 436 (1939).

Evidence, in a prosecution under this section, that the defendant admitted that the liquor was his, and stated that "if I ever get out of this I never intend to sell any more liquor," in response to the question of the sheriff, coupled with the circumstance that the whiskey was found on defendant's premises constituted sufficient reason for submitting the case to the jury. Ross v. State, 185 Miss. 378, 189 So. 526 (1939).

Conviction based on mere suspicion, reversed. Benoit v. City of Bay St. Louis, 103 Miss. 218, 60 So. 137 (1912).

Conviction for sale of intoxicating liquors, held sustained by proof of sale of both alcoholic and malt liquors without proof that they are intoxicating. Edwards v. City of Gulfport, 95 Miss. 148, 49 So. 620 (1909).

There need not be proof of payment, a sale on credit is within the statute. Riley v. State, 43 Miss. 397 (1871).

Where the indictment charges the prisoner with selling rum, whisky, brandy and gin, proof that he sold any one of them in violation of law is sufficient. Murphy v. State, 28 Miss. 637 (1855).

18. Instructions.

In a prosecution for the sale of intoxicating liquors, since defendant's admission, upon cross-examination, that on the day prior to the date of the alleged offense he had been convicted of possessing liquor went to his credibility as a witness, and the loss or impairment of credibility affected both defendant's character and reputation, the trial court committed reversible error in refusing to instruct that the jury was required to believe that the defendant made the particular sale of liquor, and was not warranted in convicting him for the sale merely because of his former conviction of possessing liquor and the probable attendant character and reputation arising therefrom. Hassell v. State, 229 Miss. 824, 92 So. 2d 194 (1957).

Instruction in a prosecution under this section [Code 1942, § 2613] that jury should find defendant guilty if they found that defendant was guilty "as charged in the indictment", constituted reversible error because the jurors themselves were referred to, and required to interpret the affidavit, instead of being informed by the court as to the elements of the crime involved in the law violation charged. Elis v. State, 203 Miss. 330, 33 So. 2d 837 (1948).

State's main instruction that defendant must have "wilfully" possessed the liquor is not erroneous as failing to charge that he "knowingly" possessed the liquor, since "wilfully" includes "knowingly". Mason v. State, 32 So. 2d 140 (Miss. 1947).

Refusal of requested instruction submitting to jury the factual issue whether the malt liquor or beer contained over the maximum alcoholic content of 4 per cent by weight, constituted reversible error, where the testimony, although showing that the liquor or beer was intoxicating, did not disclose what percentage of alcohol by weight it contained. Hall v. State, 199 Miss. 560, 24 So. 2d 780 (1946).

While an instruction in prosecution for having intoxicating liquor in one's possession, which undertakes to define the offense, should use the word "unlawfully," in view of the fact that under some conditions certain intoxicating liquors may be lawfully possessed, omission to do so does not constitute reversible error where the intoxicating liquor in question is "whisky." Gilbert v. State, 198 Miss. 175, 21 So. 2d 914, 169 A.L.R. 164 (1945).

In prosecution for unlawful possession of wine, omission of word "unlawful" in instruction to jury held not prejudicial to defendant where bottle containing wine tended to show that it was not homemade and there was no evidence suggesting that it was homemade wine, since possession of wine containing more than fifteen per cent of alcohol by weight was necessarily unlawful. Forbert v. State, 179 Miss. 66, 174 So. 248 (1937).

Instruction in liquor prosecution that law took judicial notice that whiskey was intoxicating held not to constitute substantial error. Norris v. State, 143 Miss. 365, 108 So. 809 (1926).

Where defense was that the intoxicant was sold as a medicine, instruction was erroneous which ignored the defense and told the jury that if the defendant asked no question as to whether the purchaser wanted to use the bitters as a beverage or a medicine, he was guilty. Goode v. State, 87 Miss. 495, 40 So. 12 (1906).

It is not error to refuse an instruction submitting to the jury the question whether the homemade wine sold by the accused was or was not an intoxicant. Reyfelt v. State, 73 Miss. 415, 18 So. 925 (1895).

19. Repeating offense.

Where a docket showed that defendant had previously pleaded guilty to a charge of unlawful possession of beer, not shown to be of an alcoholic content greater than four per cent by weight, this did not disclose conviction of a crime and could not be used as the basis for sentencing the accused as a second offender of unlawful possession of intoxicating liquors. Brown v. State, 222 Miss. 863, 77 So. 2d 694 (1955).

This section [Code 1942, § 2613] does not impose the graduated penalties merely for successive or repeated offenses and unless the accused is charged as a subsequent offender, any number of offenses may be treated as first offenses. Miles v. State, 51 So. 2d 214 (Miss. 1951).

A second offense within the meaning of this section [Code 1942, § 2613] must have been committed after the conviction of the prior offense, and a third offense after the conviction of the second offense. Miles v. State, 51 So. 2d 214 (Miss. 1951).

Before there can be a conviction of second offense of unlawful possession of intoxicating liquor, it is absolutely necessary that former conviction or plea of guilty be proven by state, and this is best shown by introduction of judgment of conviction although judgment may show dismissal of other charges against defendant. Outlaw v. State, 208 Miss. 13, 43 So. 2d 661 (1949).

In prosecution for second offenses, as to unlawful possession of intoxicating liquors, it is proper to show first conviction by record of first conviction identified by justice of peace who succeeded one who tried defendant, as succeeding justice is custodian of record and proper witness to identify it and all docket entries made by his predecessor. Outlaw v. State, 208 Miss. 13, 43 So. 2d 661 (1949).

Affidavit is void and judgment of conviction of second offense of possession of intoxicating liquors is invalid when affidavit does not specifically refer to this section [Code 1942, § 2613], since statute requires that the second and third convictions must be "under this section [Code 1942, § 2613]." Riley v. State, 204 Miss. 562, 37 So. 2d 768 (1948).

The issue as to a prior conviction is not whether the accused was therein properly convicted, but whether as an affirmative matter he was finally convicted. Vincent v. State, 200 Miss. 423, 27 So. 2d 556 (1946).

Authentication by a justice of the peace in form substantially that provided by Code 1942, § 1725, is sufficient evidence of prior conviction if the authenticated record shows former charge, issuance of warrant, trial, plea of guilty, fine and payment of fine; it is not necessary to introduce a complete transcript as on appeal from the first conviction. Vincent v. State, 200 Miss. 423, 27 So. 2d 556 (1946).

Conviction as a second offender hereunder is not precluded by the two year statute of limitations by reason of the fact that the prior conviction charged occurred more than two years prior to the indictment therefor, since the limitation applies solely to prosecutions and does not operate to recast the status of a defendant as a prior offender. McGowan v. State, 200 Miss. 270, 25 So. 2d 131 (1946), error overruled, 200 Miss. 281, 26 So. 2d 70 (1946).

Conviction as a second offender under this statute may not be predicated upon a prior conviction under a city ordinance. Trivillion v. State, 195 Miss. 308, 15 So. 2d 285 (1943).

Conviction of defendant for an offense hereunder as a second offender could not stand, although the jury necessarily found the defendant guilty of the subsequent offense and therefore in any event punishable thereunder. Trivillion v. State, 195 Miss. 308, 15 So. 2d 285 (1943).

Notwithstanding the repeal of the former statute on this subject by § 2, Code 1930, with respect to the question of gradation of punishment for repeating offenders, such former statute must be considered by way of aid to a proper construction or interpretation of this section [Code 1942, § 2613] which took its place. Millwood v. State, 190 Miss. 750, 1 So. 2d 582 (1941), aff'd, 6 So. 2d 619 (Miss. 1942).

When the procedure seeks to hold the accused as a repeating offender, it must be charged in the affidavit or indictment and shown by the proof that previously to the commission of the offense then being prosecuted, the accused had been convicted of a distinct prior offense or offenses under the statute, as against the contention that this section [Code 1942, § 2613] now requires for a felony charge that there shall only have been two previous convictions, even though the three offenses may have been committed on the same day and before any conviction for either of them. Millwood v. State, 190 Miss. 750, 1 So. 2d 582 (1941), aff'd, 6 So. 2d 619 (Miss. 1942).

Where the prosecution sought to charge the defendant with a felony grounded upon a third offense hereunder, and the proof failed to show two distinct prior convictions before the offense for which he was then being prosecuted, the conviction would be reversed and remanded in its entirety rather than a reversal only as to the felony sentence and a remand for the proper sentence as a misdemeanor. Millwood v. State, 190 Miss. 750, 1 So. 2d 582 (1941), aff'd, 6 So. 2d 619 (Miss. 1942).

Evidence insufficient to show conviction of prior offenses under statute. Williams v. State, 125 Miss. 347, 87 So. 672 (1921).

Indictment properly set forth the two former convictions and records thereof were admissible. Robinson v. State, 109 Miss. 284, 68 So. 249 (1915).

First offense must have been under this statute to authorize conviction for second offense. Boroum v. State, 105 Miss. 887, 63 So. 297 (1913), error overruled, 105 Miss. 893, 63 So. 457 (1913).

20. Punishment.

Where the maximum permissible sentence is three months, a 90 day sentence which will run during February is improper. Warbington v. State, 234 Miss. 743, 107 So. 2d 578 (1958).

A defendant, represented by brother of the judge, who gave the defendant a maximum penalty on conviction of the unlawful sale of intoxicating liquor, had been denied a fair and impartial trial. Barnes v. State, 220 Miss. 248, 70 So. 2d 920 (1954).

Where defendant pleaded guilty to first offense of possession of intoxicating liquors, a misdemeanor, at a term of court which expired without imposition of sentence and the court thereafter sentenced defendant for confinement of two years on the mistaken belief that defendant was convicted as third offender, he was not entitled to a habeas corpus since the custody by the sheriff was proper to the extent that the defendant was made answerable to the court in further proceedings to impose sentence as for the misdemeanor. White v. State, 214 Miss. 235, 58 So. 2d 510 (1952).

Subdivision (b), in failing to fix a maximum fine, is incomplete and brings into effect Code 1942, § 2562, fixing a maximum fine of $500 for misdemeanors where no other statute prescribes penalty. Jenkins v. State, 207 Miss. 281, 42 So. 2d 198 (1949).

Where fine greater than that permitted by Code 1942, § 2562, providing for maximum penalties in misdemeanors was imposed for violation of subdivision (b) of this section [Code 1942, § 2613], supreme court, upon reversal, would remand cause to trial court for imposition of sentence. Jenkins v. State, 207 Miss. 281, 42 So. 2d 198 (1949).

A judgment imposing a fine of $500 and sentence of 120 days' imprisonment on conviction of unlawful possession of intoxicating liquors was improper, but, it being apparent that the trial court had intended to fix the maximum penalty but exceeded it by one month, the supreme court reduced the sentence to that authorized by the statute, leaving the fine standing and fixing the imprisonment at three months. Crosby v. State, 8 So. 2d 464 (Miss. 1942).

Under statute providing maximum imprisonment for possession of intoxicating liquor, "month" meant calendar month, in computing which, time must be reckoned by looking at calendar and not by counting days. Where beginning is not coincident with first day of calendar month, month is computed to day numerically corresponding thereto in following month less one, if following month has so many days, and if not to last day thereof. Langley v. State, 154 So. 544 (Miss. 1934).

Where bail bond required accused to surrender to sheriff within one week after judgment of affirmance by supreme court was certified to circuit court, and suggestions of error in affirmance were overruled June 5, accused's sentence of ninety days would not include month of February, and was not invalid as exceeding maximum of three calendar months. Langley v. State, 154 So. 544 (Miss. 1934).

Sentence imposing fine and jail term on conviction for selling liquor, in accordance with law later held unconstitutional, will be set aside. Thomas v. State, 150 Miss. 504, 117 So. 119 (1928).

Accused tried for first offense cannot be imprisoned for 6 months under Laws 1912, ch. 214. Gaston v. State, 107 Miss. 484, 65 So. 563 (1914).

Bond for good behavior may be required of one convicted third time of violation of liquor law. Caldwell v. State, 87 Miss. 420, 39 So. 896 (1906).

Fine of $200 and imprisonment for 3 months in county jail for violation of local option act, not excessive. Haynes v. State, 23 So. 182 (Miss. 1898).

21. Former acquittal or conviction.

Where the record in a criminal proceeding charging the defendant with the unlawful sale of intoxicating liquors showed a confusion of jurisdiction as to whether the trial magistrate acted as a police justice or as an ex officio justice of the peace, the conviction could not be sustained since because of such confusion the defendant would not be in a position to make a plea of former conviction or former acquittal against a further prosecution for violation either of the city ordinance or of the state laws. Wright v. City of Belzoni, 188 Miss. 334, 194 So. 919 (1940).

To avail of a former acquittal for unlawful retailing, the record must be introduced and the identity of the offense shown by evidence aliunde. Brown v. State, 72 Miss. 95, 16 So. 202 (1894).

22. Appeal.

Upon an appeal from a conviction of unlawful possession of intoxicating liquor, defendant's contention, made for the first time in the supreme court, that the circuit court had no jurisdiction on an appeal from a justice of the peace court because there was no certified copy of the proceedings had in the justice of the peace court could not avail defendant whose only objection made to the transcript at the time of the trial was that it was not under seal by the justice of the peace. Jones v. State, 230 Miss. 887, 94 So. 2d 234 (1957), overruled on other grounds, Mattox v. State, 243 Miss. 402, 137 So. 2d 920 (1962).

Where defendant convicted under this section [Code 1942, § 2613] perfects an appeal from a justice court to circuit court, and on return day, defaults, the circuit court may dismiss such appeal and order a writ of procedendo to the lower court without determining validity of the proceedings. Hegwood v. State, 208 Miss. 517, 44 So. 2d 850 (1950).

On appeal from conviction of unlawful possession of intoxicating liquor all supreme court can grant defendant is new trial where evidence against him was so lacking in weight that court is justified in reversing case and defendant failed to ask for directed verdict in lower court at end of all evidence for both sides but incorporation in motion for new trial ground that verdict of jury was against overwhelming weight of evidence. Faust v. State, 43 So. 2d 379 (Miss. 1949).

The right of a defendant, convicted of unlawfully possessing intoxicating liquor, to appeal upon the record, and to stand thereon, was not affected by his failure to give timely notice to the court reporter to transcribe the notes of the evidence, where the transcript of the testimony was nevertheless sent up with the record, and he filed the proper bond; and such omission, regardless of its effect upon the right of the appellant to avail of the reporter's transcript, did not justify a summary dismissal of his appeal. Redmond v. City of McComb, 192 Miss. 61, 4 So. 2d 494 (1941).

23. Miscellaneous.

Forfeiture applies when the prohibition law is violated using a vehicle for concealing or transporting of liquor in excess of 6 gallons; the burden is upon the State to prove that the forfeiture comes within the statute imposing liability by a preponderance of the evidence. Thus, an automobile which was used by the defendant to transport more than 6 gallons of intoxicating liquor into a "dry" county, was subject to forfeiture following the defendant's conviction for unlawful possession of intoxicating liquor in violation of this section. Mississippi State Tax Comm'n v. One (1) 1984 Black Mercury Grand Marquis, 568 So. 2d 707 (Miss. 1990).

In determining whether a juror is "disqualified" within the meaning of § 13-5-67 when he or she has withheld information or misrepresented material facts on voir dire examination, the test is whether the juror withheld substantial information or misrepresented material facts in the face of a clearly worded question which was relevant to the case at bar. Voir dire examination is often the most crucial crucible in forging the primary instrument of justice—the fair and impartial jury. When offering challenges for cause and challenges peremptory, parties and their lawyers must rely on the objective candor and responsiveness of prospective jurors, and nothing turns on who asks the question, so long as it was clearly worded. Following a jury's verdict, where a party shows that a juror withheld substantial information or misrepresented material facts, and where a full and complete response would have provided a valid basis for challenge for cause, the trial court must grant a new trial; prejudice is presumed. Where, as a matter of common experience, a full and correct response would have provided the basis for a peremptory challenge, not rising to the dignity of a challenge for cause, the courts have greater discretion, though a discretion that should always be exercised against the backdrop of the duty to secure to each party trial before a fair and impartial jury. Thus, in a prosecution for felony sale of alcoholic and intoxicating beverages, the circuit court's action in removing a juror was within the scope of its authority where the juror failed to respond on 3 separate occasions during voir dire to defense counsel's questions as to whether any prospective juror or any "relative or member of the juror's immediate family" had been involved in a criminal proceeding, and the juror's husband had 2 liquor-related criminal convictions. Myers v. State, 565 So. 2d 554 (Miss. 1990).

A person charged with unlawful possession of intoxicating liquor need not wait until he has actually been fined or committed to jail before he can exercise his rights to contest the constitutionality of discrimination which he alleges has been practiced against him, for the controlling question is whether he has sustained or is immediately in danger of sustaining some direct injury as the result of the enforcement of a statute he contends is illegal. State v. Wood, 187 So. 2d 820 (Miss. 1966).

In a prosecution for unlawful possession of intoxicating liquors, where defendant moved that the jury panel be quashed on the ground of prejudice and showed that one of the jurors was related to the sheriff and a state witness, the circuit court committed no error in disposing of the motion by dismissing the juror. Smith v. State, 219 Miss. 741, 69 So. 2d 837 (1954).

Overruling of motion to withdraw plea of guilty after conviction of unlawful possession of intoxicating liquor and to enter plea of not guilty was proper where motion did not allege defendant was innocent of the offense charged or any facts upon which innocence could be assumed or a legal defense predicated. Edwards v. State, 209 Miss. 325, 46 So. 2d 790 (1950).

One accused of unlawful possession of intoxicating liquor did not come within the protection of Code 1942, §§ 2634 to 2638 inclusive, on the theory that she was ill and that her attending physician had prescribed whisky as a stimulant, where physician issued no written prescription and it did not appear where or from whom accused obtained the whisky. Conner v. State, 196 Miss. 335, 17 So. 2d 527 (1944).

A provision of statute permitting sale of intoxicating liquor under certain conditions, to be effective only in county elections, to come under it, is not unconstitutional as delegation of legislative power as applied to prosecution under law allegedly repealed thereby. Stewart v. State, 179 Miss. 31, 174 So. 579 (1937).

Eighteenth amendment and Volstead Act do not supersede or abrogate existing state prohibition law. Meriwether v. State, 125 Miss. 435, 87 So. 411 (1921).

A proceeding for the seizure and destruction of intoxicating liquors unlawfully kept can be instituted only before a justice of the peace, who is required to destroy all liquor so seized for which no claim is made. Holberg Mercantile Co. v. State, 95 Miss. 21, 48 So. 622 (1909).

Sale of intoxicating liquor disguised under unusual and unfamiliar labels, not encouraged by courts. Bacot v. State, 94 Miss. 225, 48 So. 228, 136 Am. St. R. 574 (1909).

Every sale without license presumed in violation of law. Goode v. State, 87 Miss. 495, 40 So. 12 (1906).

II. UNDER FORMER LAW.

24. Advertising of liquors prohibited.

Former § 97-31-1 was an unconstitutional infringement of commercial free speech. Dunagin v. City of Oxford, 701 F.2d 335 (5th Cir. 1983), reh'g granted, 701 F.2d 336 (5th Cir. 1983), on reh'g, 718 F.2d 738 (5th Cir. 1983), cert. denied, 467 U.S. 1259, 104 S. Ct. 3553, 82 L. Ed. 2d 855 (1984).

Mississippi's intrastate liquor advertising ban, former §§ 97-31-1 et seq., violated Mississippi Media Businesses' First Amendment guaranty of freedom of speech, where the law did little to directly advance the government's interest of promoting health and safety for Mississippi residents, in light of uncontradicted evidence that Mississippi residents were literally inundated with liquor advertisements from sources originating outside the state. Lamar Outdoor Adv., Inc. v. Mississippi State Tax Comm'n, 701 F.2d 314 (5th Cir. 1983), on reh'g, 718 F.2d 738 (5th Cir. 1983), cert. denied, 467 U.S. 1259, 104 S. Ct. 3553, 82 L. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. Validity.
2. Construction and application.

1. Validity.

This section [Code 1942, § 2629] is constitutional. Sinclair v. State, 87 Miss. 330, 39 So. 522, 112 Am. St. R. 446 (1905).

2. Construction and application.

Accused who was not acting as agent for seller did not violate law by aiding purchaser. Harris v. State, 113 Miss. 457, 74 So. 323 (1917).

Fact that accused purchased liquor jointly with another did not alter nature of the offense. Simmons v. State, 102 Miss. 605, 59 So. 849 (1912).

Where accused is not charged with selling liquor, the place where sale was actually consummated is immaterial. Powell v. State, 96 Miss. 608, 51 So. 465 (1910).

Where accused wrote his name on blank piece of paper and delivered it to others who gave it to the express agent with $3.50 and received whisky from the agent, this constituted sale by accused though no word had passed between any of parties. Bennett v. State, 87 Miss. 803, 40 So. 554 (1906).

Indictment charging defendant with having assisted a third person to buy whisky in a place outside the state charged no offense. Sinclair v. State, 87 which subsequently was delivered to express company in Louisiana for transportation and delivery, violated the statute. Sinclair v. State, 87 Miss. 330, 39 So. 522, 112 Am. St. R. 446 (1905).

§ 97-31-31. Sale, possession, etc. of intoxicating beverages prohibited; connivance by owner, occupant, etc. of house or boat where liquor kept.

Every owner, lessee, sub-lessee, or occupant of any boat, house, outhouse, or other building, or tenement in which the liquors described in Section 97-31-27 are unlawfully kept, sold, bartered, or given away, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, if he shall connive therein, directly or indirectly, in any manner, or shall fail to give information thereof when he knows of the same, or of circumstances indicating the same, to some conservator of the peace. Proof of an unlawful keeping of such liquors, or of an unlawful sale, barter, or giving away thereof, in such building, shall constitute presumptive evidence of a violation of this section by any owner, lessee, sub-lessee, or occupant who has not given the information herein required. Any person convicted of violating the provisions of this section shall be fined not less than one hundred dollars, nor more than five hundred dollars, or be imprisoned in the county jail not less than one week nor more than three months, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.

The trial and acquittal of the owner on the charge of unlawfully selling, is not a bar to a subsequent prosecution for conniving at a sale, although both prosecutions be predicated on the same sale. Carroll v. State, 80 Miss. 349, 31 So. 742 (1902).

On the trial of a storekeeper for conniving at a sale by his clerk, it being shown that the clerk sold what appeared to be whisky, evidence that the clerk besought a witness to withhold the transaction from the grand jury is admissible, as it tends to show that the liquor sold was whisky, although the sale did not occur in the presence or hearing of defendant. Carroll v. State, 80 Miss. 349, 31 So. 742 (1902).

Proof of sale by another constitutes presumptive evidence that the owner connived thereat, if he failed to give information thereof to some conservator of the peace. Carroll v. State, 80 Miss. 349, 31 So. 742 (1902).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.

One accused of unlawful possession of intoxicating liquor did not come within the protection of Code 1942, §§ 2634 to 2638 inclusive, on the theory that she was ill and that her attending physician had prescribed whisky as a stimulant, where physician issued no written prescription and it did not appear where or from whom accused obtained the whisky. Conner v. State, 196 Miss. 335, 17 So. 2d 527 (1944).

A defendant's drugstore would not be abated as a common nuisance on the ground that alcohol was sold in violation of the statute prohibiting any licensed retail drugstore from selling "pure" alcohol for medicinal purposes except on written prescription of a physician, where the suit was brought by the district attorney for the recovery of the tax imposed for selling or giving away liquors unlawfully, and to obtain an injunction suppressing the business as a nuisance. State ex rel. v. Carr, 191 Miss. 659, 4 So. 2d 237 (1941).

In an action involving the alleged illegal sale of intoxicating liquors, the state chemist testified that the preparations sold by the defendant contained 82 per cent alcohol, whereas, "pure" alcohol would run from 98 per cent to 100 per cent. State ex rel. v. Carr, 191 Miss. 659, 4 So. 2d 237 (1941).

In towns having a population of 1,000 or more the physician's prescription shall not be filled at any drug store of which he is the proprietor, or in which he has a financial interest, either as partner, stockholder, or otherwise.

2. Proceedings before grand jury.
3. Applicability to civil actions.

1. In general.

In view of this section [Code 1942, § 2630], a defendant, who by his own testimony admitted the sale of intoxicating liquors in connection with his mercantile business could not be prosecuted for such offense, since by his confession of guilt he subjected himself to penalty and forfeiture of both his liquor business and his mercantile business. Malouf v. Gully, 187 Miss. 331, 192 So. 2 (1939).

The immunity granted by this section [Code 1942, § 2630] is to a witness introduced by, and compelled to testify at the instance of, the state. Ivey v. State, 153 Miss. 41, 120 So. 449 (1929).

Defendant testifying on trial of another on behalf of the latter was not entitled to immunity from prosecution. Ivey v. State, 153 Miss. 41, 120 So. 449 (1929).

Law granting immunity held inapplicable to information secured by county attorney while interrogating state witness preparatory to trial. Cook v. State, 150 Miss. 304, 116 So. 598 (1928).

Person testifying as to violation of prohibition laws is immune from prosecution for crime revealed by his testimony. State v. White, 140 Miss. 245, 105 So. 500 (1925).

Burden on defendant to establish facts constituting immunity. Hosey v. State, 136 Miss. 5, 100 So. 577 (1924).

Defendant testifying for jointly indicted defendant not entitled by reason thereof to immunity. Turnage v. State, 134 Miss. 431, 99 So. 9 (1924).

When accused entitled to immunity in prosecution for unlawful sale of intoxicating liquors stated. Maxie v. State, 133 Miss. 243, 97 So. 560 (1923).

Party compelled to incriminate himself in preliminary trial of another held immune in prosecution. Griffin v. State, 127 Miss. 315, 90 So. 81 (1921).

2. Proceedings before grand jury.

Where the defendant appeared before a grand jury which indicted him for the crime of unlawfully selling intoxicating liquor, defendant was not entitled to a claim of immunity inasmuch as he did not testify to anything pertaining to the sale of intoxicating liquor and he gave no testimony that would tend to incriminate him. Odum v. State, 213 Miss. 363, 56 So. 2d 887 (1952).

Defendant who, while charged with possessing liquor, was called before grand jury, and testified concerning subject of prosecution, held entitled to immunity. Evans v. State, 157 Miss. 645, 128 So. 737 (1930).

Defendant, having been questioned relative to liquor conditions by grand jury when testifying voluntarily before it for another purpose, held immune from prosecution for manufacturing liquor. Thorn-ton v. State, 143 Miss. 262, 108 So. 709 (1926).

Defendant who testified before grand jury as to sale of liquor could not thereafter be convicted of sale. Ryan v. State, 136 Miss. 587, 101 So. 381 (1924); Hosey v. State, 136 Miss. 5, 100 So. 577 (1924).

Motion on admitted facts entitling defendant to discharge for testifying before grand jury should be sustained. Sudduth v. State, 136 Miss. 742, 101 So. 711 (1924).

Although prosecution begun by affidavit, defendant, testifying before grand jury concerning subject of accusation, entitled to immunity. Triplett v. State, 136 Miss. 320, 101 So. 501 (1924).

One voluntarily testifying before the grand jury, subsequent to indictment, relative to participation in manufacturing liquor, is immune from prosecution. Lucas v. State, 130 Miss. 8, 93 So. 437 (1922).

An officer who is compelled by virtue of this section [Code 1942, § 2630] to disclose before the grand jury his failure to prosecute violations of the liquor law, is immune from prosecution therefor. Wall v. State, 105 Miss. 543, 62 So. 417 (1913).

Indictment founded on the testimony of accused before the grand jury in pursuance to a subpoena will be quashed. Rist v. State, 93 Miss. 841, 47 So. 433 (1908).

3. Applicability to civil actions.

Where immunity from prosecution is granted by statute, a motion or plea based upon the constitutional right or privilege against self-incrimination is not well taken. Dabdoub v. Venus, 192 So. 2d 418 (Miss. 1966).

The privilege against self-incrimination applies to civil as well as criminal actions. Bailey v. Muse, 227 Miss. 51, 85 So. 2d 918 (1956).

The provisions of this section [Code 1942, § 2630] apply to proceedings under Code 1942, § 2639, which provides for civil action to collect penalty for unlawfully selling or giving away intoxicating liquors, so that defendant who incriminates himself is immune from fines and penalties. Bailey v. Muse, 227 Miss. 51, 85 So. 2d 918 (1956).

Where defendants in a suit by state tax collector to collect from defendants statutory fines and penalties for unlawful sale of intoxicating liquors, were required to answer allegations in a bill of complaint in chancery as to their unlawful sales of liquor, defendants were immune from assessment of fines and penalties, notwithstanding the bill of complaint waived answer under oath. Bailey v. Muse, 227 Miss. 51, 85 So. 2d 918 (1956).

In a criminal prosecution for unlawful sale of intoxicating liquor, the testimony of the court's reporter concerning the previous voluntary testimony of the defendant in a civil suit for the unlawful sale of the same intoxicating liquor, was properly admitted and this evidence was not hearsay. Yawn v. State, 220 Miss. 767, 71 So. 2d 779 (1954).

Where a defendant voluntarily testified as a witness in his own behalf in the civil action against him by the state tax collector for unlawful sale of intoxicating liquor, the defendant was not granted immunity from prosecution for unlawful sale of the same intoxicating liquor. Yawn v. State, 220 Miss. 767, 71 So. 2d 779 (1954).

In a suit in chancery on relation of district attorney to enjoin defendants from selling intoxicating liquor, where defendants were called in as adverse witnesses for cross-examination and compelled to testify that they have unlawfully sold liquor, the bill of complaint will be dismissed on the ground that the defendants were compelled to testify against themselves, and they were granted immunity from further prosecution. Zambroni v. State ex rel. Hawkins, 217 Miss. 418, 64 So. 2d 335 (1953).

§ 97-32-5. Prohibition of the sale or transfer of tobacco products to persons under 18 years of age.

It shall be unlawful for any person, or retailer, to sell, barter, deliver or give tobacco products to any individual under eighteen (18) years of age unless the individual under eighteen (18) years of age holds a retailer's license to sell tobacco under Section 27-69-1 et seq., Mississippi Code of 1972.

It shall be an absolute affirmative defense that the person selling, bartering, delivering or giving tobacco products over the counter in a retail establishment to an individual under eighteen (18) years of age in violation of this article had requested and examined a government-issued photographic identification from such person establishing his age as at least eighteen (18) years prior to selling such person a tobacco product. The failure of a seller, barterer, deliverer or giver of tobacco products over the counter in a retail establishment to request and examine photographic identification from a person under eighteen (18) years of age prior to the sale of a tobacco product to such person if the individual is not known to the seller, barterer, deliverer or giver of the tobacco product to be over the age of eighteen (18) years, shall be construed against the seller, barterer, deliverer or giver and form a conclusive basis for the seller's violation of this section.

It shall be an absolute affirmative defense that the person or entity giving tobacco products through the mail to an individual under eighteen (18) years of age in violation of this article had requested and received documentary or written evidence from such person purportedly establishing his age to be at least eighteen (18) years of age.

Any person who violates this section shall be liable as follows: For a first conviction, a fine of Fifty Dollars ($50.00); for a second conviction, a fine of Seventy-five Dollars ($75.00); and for all subsequent convictions, a fine of One Hundred Fifty Dollars ($150.00) shall be imposed.

Any person found in violation of this section shall be issued a citation and the holder of the retailer permit shall be sent notification of this citation by registered mail by the law enforcement agency issuing the citation. Notification shall include the opportunity for hearing before the appropriate court. For a first conviction, the retailer shall be sent a warning letter informing him of the retailer's responsibility in the selling of tobacco products. For a second conviction, the retailer, or retailer's designee, shall be required to enroll in and complete a "Retailer Tobacco Education Program."

For a third or subsequent violation of this section by any retailer, within one (1) year of the two (2) prior violations, any retailer's permit issued pursuant to Section 27-69-1 et seq., Mississippi Code of 1972, may be revoked or suspended for a period of at least one (1) year after notice and opportunity for hearing. For the purposes of this section, "subsequent violations" are those committed at the same place of business.

It is the responsibility of all law enforcement officers and law enforcement agencies of this state to ensure that the provisions of this article are enforced.

It shall not be considered a violation of this section on the part of any law enforcement officer or person under eighteen (18) years of age for any law enforcement officer of this state to use persons under eighteen (18) years of age to purchase or attempt to purchase tobacco products for the purpose of monitoring compliance with this section, as long as those persons are supervised by duly authorized law enforcement agency officials.

Any law enforcement agency conducting enforcement efforts undertaken pursuant to this article shall prepare a report as prescribed by the Attorney General which includes the number of unannounced inspections conducted by the agency, a summary of enforcement actions taken pursuant to this article, the name and permit number of the retailer pursuant to Section 27-69-1 et seq., Mississippi Code of 1972, and final judicial disposition on all enforcement actions. Reports shall be forwarded to the Office of the Attorney General within twenty (20) working days of the final judicial disposition.

§ 97-32-7. Retail sales clerks; notification and agreement; penalties for violations.

(a) Prohibits the sale or distribution of tobacco products, including samples, to any person under eighteen (18) years of age and the purchase or receipt of tobacco products by any person under eighteen (18) years of age, and (b) requires that proof of age be demanded from a prospective purchaser or recipient if the prospective purchaser or recipient is under the age of eighteen (18) years. Every person employed by a person engaged in the business of selling tobacco products at retail shall sign an agreement with his employer in substantially the following or similar form:

I promise, as a condition of my employment, to observe this law."

(2) Any person violating the provisions of this section shall be penalized not less than Fifty Dollars ($50.00) nor more than One Hundred Dollars ($100.00).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.
2. What constitutes gambling within statute.
3. Indictment.
4. —Proof as supporting allegations.
5. Sentence and punishment.

1. In general.

Mississippi Gaming Commission did not act in excess of its statutory authority in determining that Bernard Bayou was not legal gaming site and denying preliminary site approval; Commission regulation providing that Bernard Bayou is not within area authorized for gaming casino sites was reasonable interpretation of statute authorizing gaming. Mississippi Gaming Comm'n v. Board of Educ., 691 So. 2d 452 (Miss. 1997), reh'g denied, 695 So. 2d 601 (Miss. 1997).

Mississippi Gaming Commission's decision to deny request for preliminary site approval for gaming operations on Bernard Bayou was not arbitrary and capricious; finding that Bernard Bayou was a bayou, and pursuant to Commission regulation, was not suitable place for gaming operations. Mississippi Gaming Comm'n v. Board of Educ., 691 So. 2d 452 (Miss.

1997), reh'g denied, 695 So. 2d 601 (Miss. 1997).

A proposed site for a casino gambling operation was unlawful, and therefore the Mississippi Gaming Commission's order approving the site would be vacated, where the site was not on water but was on land which the applicants proposed to dredge, and it was not within waters "south of the three most southern counties." Mississippi Casino Operators Ass'n v. Mississippi Gaming Comm'n, 654 So. 2d 892 (Miss. 1995).

Code of 1906, § 2303 not impliedly repealed by Laws 1908, ch. 118. Ascher & Baxter v. Edward Moyse & Co., 101 Miss. 36, 57 So. 299 (1910).

2. What constitutes gambling within statute.

A mere spectator at a game of chance is not, by his presence alone, guilty of encouraging the game within the purview of this section [Code 1942, § 2190]. Stubbs v. State, 206 Miss. 485, 40 So. 2d 256 (1949).

Person paying 25¢ for privilege of rolling dice with chance of winning $1.00 or nothing, and owner of place to whom he paid money, held gambling. Eckles v. State, 108 Miss. 534, 66 So. 987 (1915).

Playing poker with a three, five and ten-cent limit is gambling to the same extent as if the stakes were larger. Ford v. State, 86 Miss. 123, 38 So. 229 (1905).

It is not within the statute for the loser at a game of billiards to pay, by agreement of the parties, the fee due for the use of the table. Blewett v. State, 34 Miss. 606 (1857).

To bet on the result of an election in another state is indictable under the statute. Sharkey v. State, 33 Miss. 353 (1857).

3. Indictment.

4. —Proof as supporting allegations.

Testimony that accused was “rolling the bones”, had money in front of him and that others were present with money on display, was sufficient to justify jury finding that accused was violating this section [Code 1942, § 2190], it being unnecessary for the prosecution to show that the game had proceeded to the point where accused had made his point or that he had lost by turning up a seven. Stubbs v. State, 206 Miss. 485, 40 So. 2d 256 (1949).

Evidence must show defendants’ joint game, under indictment charging they played a game together. Reno v. State, 88 Miss. 583, 41 So. 7 (1906).

Under an indictment charging that several persons “unlawfully did play...for money,” etc., either may be convicted for playing with any person. Such indictment charges a separate offense against each.

Lea v. State, 64 Miss. 294, 1 So. 244 (1887).

If the indictment charge that accused played “for money,” it must be shown that he was either directly or indirectly interested in the money wagered, or he cannot be convicted. Strawhern v. State, 37 Miss. 422 (1859).

An indictment charging a bet on the result of an election in a particular state for presidential electors is not sustained by proof of a bet on the result of an election, in the state for president. The election of electors is distinct from the election of president. Gamble v. State, 35 Miss. 222 (1858).

A bet upon the unknown result of an election, made after the election is held, is indictable; and proof thereof under an indictment which charges that the bet was made before the election, is proper and will maintain it. The time laid is immaterial. Terrall v. Adams, 23 Miss. 570 (1852); Miller v. State, 33 Miss. 356 (1857).

5. Sentence and punishment.

This section [Code 1942, § 2190] does not prescribe two punishments in the alternative but a defendant convicted of gaming under this section may be sentenced to pay a fine and costs and stand committed until they are paid, as provided in Laws 1894, ch. 76 § 3, and may be worked on the county farm until such fine and costs are paid. Fuller v. State, 83 Miss. 30, 35 So. 214 (1903).

Any slot machine other than an antique coin machine as defined in Section 27-27-12 which delivers, or is so constructed as that by operation thereof it will deliver to the operator thereof anything of value in varying quantities, in addition to the merchandise received, and any slot machine other than an antique coin machine as defined in Section 27-27-12 that is constructed in such manner as that slugs, tokens, coins or similar devices are, or may be, used and delivered to the operator thereof in addition to merchandise of any sort contained in such machine, is hereby declared to be a gambling device, and shall be deemed unlawful under the provisions of this section. Provided, however, that pinball machines which do not return to the operator or player thereof anything but free additional games or plays shall not be deemed to be gambling devices, and neither this section nor any other law shall be construed to prohibit same.

1. Slot machines generally.

The definition of a "slot machine" contained in Miss. Code Ann. § 75-76-5(ff) is applicable to Miss. Code Ann. § 97-33-7, which prohibits the possession or use of slot machines. Miss. Gaming Comm'n v. Six Elec. Video Gambling Devices, 792 So. 2d 321 (Miss. Ct. App. 2001).

A machine was a slot machine where (1) it dispensed a two-minute emergency long distance calling card, good only for one call no matter the time actually used, (2) with each card, the purchaser also received a game piece, which had a bar code on the back that was read by the machine as the card was being dispensed, (3) the display on the machine then simulated a slot machine by spinning nine squares, (4) after a few moments, the display showed the same combination of squares as on the game piece, (5) again simulating a slot machine, the machine lit up and played music if the patron was a winner, and (6) a cashier at the store verified the winning card and then paid the prize money, which could be in the amount of one dollar up to $500. Miss. Gaming Comm'n v. Six Elec. Video Gambling Devices, 792 So. 2d 321 (Miss. Ct. App. 2001).

But where an injunction has been issued against the defendant for violation of gaming laws, his mere possession of slot machines was a violation of the injunction despite the fact that the machines were not operated. Stevens v. State, 225 Miss. 48, 82 So. 2d 645 (1955).

It was not the purpose of this statute [Code 1942, § 2047], or similar statutes, to condemn a machine as being a slot machine simply because its initial operation is by way of the insertion of a coin in a slot; but the maxim noscitur a sociis should be applied, and in looking to the associated devices or machines or games mentioned in such statutes, the condemnation is against those which, in their nature, are gambling devices. Rouse v. Sisson, 190 Miss. 276, 199 So. 777, 132 A.L.R. 998 (1941).

The mere possession of a slot machine or even its operation for amusement and not for profit does not constitute a crime. King v. McCrory, 179 Miss. 162, 175 So. 193 (1937).

2. Character of slot machine as gambling device.

Business owner did not meet his burden of showing that he was being deprived of his property without due process of law because the criminal statutes, Miss. Code Ann. § 97-33-7 and Miss. Code Ann. § 97-33-17, were not too broad in their description of what caused a video game to be an illegal slot machine, and a person with ordinary intelligence would have little difficulty determining what exactly was prohibited; Mississippi did not extend a property right to illegal gambling machines, such that there were no due process rights violations, and Miss. Code Ann. § 97-33-7(2) was not unconstitutionally vague. Trainer v. State, 930 So. 2d 373 (Miss. 2006).

Where the elements of consideration and chance are present, Miss. Code Ann. § 75-76-5(ff) requires only that machines possess the “potential for reward” to be considered a slot machine subject to seizure and destruction under Miss. Code Ann. § 97-33-7(1). Miss. Gaming Comm’n v. Henson, 800 So. 2d 110 (Miss. 2001).

State gaming commission properly seized amusement devices based on their illegality, as the machines possessed “potential for reward” by providing credits for free additional games even though they did not necessarily provide an instant payoff. Miss. Gaming Comm’n v. Henson, 800 So. 2d 110 (Miss. 2001).

A machine operated at a truck stop was an illegal slot machine where the machine operated as follows: (1) for one dollar, the machine dispensed a two minute emergency long distance calling card, good only for one call no matter the time actually used, (2) with each card, the purchaser also received a game piece which had a bar code on the back that was read by the machine as it was dispensed, (3) the display on the machine then simulated a slot machine by spinning nine squares, (4) after a few moments, the display showed the same combination of squares as on the game piece, (5) again simulating a slot machine, the machine lit up and played music if the patron was a winner, and (6) a cashier at the store verified the winning card and then paid the prize money, which could be in the amount of one dollar up to five hundred dollars. Mississippi Gaming Comm’n v. Six Elec. Video Gambling Devices & Gene Gullick, — So. 2d —, 2001 Miss. App. LEXIS 13 (Miss. Ct. App. Jan. 9, 2001), opinion withdrawn by, substituted opinion at 792 So. 2d 321, 2001 Miss. App. LEXIS 224 (Miss. Ct. App. 2001).

Despite the fact that § 2047, Code 1942, specifically provides that pinball machines which do not return to the operator or player anything but free additional games or plays shall not be deemed gambling devices, such machines are still subject to the forfeiture and seizure under federal statutes. United States v. Various Gambling Devices, 368 F. Supp. 661 (N.D. Miss. 1973).

The fact that so-called “free-game” pinball machines are legal under Mississippi law does not render them exempt from the registration and record keeping requirements of 15 USCS 1173. United States v. Various Gambling Devices, 368 F. Supp. 661 (N.D. Miss. 1973).

Although it appeared that upon the trial a slot machine did not operate when tested, the evidence was sufficient to support the verdict of the jury that it was a gaming or gambling device. Brady v. State, 229 Miss. 677, 91 So. 2d 751 (1957).

A machine which, upon the deposit of a coin, presents a question with a number of alternate answers only one of which is correct, whereupon the player has twenty seconds in which to depress a key indicating the number of the answer selected by him, and which, if his answer is correct, automatically awards him a cash prize in an amount of which he is advised before commencement of the play, and which in any event delivers the card containing the question, on the reverse side of which is printed the correct answer, is not a gambling device within the purview of this statute [Code 1942, § 2047], since the element of uncertainty is not in the operation of the machine but in the scope of the player’s knowledge. Rouse v. Sisson, 190 Miss. 276, 199 So. 777, 132 A.L.R. 998 (1941).

Slot machine, played for a “jackpot,” operating by placing 5-cent coin in slot and pulling a lever for which purchaser could get a piece of gum, or sometimes 10 or 15 cents, was a “gambling device.” Atkins v. State, 178 Miss. 804, 174 So. 52 (1937).

Vending machine held a gambling device; a “slot machine or similar device.” Crippen v. Mint Sales Co., 139 Miss. 87, 103 So. 503 (1925).

3. Search, seizure and confiscation.

As computer terminals seized from an internet cafe were illegal slot machines, cafe owners had no property rights in them pursuant to Miss. Code Ann. § 97-

33-7(2); thus, a justice court had no legal basis to order their return to the owners. Moore v. Miss. Gaming Comm'n, 64 So. 3d 537 (Miss. Ct. App. 2011).

National guardsmen, acting under an executive order of the governor, and a search warrant issued by the county judge, directed to any officer of the county, had authority to make a search of the accused's premises wherein a slot machine was found. Brady v. State, 229 Miss. 677, 91 So. 2d 751 (1957).

Where the recitals in the executive order, empowering the adjutant general to order out national guardsmen for the purpose of seeing that laws were faithfully executed in Jones County, made out a prima facie case justifying the governor's actions, the duty of showing that there was not such breakdown of law enforcement conditions as to justify this action was upon the accused, who was complaining of the search of the premises wherein a slot machine was found. Brady v. State, 229 Miss. 677, 91 So. 2d 751 (1957).

In a prosecution for the unlawful possession of a slot machine found upon the accused's premises during a search by national guardsmen under authority of an executive order, and a search warrant issued by the county judge, it was not error to introduce in evidence a copy of the executive order, certified by the secretary of state, since whatever right, if any, accused had to subpoena witnesses and contradict the facts set forth in the original executive order applied as well to the copy as to the original. Brady v. State, 229 Miss. 677, 91 So. 2d 751 (1957).

The legislature has the power to render the possession or ownership of slot machines and pay-off tables unlawful, and to provide for their seizure and destruction, without violating the due process clause of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States. Clark v. Holden, 191 Miss. 7, 2 So. 2d 570 (1941).

The fact that slot machines and other gambling devices, when seized, were contained in their original crates and were designed for operation in another jurisdiction where their operation was lawful would not make their seizure and destruction under the provision of this section [Code 1942, § 2047] wrongful, since the statute makes the possession or ownership thereof unlawful. Clark v. Holden, 191 Miss. 7, 2 So. 2d 570 (1941).

Where a slot machine was not a gambling device within the purview of this statute [Code 1942, § 2047], the owner thereof was entitled to an injunction against seizure and confiscation of such machine as a gambling device. Rouse v. Sisson, 190 Miss. 276, 199 So. 777, 132 A.L.R. 998 (1941).

A city marshal had no authority, without affidavit or search warrant, to seize slot machine which was not operated by person keeping it, since statute does not contemplate that officers may seize property not contraband without a warrant, unless such property is being used by persons in such manner as to make out a crime. King v. McCrory, 179 Miss. 162, 175 So. 193 (1937).

4. —Replevin after seizure.

Since this section [Code 1942, § 2047] makes the possession or ownership of slot machines and other similar gambling devices and apparatus unlawful it necessarily follows that replevin will not lie for the recovery in which no property right can exist in the plaintiff and the possession of which by him is made unlawful. Clark v. Holden, 191 Miss. 7, 2 So. 2d 570 (1941).

An owner of a slot machine which was kept on premises of another not for purpose of operating it could replevy such machine from city marshal who, while searching premises for intoxicating liquors, found machine and without taking any legal papers or making any affidavit took the machine into his possession, where marshal could not show that machine was being used for purpose of gaming. King v. McCrory, 179 Miss. 162, 175 So. 193 (1937).

5. Issuance of privilege license or payment of tax.

A copy of a record in the office of the United States District Director of Internal Revenue showing the issuance by the director of a license for the accused's premises to operate a coin-operated gaming device, which was duly certified by the Director, was properly authenticated and admissible in a prosecution for the unlawful possession of a slot machine notwithstanding accused's objection that the admission of the certified copy, without the witness being on the stand, deprived the accused of the right of cross-examination, since it would appear there was no rule prohibiting accused from subpoenaing and using that official as a witness. Brady v. State, 229 Miss. 677, 91 So. 2d 751 (1957).

In prosecution for unlawfully operating a slot machine, admission of testimony of payment of privilege tax was not error, notwithstanding evidence as to privilege tax being paid is not ordinarily admissible, where payment was a stipulated fact and court instructed jury that payment did not justify operation of slot machine as a gambling device. State v. Stigler, 179 Miss. 276, 175 So. 194 (1937).

Issuance of license held not to create an estoppel against prosecution for crime under statute making it unlawful to operate slot machines which do not indicate in advance what purchaser is to receive. Atkins v. State, 178 Miss. 804, 174 So. 52 (1937).

In view of legislative history, suit to collect privilege tax on slot machine for year 1924 cannot be maintained (Code 1906, § 3786; Laws 1914, ch. 110; Laws 1920, ch. 104 §§ 7, 64; Laws 1922, ch. 239

§§ 1-3; Laws 1924, ch. 120, § 339.). Scott v. Hossley, 142 Miss. 611, 107 So. 760 (1926).

6. Miscellaneous.

A justice of the peace has no jurisdiction, other than to require bail for appearance in circuit court to await action of grand jury, on an affidavit charging a second offense, such second offense being the commission of a felony. Ellis v. State, 203 Miss. 330, 33 So. 2d 837 (1948).

In a prosecution for burglary, which involved the stealing of a slot machine containing a large number of nickels, it was immaterial whether or not the slot machine was "property," since the money in the machine was property, and was not withdrawn from that category by a statute under which the money could have been seized by any police officer. Hawkins v. State, 193 Miss. 586, 10 So. 2d 678 (1942).

In prosecution for unlawfully operating a slot machine, instructing that to convict, jury must believe beyond reasonable doubt that some person other than accused played or operated machine was not error, since it was not unlawful, per se, for owner of slot machine to keep it and operate it for amusement and not as a gambling device. State v. Stigler, 179 Miss. 276, 175 So. 194 (1937).

ATTORNEY GENERAL OPINIONS

If gambling devices are stored in warehouse located in county or municipality that has not approved gaming and devices are intended for ultimate delivery to vessel on which gambling is legal, then such storage does constitute part of "the process of procuring or transporting such device" and such possession is legal under subsection (5) of this section provided that license from Gaming Commission is obtained pursuant to Section 75-76-79. Guice, August 6, 1993, A.G. Op. #93-0403.

(a) Is offered or made available to a person to play or participate in a simulated gambling program in return for direct or indirect consideration, including consideration associated with a product, service or activity other than the simulated gambling program; and

Except as otherwise provided in Section 97-33-8, if any person shall be guilty of keeping or exhibiting any game or gaming table commonly called A.B.C. or E.O. roulette or rowley-powley, or rouge et noir, roredo, keno, monte, or any faro-bank, or other game, gaming table, or bank of the same or like kind or any other kind or description under any other name whatever, or shall be in any manner either directly or indirectly interested or concerned in any gaming tables, banks, or games, either by furnishing money or articles for the purpose of carrying on the same, being interested in the loss or gain of said table, bank or games, or employed in any manner in conducting, carrying on, or exhibiting said gaming tables, games, or banks, every person so offending and being thereof convicted, shall be fined not less than Twenty-five Dollars ($25.00) nor more than Two Thousand Dollars ($2,000.00), or be imprisoned in the county jail not longer than two (2) months, or by both such fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.
2. Indictment.
3. Evidence.

1. In general.

An agent of the alcoholic beverage control division of the state tax commission does not have the authority to serve a search warrant issued for the purpose of making a search for illegal gambling equipment. Wright v. State, 231 So. 2d 777 (Miss. 1970).

Supreme court would not interfere with trial court's discretion in overruling motion for severance made by seven defendants charged with being interested in gambling table. Boyd v. State, 177 Miss. 34, 170 So. 671 (1936).

Under this section [Code 1942, § 2192] the mere act of keeping and exhibiting a gaming table is not a crime; the unlawful purpose of keeping the table must be shown; there must be facts which make the keeping or exhibiting unlawful. Rawls v. State, 70 Miss. 739, 12 So. 584 (1893).

2. Indictment.

Indictment charging that defendants were interested in loss or gain of gambling table held not demurrable as charging more than one offense in one count by referring to "games of chance," since offense charged did not end by playing of one game, but was continuous. Boyd v. State, 177 Miss. 34, 170 So. 671 (1936).

Indictment held not bad for duplicity. Ross v. State, 135 Miss. 862, 101 So. 289 (1924).

An indictment under this section [Code 1942, § 2192] held not demurrable because it improperly charged the offense as having been "feloniously" committed. Brister v. State, 86 Miss. 461, 38 So. 678 (1905).

An indictment under this section [Code 1942, § 2192] which merely charges that defendant "was interested in a gaming table" is fatally defective in that it fails to charge that he was interested in the loss or gain of the table as required by the statute. Brazele v. State, 86 Miss. 286, 38 So. 314 (1905).

3. Evidence.

In a prosecution for illegal possession of gambling devices, where the evidence was objected to on the ground of an illegal search, but the defense did not specifically object to the admission of illegal gambling equipment on the ground that the alcoholic beverage control agent lacked authority to serve a search warrant issued for the search for illegal gambling devices, under the plain error rule and in the interest of the equal administration of justice, a prior holding that such agent did not have such authority would be applied. Wright v. State, 231 So. 2d 777 (Miss. 1970).

In prosecution of seven defendants for being interested in gambling table, evidence as to gaming on occasions subsequent to first occasion admitted when all defendants but one participated in furtherance of game held not admissible, where evidence as to subsequent occasions disclosed separate offenses in commission of which some of the defendants did not participate. Boyd v. State, 177 Miss. 34, 170 So. 671 (1936).

Evidence held insufficient to sustain conviction as to defendant who played on table, but as to whom evidence contained nothing to indicate that he was at any time interested in loss or gain of table. Boyd v. State, 177 Miss. 34, 170 So. 671 (1936).

Evidence examined and held to show that defendant was the lessee and occupant of the room in which the gambling was conducted. Ford v. State, 86 Miss. 123, 38 So. 229 (1905).

§ 97-33-11. Gambling; clubs not to have interest in gaming; each member fined; grand jury investigation.

It shall not be lawful for any association of persons of the character commonly known as a "club," whether such association be incorporated or not, in any manner, either directly or indirectly, to have any interest or concern in any gambling tables, banks, or games, by means of what is sometimes called a "rake-off" or "take-out," or by means of an assessment upon certain combinations, or hands at cards, or by means of a percentage extracted from players, or an assessment made upon, or a contribution from them, or by any other means, device or contrivance whatsoever. It shall not be lawful for such an association to lend or advance money or any other valuable thing to any person engaged or about to engage in playing any game of chance prohibited by law, or to become responsible directly or indirectly for any money or other valuable thing lost, or which may be lost, by any player in any such game. If any such association shall violate any of the provisions of this section each and every member thereof shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof shall be fined in a sum not more than five hundred dollars; and unless such fine and costs be immediately paid, shall be imprisoned in the county jail for not less than five nor more than twenty days. Each grand jury shall cause such of the members of such an association as it may choose to appear before them and submit to examination touching the observance or nonobservance by such association of the provisions hereof.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

2. Indictment.

1. In general.

City had power to pass an ordinance making it an offense against the municipality to violate Code 1906, § 1208. Rosetto v. City of Bay St. Louis, 97 Miss. 409, 52 So. 785 (1910).

Playing poker with a three, five and ten-cent limit is gaming within the meaning of Code 1892, § 1126. Ford v. State, 86 Miss. 123, 38 So. 229 (1905).

The lessee of a building who has assigned his term as to a portion thereof, and retains no control over such portion, cannot be held guilty under this section [Code 1942, § 2195], if his assignee, even with his knowledge, permit games to be carried on in such portion in violation of the section. Diebel v. State, 68 Miss. 725, 9 So. 354 (1891).

2. Indictment.

Indictment charging that accused feloniously suffered games of chance to be played with dice for money in a house occupied by her as a dwelling, contrary to the statute, sufficiently charges the statutory offense and is not violated by the use of the word "feloniously." Brister v. State, 86 Miss. 461, 38 So. 678 (1905).

3. Evidence.

Evidence obtained by coroner under illegal warrant for search and seizure of intoxicating liquor was inadmissible in prosecution for permitting games of chance to be played for money on defendant's premises. Millwood v. State, 198 Miss. 485, 23 So. 2d 496 (1945).

Evidence that defendant's house had the reputation of being a gambling house was inadmissible, being hearsay. Rosetto v. City of Bay St. Louis, 97 Miss. 409, 52 So. 785 (1910).

Evidence that a door opened from the store into the room, of which defendant alone had the key, that he would open it at request, that it was necessary to ask permission of him to enter, and that he kept goods stored therein, was sufficient to show that he was the lessee and occupant of the room. Ford v. State, 86 Miss. 123, 38 So. 229 (1905).

§ 97-33-17. Gambling; money and appliances forfeited; exceptions.

(1) All monies exhibited for the purpose of betting or alluring persons to bet at any game, and all monies staked or betted, shall be liable to seizure by any sheriff, constable, or police officer, together with all the appliances used or kept for use in gambling, or by any other person; and all the monies so seized shall be accounted for by the person making the seizure, and all appliances seized shall be destroyed; provided, however, this section shall not apply to betting, gaming or wagering on:

(a) A cruise vessel as defined in Section 27-109-1 whenever such vessel is in the waters within the State of Mississippi, which lie adjacent to the State of Mississippi south of the three (3) most southern counties in the State of Mississippi, including the Mississippi Sound, St. Louis Bay, Biloxi Bay and Pascagoula Bay, and in which the registered voters of the county in which the port is located have not voted to prohibit such betting, gaming or wagering on cruise vessels as provided in Section 19-3-79;

(b) In a structure located in whole or in part on shore in any of the three (3) most southern counties in the State of Mississippi in which the registered voters of the county have voted to allow such betting, gaming or wagering on cruise vessels as provided in Section 19-3-79, if:

(i) The structure is owned, leased or controlled by a person possessing a gaming license, as defined in Section 75-76-5, to conduct legal gaming on a cruise vessel under paragraph (a) of this subsection;

(ii) The part of the structure in which licensed gaming activities are conducted is located entirely in an area which is located no more than eight hundred (800) feet from the mean high-water line (as defined in Section 29-15-1) of the waters within the State of Mississippi, which lie adjacent to the State of Mississippi south of the three (3) most southern counties in the State of Mississippi, including the Mississippi Sound, St. Louis Bay, Biloxi Bay and Pascagoula Bay, or, with regard to Harrison County only, no farther north than the southern boundary of the right-of-way for U.S. Highway 90, whichever is greater; and

(iii) In the case of a structure that is located in whole or part on shore, the part of the structure in which licensed gaming activities are conducted shall lie adjacent to state waters south of the three (3) most southern counties in the State of Mississippi, including the Mississippi Sound, St. Louis Bay, Biloxi Bay and Pascagoula Bay. When the site upon which the structure is located consists of a parcel of real property, easements and rights-of-way for public streets and highways shall not be construed to interrupt the contiguous nature of the parcel, nor shall the footage contained within the easements and rights-of-way be counted in the calculation of the distances specified in subparagraph (ii).

(c) A vessel as defined in Section 27-109-1 whenever such vessel is on the Mississippi River or navigable waters within any county bordering on the Mississippi River, and in which the registered voters of the county in which the port is located have not voted to prohibit such betting, gaming or wagering on vessels as provided in Section 19-3-79; or

(d) That is legal under the laws of the State of Mississippi.

(2) Nothing in this section shall apply to any gambling device, machine or equipment that is owned, possessed, controlled, installed, procured, repaired or transported in accordance with subsection (4) of Section 97-33-7.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.

Business owner did not meet his burden of showing that he was being deprived of his property without due process of law because the criminal statutes, Miss. Code Ann. § 97-33-7 and Miss. Code Ann. § 97-33-17, were not too broad in their description of what caused a video game to be an illegal slot machine, and a person with ordinary intelligence would have little difficulty determining what exactly was prohibited; Mississippi did not extend a property right to illegal gambling machines, such that there were no due process rights violations, and Miss. Code Ann. § 97-33-7(2) was not unconstitutionally vague. Trainer v. State, 930 So. 2d 373 (Miss. 2006).

In a prosecution for burglary, which involved the stealing of a slot machine containing a large number of nickels, it was immaterial whether or not the slot machine was "property," since the money in the machine was property, and was not withdrawn from that category by a statute under which the money could have been seized by any police officer. Hawkins v. State, 193 Miss. 586, 10 So. 2d 678 (1942).

A city marshal had no authority, without affidavit or search warrant, to seize slot machine which was not operated by person keeping it, since statute does not contemplate that officers may seize property not contraband without a warrant, unless such property is being used by persons in such manner as to make out a crime. King v. McCrory, 179 Miss. 162, 175 So. 193 (1937).

An owner of a slot machine which was kept on premises of another not for purpose of operating it could replevy such machine from city marshal who, while searching premises for intoxicating liquors, found machine and without taking any legal papers or making any affidavit took the machine into his possession, where marshal could not show that machine was being used for purpose of gaming. King v. McCrory, 179 Miss. 162, 175 So. 193 (1937).

Any person or persons who shall oppose the seizure of any such moneys or appliances by any officer or person so authorized to make it, shall, on

Genuine issues of material facts existed, precluding summary judgment, as to whether law enforcement officer was arresting owner of building where gambling raid occurred because officer feared riot when building owner questioned officers as to whether they had search warrant and arrest warrant, or whether officer was arresting him because owner had exercised First Amendment rights in connection with owner's protesting of raid. *Enlow v. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.

Word "remedial" called for gaming laws to be construed liberally against the criminal; the Mississippi Supreme Court has never held that the provision removed all prohibitory gambling laws from the criminal code; the constitutional analysis of a statute is the same whether the statute under scrutiny is criminal or civil, and the Constitution applies to every statute. The proper construction of the statute, or whether it shall be strictly or liberally construed, is not the question, but whether the Constitution applies to all statutes alike, whether civil or criminal. And the supreme court holds that it does. Trainer v. State, 930 So. 2d 373 (Miss. 2006).

Indorsement and transfer of check in payment of gambling debt is void and ineffective to pass title to any subsequent holder. Skinner Mfg. Co. v. Deposit Guar. Bank, 160 Miss. 815, 133 So. 660 (1931).

1. In general.

Cash drawing sponsored by political candidate does not constitute violation of bribery statutes, candidate gift statute, or lottery statute where scheme sponsored by candidate requires only that voters who wish to participate in cash drawing participate in election and where scheme expressly disclaims attempt to influence direction of vote. Naron v. Prestage, 469 So. 2d 83 (Miss. 1985).

The offense under this section [Code 1942, § 2270] is made a felony, whereas under each of the subsequent nine sections pertaining to lotteries (Code 1942, §§ 2271-2279), the offense merely constitutes a misdemeanor. Clark v. State, 198 Miss. 88, 21 So. 2d 296 (1945).

The words, "put up a lottery," as used in this section [Code 1942, § 2270] are to be construed in their usual and most common sense, as they would ordinarily be understood by the public in general. Clark v. State, 198 Miss. 88, 21 So. 2d 296 (1945).

To "put up a lottery" within the meaning of this section [Code 1942, § 2270] is not to operate a lottery but to put up or provide whatever is necessary for its operation, that is, (1) the capital, (2) the necessary paraphernalia and (3) the plan or set-up for the operation. Clark v. State, 198 Miss. 88, 21 So. 2d 296 (1945).

Policy game whereby “writers” issue tickets upon which purchaser selects a number from 1 to 78, and, to determine the winners, balls numbering from 1 to 78 are put in a bag and shaken and 12 withdrawn therefrom, the numbers upon which designating the winners who are paid in money, constitutes a lottery. Clark v. State, 198 Miss. 88, 21 So. 2d 296 (1945).

Scheme whereby merchant gave customers tickets purchased from chamber of commerce entitling customers to chance on prize, held not “lottery” or “gambling device.” R.J. Williams Furn. Co. v. McComb Chamber of Commerce, 147 Miss. 649, 112 So. 579, 57 A.L.R. 421 (1927).

2. Indictment.

Charge in indictment that defendant wilfully, unlawfully and feloniously, in order to raise money for himself, publicly put up, owned, maintained and operated a lottery to be drawn or adventured for, commonly called policy or a gambling game for money, is not confined to that of having put up a lottery in violation of this section [Code 1942, § 2270], but also includes further offenses under subsequent sections of this chapter pertaining to lotteries (Code 1942, §§ 2271-2279). Clark v. State, 198 Miss. 88, 21 So. 2d 296 (1945).

3. Proof.

State has burden of proof that defendant “put up a lottery” within the meaning of this section [Code 1942, § 2270], and mere proof that defendant was operating the lottery does not cast upon him the burden of showing that he did not put up the lottery. Clark v. State, 198 Miss. 88, 21 So. 2d 296 (1945).

Where indictment charged defendant not only with a felony of having put up a lottery in violation of this section [Code 1942, § 2270] but other offenses which under subsequent sections of this chapter (Code 1942, §§ 2271-2279) are misdemeanors, and, although there was no proof that defendant put up the lottery within the purview of this section [Code 1942, § 2270], the proof showed that he did receive money for the lottery and delivered prizes therefor within the prohibition of Code 1942, § 2278, general verdict of guilty will be sustained, but case will be remanded for proper resentencing under Code 1942, § 2278. Clark v. State, 198 Miss. 88, 21 So. 2d 296 (1945).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.

This section [Code 1942, § 2279] deals with cases wherein the putting up a lottery is for a single occasion. Clark v. State, 198 Miss. 88, 21 So. 2d 296 (1945).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.

Section 87-1-1, which declares "utterly void" all contracts executed and made in connection with illegal gaming activities, does not bar collection of debts arising out of legal gaming activities; thus, § 87-1-1 does not apply to bingo, since charitable bingo games were exempted from any and Bingo is not a "lottery" prohibited by [former] Mississippi Constitution Art 4, § 98, and therefore this section is constitutional. Knight v. State ex rel. Moore, 574 So. 2d 662 (Miss. 1990).

(ii) Played with the participant covering, marking or revealing the numbers or symbols, as objects similarly numbered or designated are drawn from a receptacle and orally called; in the case of electronic representations, the requisite covering, marking or revealing may be accomplished electronically to match objects similarly numbered or designated and stored in memory in advance as winners, or which are generated randomly by an electronic process;

(iii) Won by the player who first covers, marks or reveals a previously designated arrangement of numbers or symbols; and

(iv) Played on the premises of a licensed organization and during the organization’s regular hours of conducting bingo games.

1. Any chapter or post domiciled in this state of a nationally chartered organization whose membership is composed of former members of the military forces of the United States of America or whose membership is composed of members of the Merchant Marine Veterans Association; or

2. Any nonprofit civic, educational, wildlife conservation organization or religious organization domiciled in this state.

If an organization which has on file with the commission a certified copy of its application for a tax exemption under Section 501(c) or (d) of the U.S. Internal Revenue Code is not granted the exemption within twelve (12) months from the date of such application, the organization's license shall be subject to revocation pursuant to Section 97-33-61.

(ii) Any senior citizen recreation club, which is defined as an organization sanctioned by the local council on aging and composed of members aged sixty (60) years or older, the sole function of which is to provide amusement and diversion for its members.

(c) "Commission" means the Mississippi Gaming Commission.

(d) "Distributor" means any person or other entity who sells, offers for sale or otherwise furnishes to any person, gaming supplies or equipment for use in the conducting of a bingo game authorized by Sections 97-33-51 through 97-33-203.

(2) Each applicant for such a license shall file with the commission a written application therefor in a form prescribed by the commission on which shall be stated:

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. Bingo games by charitable organization.

Contrary to appellants' claims that there was proof that there were members of a charitable corporation, which had the authority to elect and replace the board of directors, the fact that the charitable corporation held bingo games was not proof that there were members of the corporation, although Mississippi's Charitable

Bingo Law, Miss. Code Ann. § 97-33-55, permits a nonprofit entity to conduct bingo games if the game is held by active members. The corporation may very well have been operating in violation of the law for a decade, and just managed to escape the notice of regulatory authorities. His Way, Inc. v. McMillin, 909 So. 2d 738 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

§ 97-33-57. Investigation of qualifications of applicants for licenses; criteria; term of license; denial, refusal, suspension or revocation of license.

(1) The commission shall investigate the qualifications of each applicant and the merits of the application, with due expedition after the filing of the application, and shall make the following determinations:

(a) That the applicant is duly qualified to hold, operate and conduct bingo games under the provisions of Sections 97-33-51 through 97-33-203 and the rules and regulations of the commission governing same.

(b) That the member or members of the organization designated in the application to hold, operate, conduct, or assist in holding, operating, or conducting, the bingo games are bona fide active members of the organization and of good moral character, who have never been convicted of certain offenses as designated by the commission.

(c) That bingo games are to be held, operated and conducted in accordance with the provisions of Sections 97-33-51 through 97-33-203 and in accordance with the rules and regulations of the commission governing same, and that the proceeds thereof are to be disposed of as provided by Sections 97-33-51 through 97-33-203.

(2) If the commission is satisfied that no commission, salary, compensation, reward or recompense whatever, except as otherwise provided in Section 97-33-69, will be paid or given to any person holding, operating or conducting any bingo game, it may issue a license to the applicant for the holding, operating and conducting of bingo games.

(3) No license for holding, operating or conducting bingo games that is issued under Sections 97-33-51 through 97-33-203 shall be effective for more than three (3) calendar years.

(4) The commission shall not issue a license to:

(a) Any person who has been convicted of certain related offenses as established by the commission or who presently has such a charge pending in any state or federal court;

(b) Any person who has ever been convicted of a gambling-related offense in any state or federal court;

(c) Any person who is or has ever been a professional gambler;

(d) Any firm, organization or corporation in which any person as described in paragraphs (a) through (c) is an officer or director, whether compensated or not, or in which such person has a direct or indirect financial interest;

(e) The commission may deny an application for licensure, refuse to renew a license, or suspend or revoke a license for any reason consistent with the purposes of Sections 97-33-51 through 97-33-203 which it deems to be in the interest of the public. However, policies regarding such denial, suspension, revocation or refusal to renew shall be established by rule and regulation. If the commission fails to act upon the license application within sixty (60) days of the date of filing of the application by the charitable organization, such application shall be deemed accepted.

(5) Any significant change in the information submitted on its application for licensure shall be filed by a licensee with the commission within ten (10) days of the change. A significant change shall include, but not be limited to, any change in the officers, directors, managers, proprietors or persons having a direct or indirect financial interest in any licensed organization or entity.

§ 97-33-59. Special licenses for emergency financial relief; special charitable limited license requirement.

(1) The commission may issue a special license for the conducting of limited fund-raising bingo games for the benefit of a person, family or group of persons who, because of circumstances which cause a financial crisis of an emergency nature, are in need of immediate fund-raising relief. Bingo games conducted under this section shall consist of no more than two (2) bingo sessions annually by the same person, family or group of persons, at which the total amount of prizes which may be awarded on any calendar day under such a license shall not exceed Fifteen Thousand Dollars ($15,000.00) in cash or other thing or things of value. Except as otherwise provided in this section or as may be otherwise provided by Section 97-33-69(10) or 97-33-107(k), all other provisions of Sections 97-33-51 through 97-33-203 shall apply to the issuance of such special licenses.

(2) The commission shall not authorize any organization to conduct limited bingo games as described in subsection (1) as provided herein unless that organization has first obtained a special charitable limited license from the commission.

(3) All proceeds derived from bingo games conducted under a special charitable limited license shall go to the specific need for which the games are conducted, as outlined in the application for such license.

(4) The fee for a special charitable limited license shall be limited to the actual administrative costs of issuing it.

Prize limit in this section an exception to general rule limiting amount of prize money, see § 97-33-67.

§ 97-33-61. Notice and hearing prerequisites to denial of license; judicial review.

No license shall be revoked by the commission until after a hearing is held on due notice. The commission may designate a hearing examiner to hear the case and render a decision. A licensee aggrieved by the decision of the hearing examiner may apply within fifteen (15) days after announcement of the decision in writing to the commission for review of the decision. Review is limited to the record of proceedings before the hearing examiner. The commission may sustain or reverse the hearing examiner's decision.

Any person aggrieved by the final decision of the commission may obtain a judicial review thereof in the circuit court of the county in which the bingo games are conducted. The judicial review must be instituted by filing a petition within ten (10) days after the decision is rendered.

The circuit court had jurisdiction to enter a temporary restraining order or a temporary injunction allowing an American Legion Post to continue bingo operations while the revocation of its charitable

§ 97-33-65. Commission to control games; entry and inspection by agents; suspension or revocation of license for violations.

The commission shall control all bingo games held, operated or conducted by a licensee to assure that they are fairly held, operated and conducted in accordance with the provisions of the license, the commission's rules and regulations, and the provisions of Sections 97-33-51 through 97-33-203. The commission may suspend or revoke any license for violation of any such rule and regulation or provision. Its officers and agents may enter and inspect any premises where any bingo game is being held, operated and conducted or is intended to be held, operated and conducted, or where any equipment is being used or intended to be used in the conduct thereof.

§ 97-33-67. Length and frequency of sessions; prize limits; designated supervisor responsible for session; purchase of supplies only from licensees; persons under 18 years of age.

(1)(a) No licensee shall hold, operate or conduct any bingo game more often than for two (2) sessions within one (1) day and more often than eight (8) sessions in any one (1) week. Any licensee who holds no more than one (1) session per week shall be entitled to conduct one (1) six-hour session per week. Notwithstanding the provisions of this paragraph, pull-tabs, video pull-tabs or video bingo games may be played for up to eighty (80) hours per week.

(b) No licensee shall hold, operate or conduct any bingo game in more than one (1) physical location. Any bingo operation for which a license has been issued by the Gaming Commission on or after April 1, 1995, and which is located within one thousand five hundred (1,500) feet of a school, church or public library building, shall not conduct bingo sessions during the hours of the school day or during church or library hours.

(2) The total amount of prizes which may be awarded in any one (1) session by a licensee shall not exceed Seven Thousand Five Hundred Dollars ($7,500.00) in cash or other thing or things of value, except as otherwise provided in Section 97-33-59 and except that the total amount of prizes which may be awarded in any one (1) session shall not exceed Eight Thousand Dollars

($8,000.00) if only one (1) session is held in any one (1) week. The Seven Thousand Five Hundred Dollars ($7,500.00) and the Eight Thousand Dollars ($8,000.00) limits do not include payback of pull-tabs or electronic representations. The commission shall establish by rule the method of calculating the value of anything offered as a prize.

(3) Each licensee shall designate a supervisor and a sufficient number of alternate supervisors to be in charge of and primarily responsible for each session of a bingo game. Such individual shall be familiar with the provisions of Sections 97-33-51 through 97-33-203 and the rules and regulations of the commission. Such individual, or alternate who shall be designated as the bingo supervisor, shall supervise all activities of such session and be responsible for the conduct of all games of such session. The supervisor shall be present at all times on the premises during the session.

(4) No licensee shall purchase or otherwise obtain any gaming supplies or equipment from any distributor, operator or manufacturer until it has first determined that the individual selling or otherwise offering such supplies or equipment has a valid license issued by the commission.

(5) No licensee shall allow any person under eighteen (18) years of age to assist in the holding, operation or conduct of any bingo game. No licensee shall allow any person under eighteen (18) years of age to play a bingo game unless accompanied by his or her parent or legal guardian, except that a licensee may prohibit all persons under eighteen (18) years from entering the licensed premises by posting a written notice to that effect on the premises.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.

This section does not exist to criminalize the actions of one designated by the statutory signatory to act on his behalf when necessary, but to prevent the operation of any aspect of the games by those not authorized to do so or those with an interest in the outcome of the games. Mississippi Gaming Comm'n v. Baker, 755 So. 2d 1129 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

ATTORNEY GENERAL OPINIONS

Any bingo operation that received its original license prior to April 1, 1995, would be exempt from the provisions of subsection (1)(b) of this section. However, the statute does not prohibit a bingo operation located within one thousand five hundred (1,500) feet of a school or library from receiving a license after April 1, 1995. Johnson, June 16, 1995, A.G. Op. #95-0281.

This section prohibits any bingo operation that receives its license after April 1, 1995, and that is located within one thousand five hundred (1,500) feet of a school or library from conducting bingo sessions during the hours of the school day or during library hours. Johnson, June 16, 1995, A.G. Op. #95-0281.

Pursuant to § 97-33-203 and this section, since a session is defined as a five-hour period of time, there is no need for the Gaming Commission to set a regulation which prorates the amount of prizes allowed or the rent to be paid based on the length of the session. Harvey, October 30, 1996, A.G. Op. #96-0719.

(2) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (3) of this section and as may be otherwise provided pursuant to subsection (10) of this section, no commission, salary, compensation, reward or recompense, including but not limited to granting or use of bingo cards without charge or at a reduced charge, shall be paid or given directly or indirectly to the bingo supervisor or alternate supervisor or any person related to such supervisor or alternate supervisor by blood, marriage or business relationship, for the holding, operating or conducting any licensed game or games of chance.

(3) Except as may be otherwise provided pursuant to subsection (10) of this section, any licensee may pay as compensation for all persons involved in the holding, operating or conducting of any licensed game or games of chance, an amount not to exceed Four Hundred Dollars ($400.00) per session. Persons who may be compensated from the Four Hundred Dollars ($400.00) per session amount may include the bingo supervisor or alternate supervisor, callers, runners and cashiers. Neither the bingo supervisor nor any alternate supervisor, or any person related to such supervisor by blood, marriage or business relationship, while being compensated as the bingo supervisor, shall receive any other compensation, directly or indirectly, from the licensee. (4)(a) Any corporation, person or entity operating bingo games, under contract, for the benefit of organizations as prescribed in subsection (3) of this section shall be restricted to operating such games for a limit of one (1) such organization authorized to pay employees up to a maximum of Four Hundred Dollars ($400.00) per session. Such corporation, person or entity shall only be authorized to conduct such sessions at one (1) physical location or building.

(b) Any corporation, person or entity operating bingo games, under contract, for the benefit of organizations as prescribed in subsection (3) of this section shall have a written contract with the organization and shall be subject to any rules and regulations promulgated by the commission for the purpose of investigating or regulating contracting agents.

(5) Except as may be otherwise provided pursuant to subsection (10) of this section, no manufacturer, operator, distributor, commercial lessor, or his agents or employees, who directly or indirectly leases premises, sells, leases, otherwise distributes gaming supplies or equipment, or furnishes any commodities or services, in relation to the conducting of any bingo game pursuant to Sections 97-33-51 through 97-33-203 shall take part in the holding, operation or conducting of a bingo game. However, nothing in this section shall prohibit the owner of a premises from having a representative present to protect his interests in the premises.

(6) Except as may be otherwise provided pursuant to subsection (10) of this section, no bingo game shall be conducted with any supplies or equipment except such as shall be owned by the licensee, provided without payment of any compensation by the licensee or purchased from a licensed manufacturer or distributor of such supplies or equipment.

(7) Except as may be otherwise provided pursuant to subsection (10) of this section, no item of expense shall be incurred or paid in connection with the holding, operating or conducting of any bingo game by a licensee, except:

(b) The actual and reasonable costs incurred in obtaining and performing necessary bookkeeping, security and janitorial services for the holding, operating or conducting of the bingo game. The reasonableness of the amounts of, and the necessity for, an expense authorized by this subsection shall be determined by the commission.

(8) Except as may be otherwise provided pursuant to subsection (10) of this section, no licensee shall pay any consulting fees to any person for any service performed in relation to the conducting of any charitable game of chance or concession fees to any person who provides refreshments to the participants in any such games.

(9) Except as may be otherwise provided pursuant to subsection (10) of this section, no lease providing for a rental arrangement for premises or equipment shall provide for payment in excess of the reasonable market rental rate for such premises or equipment, and in no case shall any payment be based on a percentage of gross receipts or profits derived from a bingo game. Whether a market rental rate is reasonable shall be determined by the commission.

(10) Administrative exceptions to the provisions of this section with regard to organizations which have demonstrated to the Mississippi Gaming Commission a practice of legitimate operation of such games, may be made by the Mississippi Gaming Commission pursuant to its rules and regulations, as duly adopted and promulgated by the commission; provided that such an administrative exception shall be no more restrictive than the provision of law to which it is an exception.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.
2. Compensation.

1. In general.

This section does not exist to criminalize the actions of one designated by the statutory signatory to act on his behalf when necessary, but to prevent the operation of any aspect of the games by those not authorized to do so or those with an interest in the outcome of the games. Mississippi Gaming Comm'n v. Baker, 755 So. 2d 1129 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

2. Compensation.

While § 97-33-67(1)(a) allows a charity to operate video bingo and pull-tabs out-of-session, the compensation paid to its employees for working during that time must be included in the session pay limitation; thus, pursuant to subsection (3) of this section, the maximum allowable compensation for any two-week period is $400 times 16, or $6,400.00. His Way Homes, Inc. v. Mississippi Gaming Comm'n, 733 So. 2d 764 (Miss. 1999).

ATTORNEY GENERAL OPINIONS

Subsection (4)(a) of this section, does not create an exception to the mandate that "members-in-charge" not be compen-

(a) A verified statement showing the amount of the gross receipts derived from each bingo game, which shall include receipts from the sale of shares, tickets or rights in any manner connected with participation in said game;

(b) Each item of expense incurred or paid, and each item of expenditure made or to be made;

(c) The name and address of each person to whom each such item has been paid or is to be paid, with a detailed description of the merchandise purchased or the service rendered therefor;

(d) The net profit derived from each such bingo game and the uses to which such net profit has been or is to be applied;

(e) A list of prizes offered or given, with the respective values thereof;

(f) The number of participants in each game.

(2) Each licensee shall maintain and keep such books and records as may be necessary to substantiate the particulars of each such report.

(3) All licensees shall maintain records and submit reports as provided by rules of the commission. Such rules may require that all income of a licensee derived from charitable bingo games be recorded to the extent necessary to disclose gross and net income.

1. Appraisals.

The Gaming Commission may reject an appraisal submitted pursuant to subsection (2) of this section and may require another appraisal to aid it in determining the reasonableness of the proposed rental

ATTORNEY GENERAL OPINIONS

Pursuant to this section and § 97-33-67 since a session is defined as a five-hour period of time, there is no need for the Gaming Commission to set a regulation which prorates the amount of prizes allowed or the rent to be paid based on the length of the session. Harvey, October 30, 1996, A.G. Op. #96-0719.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.

Persons arrested for violating ordinances by parading without a permit, in an anti-segregation demonstration, held not entitled to habeas corpus in federal court on ground that mass arrests had so invaded state courts as to deprive them of an adequate remedy under state law. Brown v. Rayfield, 320 F.2d 96 (5th Cir. 1963), cert. denied, 375 U.S. 902, 84 S. Ct. 191, 11 L. Ed. 2d 143 (1963).

The constitutionality of this section [Code 1942, § 2087. 7] was challenged in Bailey v. Patterson, 199 F. Supp. 595, in which it was held, in view of the involvement of factual issues, that the federal court would withhold action until the state courts should pass upon the issues; but this decision was vacated in 369 U.S. 31, 7 L. Ed. 2d 512, 82 S. Ct. 549, which, affirming that no state may require racial segregation of interstate or intrastate transportation facilities, held that the claim that the statutes so requiring are not unconstitutional was frivolous, and therefore not one in which a three-judge federal district court is required. The appellants, however, were held to lack standing to enjoin criminal prosecutions under the breach of peace statutes, not having been prosecuted, or threatened with prosecution, under them. Bailey v. Patterson, 369 U.S. 31, 82 S. Ct. 549, 7 L. Ed. 2d 512 (1962).

§ 97-35-7. Disorderly conduct; failure to comply with requests or commands of law enforcement officers; penalties; exception.

(1) Whoever, with intent to provoke a breach of the peace, or under such circumstances as may lead to a breach of the peace, or which may cause or occasion a breach of the peace, fails or refuses to promptly comply with or obey a request, command, or order of a law enforcement officer, having the authority to then and there arrest any person for a violation of the law, to:

(a) Move or absent himself and any vehicle or object subject to his control from the immediate vicinity where the request, command or order is given, or

(b) Arise, if lying or sitting down, and move to a point designated by said officer outside the immediate area of, or which is affected by the occurrences at, the place of issuing such order, command or request, or

(c) Refrain from lying down or sitting down at, or in the immediate vicinity of, the place where said order, request or command is given, or

(d) Refrain from obstructing, with his body or any part thereof, or in any manner, the lawful movement or passage of any vehicle, or

(e) Refrain from placing, or permitting, or cooperating with another to place, his body or any part thereof, in front of or behind any vehicle, in such manner as to interfere with, or prevent its movement or block its path in lawful movement, or

(f) Refrain from chaining or tying or binding himself or another to any object or person, or

(g) Unbind, unchain or loosen himself, or remove himself, from any chain or other means whereby he may be prevented from moving away from the place or the immediate vicinity where he may be when such officer issues said order, request or command, or

(h) Walk or move to, enter and remain in, either or both, as may be directed by such officer, any police or other vehicle operated by any law enforcement officer or department, or any other vehicle designated by such an officer, or

(i) Act or do or refrain from acting or doing as ordered, requested or commanded by said officer to avoid any breach of the peace at or near the place of issuance of such order, request or command, shall be guilty of disorderly conduct, which is made a misdemeanor and, upon conviction thereof, such person or persons shall be punished by a fine of not more than Five Hundred Dollars ($500.00) or imprisonment in the county jail for not more than six (6) months, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

(2) Any person who causes, or aids, or encourages, or abets another to violate, or in violating, any provision of subsection (1) hereof, shall be guilty of disorderly conduct which is made a misdemeanor and, upon conviction thereof, such person or persons shall be punished by a fine of not more than Five Hundred Dollars ($500.00) or imprisonment in the county jail for not more than six (6) months, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

(3) If any person alone or in concert with others violates subsection (1) or (2) hereof, or both, under such circumstances or in such a manner as to evince a willful and wanton disregard for the life or safety of another and if as a result thereof another person or persons be injured, maimed or killed, the person or persons so violating subsection (1) or (2) hereof, or both, shall be guilty of a felony and, upon conviction thereof, such person or persons shall be imprisoned in the State Penitentiary not longer than five (5) years or be fined not more than Two Thousand Dollars ($2,000.00), or both such fine and imprisonment.

(4) The act of breast-feeding shall not constitute disorderly conduct.

(5) The provisions of this section are supplementary to the provisions of any other statutes of this state.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.
2. Sufficiency of evidence.
3. Fighting words.

1. In general.

Officer had reasonable suspicion to investigate a suspicious white vehicle following a report of a vehicle theft, and then probable cause to detain its occupants for further questioning in light of their failure to respond and resisting arrest. Qualls v. State, 947 So. 2d 365 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Probable cause existed to arrest the defendant for a violation of this section where he was found on a driveway behind a county jail, the driveway was owned by the county and was never dedicated as a public thoroughfare, and defendant was on notice that the area was off-limits because he had previously been forbidden from coming into the area. Bigham v. Huffman, — F. Supp. 2d —, 1999 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 16542 (N.D. Miss. Oct. 9, 1999), affirmed without opinion by 218 F.3d 744, 2000 U.S. App. LEXIS 15292 (5th Cir. Miss. 2000).

Disorderly conduct demonstrated by failure to obey the commands or requests of a law enforcement officer is a punishable offense. Merritt v. State, 497 So. 2d 811 (Miss. 1986).

2. Sufficiency of evidence.

Police officer had the authority to arrest a thirteen-year-old juvenile for committing a breach of the peace because the juvenile refused to comply with the officer's reasonable instructions to put the juvenile's hands on a patrol car, when the officer responded to a report that gunshots had been fired in the area from a car that matched the description of the car defendant was standing near. S.M.K.S. v. Youth Court of Union County, — So. 3d —, 2014 Miss. App. LEXIS 2 (Miss. Ct. App. Jan. 7, 2014).

Evidence was sufficient to convict defendant of disorderly conduct and the verdict was not against the weight of the evidence because, although instructed by the officer to refrain from using his cell phone for the safety of the officer and others at the scene, defendant continued to use his cell phone. Matthews v. City of Madison, — So. 3d —, 2013 Miss. App. LEXIS 611 (Miss. Ct. App. Sept. 17, 2013).

In a wrongful death action filed by the parents of two passengers who were killed during a police pursuit of the driver of a stolen vehicle, a city was properly granted summary judgment because the passengers were engaged in criminal activity, as there was no dispute that they knew that the car was stolen and that they encouraged the driver to flee from the police, in violation of Miss. Code Ann. § 97-35-7(2). McCoy v. City of Florence, 949 So. 2d 69 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), writ of certiorari denied by 949 So. 2d 37, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 113 (Miss. 2007).

Evidence that defendant, who was a guest in arrestee's mother's home, refused to allow police to search home to find the arrestee, after officer informed defendant of felony warrant and inquired about arrestee's presence in the home, that defendant denied arrestee's presence and insisted that he was alone in the home, and that arrestee was subsequently found hiding behind insulation in attic was sufficient to support conviction for disorderly conduct. Bovan v. State, 706 So. 2d 254 (Miss. 1997).

Issue of whether exigent circumstances supported ultimate search and arrest of arrestee in home where defendant was a guest was irrelevant to issue of defendant's guilt for disorderly conduct, based on his refusal to allow police to search home. Bovan v. State, 706 So. 2d 254 (Miss. 1997).

3. Fighting words.

Defendant's free speech rights were not violated by his warrantless arrest where the confrontation occurred not out in public but at the sheriff's department, the officer neither initiated nor had an opportunity to walk away from defendant's words and combative conduct, defendant became agitated and began shouting profanities when the officer told him about the protocol he would have to follow to retrieve his vehicle from the impound lot, and defendant did not stop with simply expressing his displeasure. He was combative, and he created a stalemate that arose to the level of "fighting words" that were likely to inflict injury or incite an immediate breach of the peace. Odem v. State, 881 So. 2d 940 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.

This section [Code 1942, § 2088] and Code 1942, § 2089 are intended to protect the peace of families. An affidavit or indictment, averring the disturbance merely of an individual, charges no offense under either section: Brooks v. State, 67 Miss. 577, 7 So. 494 (1890).

What constitutes the offensive conduct, or the nature or character of the offensive conduct, should be stated in the affidavit or indictment. Finch v. State, 64 Miss. 461, 1 So. 630 (1886).

Any person who enters the dwelling house of another, or the yard or curtilage thereof, or upon the public highway, or any other place near such premises, and in the presence or hearing of the family or the possessor or occupant thereof, or of any member thereof, makes use of abusive, profane, vulgar or indecent language, or is guilty of any indecent exposure of his or her person at such place, shall be punished for a misdemeanor. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.
2. Indictment or affidavit charging offense.
3. Proof.

1. In general.

Notwithstanding that a portion of the sentence imposed upon a defendant indicted for violating this section [Code 1942, § 2089] had been suspended, an appeal brought more than six months after judgment was entered on a guilty plea was barred by a statute requiring, with certain exceptions, that an appeal be brought to the supreme court within six months of its rendition. Dickerson v. State, 150 Miss. 823, 117 So. 261 (1928).

2. Indictment or affidavit charging offense.

Setting out language used without use of the word "unlawful" does not charge any offense. Wade v. State, 100 Miss. 802, 57 So. 222 (1911).

Affidavit charging use of profane language in a public place must allege the particular public place. State v. Shanks, 88 Miss. 410, 40 So. 1005 (1906); Files v. State, 96 Miss. 257, 50 So. 979 (1910).

An indictment charging the use of abusive language in the public highway near the premises of another and in the presence of a member of the latter's family, is insufficient. State v. Reed, 76 Miss. 211, 24 So. 308, 71 Am. St. R. 528 (1898).

3. Proof.

In a prosecution for disturbing the peace, the trial court erred in failing to give a preemptory instruction of not guilty where the alleged incident took place in the home of the defendant's mother and where the state failed to specifically prove the words used and the things done which constituted the alleged offense. Taylor v. State, 396 So. 2d 39 (Miss. 1981).

Indictment for disturbing peace by entering dwelling was supported by proof that defendant came onto front porch of residence. Moree v. State, 152 Miss. 278, 119 So. 202 (1928).

Failure of city to prove the use of loud and boisterous language as charged in affidavit is fatal to conviction. Culpepper v. City of Meridian, 123 Miss. 527, 86 So. 338 (1920).

Place is material. An indictment charging the use of abusive language in a yard is not sustained by proof of its use near the yard. Quin v. State, 65 Miss. 479, 4 So. 548 (1888).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.
2. Fighting words.

1. In general.

A county court’s enhancement of a defendant’s sentence for breach of the peace from $50 to $250 on appeal from the municipal court, was proper since the fine fell within the breach of the peace statute’s sentencing guideline and there was no evidence that the enhancement was reflective of judicial vindictiveness. Jones v. City of Meridian, 552 So. 2d 820 (Miss. 1989).

The breach of the peace statute, this section, is not unconstitutionally vague. Although the statute may have been constructed with broad language and could arguably be construed in a manner which would reach constitutionally protected speech or conduct, a statute may not be construed “so as to infringe upon the state or federally protected constitutional rights” of any individual. Jones v. City of Meridian, 552 So. 2d 820 (Miss. 1989).

2. Fighting words.

Defendant’s free speech rights were not violated by his warrantless arrest where the confrontation occurred not out in public but at the sheriff’s department, the officer neither initiated nor had an opportunity to walk away from defendant’s words and combative conduct, defendant became agitated and began shouting profanities when the officer told him about the protocol he would have to follow to retrieve his vehicle from the impound lot, and defendant did not stop with simply expressing his displeasure. He was combative, and he created a stalemate that rose to the level of “fighting words” that were likely to inflict injury or incite an immediate breach of the peace. Odem v. State, 881 So. 2d 940 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. Constitutionality.
2. Construction and application.

1. Constitutionality.

As interpreted by the state courts, this section is not unconstitutional. McLaurin v. Burnley, 279 F. Supp. 220 (N.D. Miss. 1967), aff'd, 401 F.2d 773 (5th Cir. 1968), cert. denied, 399 U.S. 928, 90 S. Ct. 2228, 26 L. Ed. 2d 795 (1970).

Although this section [Code 1942, § 2089.5] as drawn is in broad terms, it is not unconstitutional upon its face, and it may not be so construed as to infringe upon the state or federally protected constitutional rights of any person. McLaurin v. Greenville, 187 So. 2d 854 (Miss. 1966), cert. denied, 385 U.S. 1011, 17 L. Ed. 2d 548, 87 S. Ct. 704 (1967); McLaurin v. Greenville, 187 So. 2d 860 (Miss. 1966), cert. denied, 385 U.S. 1011, 87 S. Ct. 704, 17 L. Ed. 2d 548 (1967); Cobb v. Greenville, 187 So. 2d 861 (Miss. 1966).

The constitutionality of this section [Code 1942, § 2089. 5] was challenged in Bailey v. Patterson, 199 F Supp 595, in which it was held, in view of the involvement of factual issues, that the federal court would withhold action until the state courts should pass upon the issues; but this decision was vacated in 369 U.S. 31, 7 L. Ed. 2d 512, 82 S. Ct. 549, which, affirming that no state may require racial segregation of interstate or intrastate transportation facilities, held that the claim that the statutes so requiring are not unconstitutional was frivolous, and therefore not one in which a three-judge Federal district court is required. The appellants, however, were held to lack standing to enjoin criminal prosecutions under the breach of peace statutes, not having been prosecuted, or threatened with prosecution, under them. Bailey v. Patterson, 199 F. Supp. 595 (S.D. Miss. 1961), vacated, 369 U.S. 31, 82 S. Ct. 549, 7 L. Ed. 2d 512 (1962).

2. Construction and application.

Grant of summary judgment in favor of the employer and against the employees was appropriate in part because, even if it was found that the supervisor had violated Miss. Code Ann. § 97-35-15 or Miss. Code Ann. § 97-35-3 [Repealed], the issue failed to rise to the necessary level to fit into the exceptions to the employment-at-will doctrine; there was no evidence that the supervisor's conduct was reported because it was illegal. Jones v. Fluor Daniel Servs. Corp., 959 So. 2d 1044 (Miss. 2007).

Where the victim was shot by her estranged husband after an arrest warrant was issued, but never delivered to the sheriff's department, there was ample probable cause to arrest through Miss. Code Ann. § 99-3-7(3), based upon Miss. Code Ann. § 97-35-15. However, reckless disregard required that the person knowingly or intentionally commit a wrongful act and even viewing the facts in a light most favorable to the victim, the victim showed no evidence that the sheriff's department knew that it could and/or was required to arrest the victim's estranged husband; the sheriff's department's conduct, even if negligent, could not be said to have risen to the level of reckless disregard, and therefore, Miss. Code Ann. § 11-46-9(c) did provide immunity based upon the sheriff's department's conduct, and summary judgment was proper as to the sheriff's department. Collins v. Tallahatchie County, 876 So. 2d 284 (Miss. 2004).

In a prosecution for disturbing the peace, the trial court erred in failing to give a preemptory instruction of not guilty where the alleged incident took place in the home of the defendant's mother and where the state failed to specifically prove the words used and the things done which constituted the alleged offense. Taylor v. State, 396 So. 2d 39 (Miss. 1981).

In view of the provisions of Code 1942, § 7185-03, the youth court does not have jurisdiction of a minor charged with disturbing the peace in violation of Code 1942, § 2089.5. Boatright v. Yalobusha County Youth Court, 223 So. 2d 303 (Miss. 1969).

Although Mississippi has required by statute that the complaining witness' testimony be corroborated in prosecutions for certain sexual offenses (e.g. Code 1942, §§ 2359, 2374), the state courts have specifically held that the requirement for corroboration is confined to those offenses wherein the statute expressly so provides, and no such corroboration is required in prosecution of defendant for disturbing the peace of the complaining witness, on allegations that the defendant had touched complainant's private parts. Henry v. Williams, 299 F. Supp. 36 (N.D. Miss. 1969).

This section [Code 1942, § 2089.5] evinces a legislative judgment that speech which is either calculated to lead to a breach of the peace or which may lead to a breach of the peace should be regulated. McLaurin v. Burnley, 279 F. Supp. 220 (N.D. Miss. 1967), aff'd, 401 F.2d 773 (5th Cir. 1968), cert. denied, 399 U.S. 928, 90 S. Ct. 2228, 26 L. Ed. 2d 795 (1970).

This section [Code 1942, § 2089.5], as interpreted by the Supreme Court of Mississippi, permits a conviction for speech only if that speech was calculated to lead to a breach of the peace or was of such a nature as ultimately led to a breach of the peace, and there can be no conviction under this section for peaceably exercising the right of free speech. McLaurin v. Burnley, 279 F. Supp. 220 (N.D. Miss. 1967), aff'd, 401 F.2d 773 (5th Cir. 1968), cert. denied, 399 U.S. 928, 90 S. Ct. 2228, 26 L. Ed. 2d 795 (1970).

In a prosecution for disturbing the peace, the trial court erred in failing to give a preemptory instruction of not guilty where the alleged incident took place in the home of the defendant's mother and where the state failed to specifically prove the words used and the things done which constituted the alleged offense. Taylor v. State, 396 So. 2d 39 (Miss. 1981).

In view of the provisions of Code 1942, § 7185-03, the youth court does not have jurisdiction of a minor charged with disturbing the peace in violation of Code 1942, § 2089.5. Boatright v. Yalobusha County Youth Court, 223 So. 2d 303 (Miss. 1969).

This section [Code 1942, § 2089.5] clearly prohibits any loud, violent, or boisterous conduct which may disturb or lead to disturbances of the public peace, and where the evidence showed that the conduct of the defendants violated the provisions of the section and that disturbances occurred as a consequence, injunctive relief against the prosecution and incarceration of the defendants must be denied. United States v. Leflore County, 371 F.2d 368 (5th Cir. 1967).

By instructing the jury that if the defendant was arrested for public protest against racial segregation he could not be found guilty, the instruction constituted recognition that this section [Code 1942, § 2089.5] could not be applied to restrict defendant's constitutional right so to protest, and that it could not be used to infringe upon the constitutional right of any person to speak freely within the framework of the law. McLaurin v. Greenville, 187 So. 2d 854 (Miss. 1966), cert. denied, 385 U.S. 1011, 17 L. Ed. 2d 548, 87 S. Ct. 704 (1967); Cobb v. Greenville, 187 So. 2d 861 (Miss. 1966).

A narrow and specific construction of this section [Code 1942, § 2089.5] limiting it to situations where, as applied to persons exercising a guaranteed constitutional right in a peaceful manner, they refuse to obey a police order to move on if, but only if, there is a clear and present danger of riot, or other threat to public safety, peace, or order, is untenable in view of the decisions of the United States Supreme Court. Bolton v. City of Greenville, 253 Miss. 656, 178 So. 2d 667 (1965).

The constitutional rights of a defendant, legally present in a public place, and neither committing nor threatening a breach of the peace, cannot be denied because of hostility, for some unknown reason, on the part of a group of white citizens. Bolton v. City of Greenville, 253 Miss. 656, 178 So. 2d 667 (1965).

In a prosecution for disturbing the peace on public school grounds, there was prejudicial error, requiring reversal, where the school principal was permitted to testify, over objection, that the accused had been dishonorably discharged from the Air Force, that the accused had told the principal that the accused had been expelled from another school for stealing, and that accused had had fights with other students. Willis v. State, 250 Miss. 334, 165 So. 2d 154 (1964).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.
2. Indictment.

1. In general.

Criminal statute prohibiting disorderly conduct by failing or refusing to promptly reply with or obey request or order of law enforcement officer was not unconstitutionally vague under due process clause as applied to arcade owner who carried baseball bat toward small crowd in his parking lot; regardless of whether owner was cursing or threatening officer, presence of baseball bat greatly enhanced possibility of grievous injury to police officers or others if disturbance escalated, case concerned officer's right to control conduct greatly increasing potential for sudden violence, and statute provided adequate notice that failure to obey order under the circumstances could result in arrest. Smith v. City of Picayune, 701 So. 2d 1101 (Miss. 1997).

Abusive and obscene language addressed to deacon of church while in act of taking up collection just outside of church would constitute disturbance of member of congregation. Stovall v. State, 173 Miss. 755, 163 So. 504 (1935).

Disturbance of single member of congregation assembled for religious worship is in contemplation of law disturbance of congregation. Stovall v. State, 173 Miss. 755, 163 So. 504 (1935).

In prosecution for obstructing justice by assisting in escape of one being arrested for disturbance of church congregation, whether party who escaped was creating disturbance which warranted his arrest and thus made assisting his escape an obstruction to justice held for jury. Stovall v. State, 173 Miss. 755, 163 So. 504 (1935).

In prosecution for obstructing justice, whether accused assisted party who was allegedly creating disturbance to escape from officer making arrest held for jury. Stovall v. State, 173 Miss. 755, 163 So. 504 (1935).

2. Indictment.

Indictment charging accused unlawfully and wilfully disturbed "a congregation of persons lawfully assembled at Prospect Church for religious worship, by then and there talking in a loud tone of voice in the presence and hearing of said congregation," held sufficient. State v. Sowell, 102 Miss. 599, 59 So. 848 (1912).

Indictment is defective fatally if it fail to state the nature or character of the disturbance. Conerly v. State, 66 Miss. 96, 5 So. 625 (1889).

subsection (2) of this section is entitled to sue for and have injunctive relief and appropriate remedial compensation in any court of competent jurisdiction against any damage or threatened loss or injury by reason of a violation thereof.

Containers which contain heavy duty hydraulic brake fluid which meets the minimum standards of the society of automotive engineers shall bear the stamp or mark “SAE 70R1,” or a later SAE designator, stamp or mark may be used, if the same is assigned to the hydraulic brake fluid on the basis of its being an improved product. (2) It shall be unlawful for any person to sell or offer for sale, any type or brand of hydraulic brake fluid which does not meet the minimum standards of the society of automotive engineers or the container of which does not bear the stamp or mark “SAE 70R1” or a later designator for an improved product, and it shall be unlawful for any person to mark any container of hydraulic brake fluid with the minimum standard number mentioned herein if the container does not in fact contain fluid which meets such minimum standards, or to offer for sale any such fluid which has been improperly marked. The State Chemist is hereby vested with all the rights, powers and duties necessary to administer this section and to adopt and promulgate reasonable rules and regulations for its accomplishment. Any person violating the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and, upon conviction, shall be fined not less than Ten Dollars ($10.00), nor more than Twenty-five Dollars ($25.00), for each violation, and each sale of such unlawful hydraulic brake fluid shall constitute a separate offense and violation of this section.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.
2. Who is a vagrant.

1. In general.

In vagrancy prosecution based on non-support, evidence of misconduct of defendant's wife prior to marriage held not admissible. Runnels v. State, 154 Miss. 621, 122 So. 769 (1929).

A bill by children, who have been abandoned, to ascertain what amount is sufficient for their support, and for a decree that such amount be paid monthly by the father, cannot be entertained. Rawlings v. Rawlings, 121 Miss. 140, 83 So. 146, 7 A.L.R. 1259 (1919).

The offense is a continuing one and prosecution is not barred by a former prosecution for the same offense. McRae v. State, 104 Miss. 861, 61 So. 977 (1913).

Trial of a husband and father for vagrancy for failure to support his wife and child is in effect a controversy between the husband and wife and the wife is competent to testify against him. McRae v. State, 104 Miss. 861, 61 So. 977 (1913).

Plea of former jeopardy of a defendant charged with abandoning his wife and children and failing to support them, held insufficient as failing to show that since the date of the former trial he had supported his family or that his wife continued to refuse to live with him. Vance v. State, 104 Miss. 227, 61 So. 305 (1913).

This section [Code 1942, § 2666], par. i, does not exclude the right to prosecute such person for keeping a bawdyhouse, as the latter offense, which is distinct from vagrancy, is an offense at common law, which still prevails in Mississippi, where not abrogated by statute. Gavin v. State, 96 Miss. 377, 50 So. 498 (1909).

2. Who is a vagrant.

A person who has sufficient money on hand from legitimate sources to take care of all his decent needs as a respectable member of the community without any imposition on others is not a vagrant within the meaning of paragraph (k) this section [Code 1942, § 2666], although he does no work and keeps his money concealed on his person or in some hidden depository. Gentry v. Town of Booneville, 199 Miss. 1, 24 So. 2d 88 (1945).

Proof that the accused "has no visible means of support" makes out a prima facie case for the prosecution and is sufficient to sustain a conviction unless the accused proceeds with proof that he has money or means, legitimately obtained, sufficient to take care of his decent needs, although hidden or otherwise not open and apparent, whereupon the question then becomes one of fact to be determined by the jury. However, the jury is not bound to accept the unsupported testimony of the accused even though no witness is produced who is able to testify directly to the contrary. Gentry v. Town of Booneville, 199 Miss. 1, 24 So. 2d 88 (1945).

Whenever any person shall have been convicted of being a vagrant, the justice of the peace or mayor or police justice by whom such person was tried shall commit the person to jail for not less than ten nor more than thirty days, or shall require such person to give bond, with sufficient security, to be approved by said justice or mayor or police justice, in any sum not less than two hundred and one dollars, for the future industry and good conduct of such person for one year from the date of giving of such bond.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.

Provision relating to liberation of one committed to jail for vagrancy, if invasion of pardoning power, held separable from provision fixing penalty. Runnels v. State, 154 Miss. 621, 122 So. 769 (1929).

The court cannot require one convicted of vagrancy to give bond to keep the peace for two years, and such provision renders the whole judgment excessive and unlawful. Daniels v. State, 110 Miss. 440, 70 So. 458 (1916).

Trial of a husband and father for vagrancy for failure to support his wife and child is in effect a controversy between the husband and wife and the wife is competent to testify against him. McRae v. State, 104 Miss. 861, 61 So. 977 (1913).

Judgment imposing a sentence and requiring a bond is unauthorized, after suspension of sentence during good behavior without the requirement of a bond, under a former plea of guilty, though accused's misbehavior is renewed. Warwick v. State, 102 Miss. 143, 59 So. 2 (1912).

It being shown that defendants, charged with being common prostitutes, had no other means of support, did not work, but habitually arrayed themselves in the evening and sat on the front steps or strolled on the street and solicited men, who went into the house with them, when the doors would be closed, together with evidence of other like acts, a conviction will not be disturbed. In such cases direct proof of guilt is not required; it may be inferred from circumstances. Peabody v. State, 72 Miss. 104, 17 So. 213 (1894).

One charged with vagrancy and required by a justice of the peace to give bond for good behavior or be committed to jail may appeal to the circuit court. Jones v. State, 70 Miss. 398, 12 So. 710 (1893).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.

Judgment imposing a sentence and requiring a bond is unauthorized, after suspension of sentence during good behavior without the requirement of a bond, under a former plea of guilty, though accused's misbehavior is renewed. Warwick v. State, 102 Miss. 143, 59 So. 2 (1912).

It was error to inflict the punishment provided for the second offense on defendant's first conviction thereof. Oaks v. State, 100 Miss. 737, 57 So. 1 (1912).

(4) For the purposes of this section, "concealed" means hidden or obscured from common observation and shall not include any weapon listed in subsection (1) of this section, including, but not limited to, a loaded or unloaded pistol carried upon the person in a sheath, belt holster or shoulder holster that is wholly or partially visible, or carried upon the person in a scabbard or case for carrying the weapon that is wholly or partially visible.

3. Weapons to which statute applies.
4. Concealment; mode of carrying.
5. Indictment or affidavit charging offense.
6. Instructions.
7. Double jeopardy.

1. In general.

The evidence was insufficient to support a conviction for carrying a concealed weapon under this section where the State presented no evidence to prove that the shotgun carried by the defendant had a barrel length of less than 18 inches; a gun with a barrel length in excess of 18 inches does not fall within the ambit of this section, and, therefore, the length of the barrel was an indispensable, statutory element which the State was required to prove beyond a reasonable doubt. Carlson v. State, 597 So. 2d 657 (Miss. 1992).

A high school student was properly adjudicated delinquent for having handguns on school grounds, where the guns were found in the student's locker, the student had exclusive possession of the locker and kept it under lock and key, and a second student testified that the first student had offered to sell him 2 handguns and had told him that he had the guns at school. S.C. v. State, 583 So. 2d 188 (Miss. 1991).

In the trial of a capital murder charge, no reversible error resulted from allowing testimony which sought to elicit the fact that a sawed-off shotgun barrel produces enhanced danger and a more severe wound when fired than does a barrel of regulation length. Wiley v. State, 484 So. 2d 339 (Miss. 1986), cert. denied, 479 U.S. 906, 107 S. Ct. 304, 93 L. Ed. 2d 278

(1986), reh'g denied, 479 U.S. 999, 107 S. Ct. 604, 93 L. Ed. 2d 604 (1986), overruled on other grounds, Willie v. State, 585 So. 2d 660 (Miss. 1991), vacated, 635 So. 2d 802 (Miss. 1993).

The effect of double enhancement where the crime of carrying a concealed weapon after conviction of a felony is combined with sentencing under the habitual offenders statute does not render the latter statute unconstitutional. Failure of the state to specify in an indictment which section of the habitual criminal statute, § 99-19-81 or § 99-19-83, applies to a defendant is not error since the statutes are not criminal offenses and only affect sentencing. Osborne v. State, 404 So. 2d 545 (Miss. 1981).

Throwing flashlight on person on street held not unlawful search, rendering incompetent evidence thus secured that she was unlawfully carrying a pistol partly concealed. Daniels v. City of Gulfport, 146 Miss. 517, 112 So. 686 (1927).

This section [Code 1942, § 2079] is constitutional and under it one cannot carry a concealed weapon in his own home. Wilson v. State, 81 Miss. 404, 33 So. 171 (1903).

The statute makes the fact of carrying a weapon concealed criminal, regardless of intent. Strahan v. State, 68 Miss. 347, 8 So. 844 (1891).

The act of 1888, amendatory of the Code 1880, on the subject of carrying weapons concealed, was ex post facto in its application to offenses previously committed. (1) It cut off a defense, and (2) it changed, but did not mitigate, the penalty. Lindsey v. State, 65 Miss. 542, 5 So. 99 (1888); Hodnett v. State, 66 Miss. 26, 5 So. 518 (1888).

2. Construction.

The fact that a defendant is a priorly convicted felon is a necessary element of finding a defendant guilty of possession of a firearm by a priorly convicted felon and therefore must be presented to the jury during the guilt phase of a trial. Evans v. State, 802 So. 2d 137 (Miss. Ct. App. 2001).

The court rejected the contention that § 97-37-5 should be read in pari materia with this section to permit a convicted felon to possess a firearm in his own home. James v. State, 731 So. 2d 1135 (Miss. 1999).

3. Weapons to which statute applies.

A pistol is a “deadly weapon” within statute denouncing the exhibition or carrying of such weapon, even without proof that the pistol is loaded or presently capable of committing a violent injury. Cittadino v. State, 199 Miss. 235, 24 So. 2d 93 (1945).

Carrying a pistol concealed is not necessarily a violation of this statute [Code 1942, § 2079]. Floyd v. Missouri State Life Ins. Co., 11 F. Supp. 1001 (S.D. Miss. 1935), aff’d, 84 F.2d 35 (5th Cir. 1936).

Worn out pistol totally beyond use as such, not a weapon. Burnside v. State, 105 Miss. 408, 62 So. 420 (1913).

Razor not deadly weapon. Brown v. State, 105 Miss. 367, 62 So. 353, Am. Ann. Cas. 1916E,307 (1913).

Object once a “pistol” does not cease to be one by becoming temporarily inefficient. Mitchell v. State, 99 Miss. 579, 55 So. 354, Am. Ann. Cas. 1913E,512 (1911).

Whether a weapon is deadly is a question of fact. State v. Sims, 80 Miss. 381, 31 So. 907 (1902).

An unloaded pistol is within this section [Code 1942, § 2079]. State v. Bollis, 73 Miss. 57, 19 So. 99 (1895).

4. Concealment; mode of carrying.

Where an inmate’s guilty plea for carrying a concealed weapon was based on the inmate’s action of having a pistol under a blanket in a van, counsel was ineffective for allowing the inmate to plead guilty because there was no factual basis for the charge since Miss. Code Ann. § 97-37-1(2) allowed the inmate to possess a concealed firearm or deadly weapon within any motor vehicle. Knight v. State, 983 So. 2d 348 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 981 So. 2d 298, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 267 (Miss. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 555 U.S. 998, 129 S. Ct. 492, 172 L. Ed. 2d 363, 2008 U.S. LEXIS 8079, 77 U.S.L.W. 3265 (2008).

A pistol seen under a leg of a motorist and removed by a patrolman who had halted the car to check the driver’s license is not obtained by an unlawful search and seizure so as to be inadmissible in a prosecution for carrying a concealed weapon. Morgan v. Town of Heidelberg, 246 Miss. 481, 150 So. 2d 512 (1963).

Carrying of pistol is within prohibition of statute where weapon is so carried that it is readily accessible. Clark v. City of Jackson, 155 Miss. 668, 124 So. 807 (1929).

Evidence showing pistol was on floor of automobile concealed by defendant’s feet held sufficient to sustain conviction for carrying concealed pistol. Clark v. City of Jackson, 155 Miss. 668, 124 So. 807 (1929).

Under ordinance in words of statute prohibiting carrying concealed pistols, one carrying pistol concealed in whole or in part is guilty regardless of intent. Clark v. City of Jackson, 155 Miss. 668, 124 So. 807 (1929).

Circumstances sufficient to go to the jury on issue of defendant carrying concealed pistol found under him when he arose from his seat. Duckworth v. Town of Taylorsville, 142 Miss. 440, 107 So. 666 (1926).

Person carrying deadly weapon only part of which is concealed, carries a “concealed weapon.” Martin v. State, 93 Miss. 764, 47 So. 426 (1908); Reed v. State, 199 So. 2d 803 (Miss. 1967), appeal dismissed, cert. denied, 390 U.S. 413, 88 S. Ct. 1113, 19 L. Ed. 2d 1273 (1968).

5. Indictment or affidavit charging offense.

In a prosecution for possession of a deadly weapon by a defendant previously convicted of a felony, failure to charge in the indictment that the weapon had been “concealed in whole or in part” as provided in this section did not entitle defendant to a directed verdict and a peremptory instruction of not guilty where the defense never objected to the defective indictment by means of a demurrer as required by § 99-7-21, where the defendant was fully informed of the charges against him by the inclusion in the indictment of § 97-37-5 in conjunction with this section, and where there was no statute making it a crime to carry a deadly weapon unless it was concealed in whole or in part. Jones v. State, 383 So. 2d 498 (Miss. 1980).

Section 97-37-5 requires that the indictment allege with particularity and specificity the state or federal jurisdiction of the prior felony conviction; additionally, such indictment must also substantially set forth the date of judgment of prior conviction, and nature or description of offense constituting previous felony conviction. Morgan v. United States Fid. & Guar. Co., 291 So. 2d 741 (Miss. 1974).

A charge under this section [Code 1942, § 2079] cannot be consolidated with a charge of exhibiting a deadly weapon (Code 1942, § 2086) and a charge of assault and battery with fists (Code 1942, § 2562), and one trial had of the consolidated case. Woods v. State, 200 Miss. 527, 27 So. 2d 895 (1946).

Affidavit charging defendant carried deadly weapon, to wit, a pistol concealed on his person, etc., but not charging that it was unlawfully carried, was fatally defective. Jordan v. State, 87 Miss. 170, 39 So. 895 (1905); Whittaker v. State, 45 So. 145 (Miss. 1908); Pitman v. State, 107 Miss. 154, 65 So. 123 (1914).

Since whether a weapon is deadly is a question of fact, an indictment is not demurrable because the weapon is not specifically mentioned in this statute [Code 1942, § 2079]. State v. Sims, 80 Miss. 381, 31 So. 907 (1902).

6. Instructions.

An instruction in a prosecution for assault and battery with intent to kill and murder, in which it was assumed that the pistol used was a deadly weapon, is not erroneous since the statute denominates a pistol as a deadly weapon. Rowland v. State, 182 Miss. 886, 183 So. 527 (1938).

Not error to instruct jury that if defendant carried concealed, in whole or in part, a pistol which was defective he would be guilty. Mitchell v. State, 99 Miss. 579, 55 So. 354, Am. Ann. Cas. 1913E,512 (1911).

7. Double jeopardy.

As a conviction of possession of a firearm by a convicted felon (Miss. Code Ann. § 97-37-5) required proof of a prior felony, while conviction of carrying a concealed weapon (Miss. Code Ann. § 97-37-1) required proof that the weapon be concealed, each offense had an element not present in the other; therefore, defendant's conviction of both charges did not violate the double jeopardy ban. Wilson v. State, 95 So. 3d 1282 (Miss. Ct. App. 2012).

ATTORNEY GENERAL OPINIONS

This section sets forth stated exceptions to state law which makes it crime to carry certain weapons, including handguns, concealed in whole or part, including in motor vehicle or in home or business, including property surrounding such home or business. Bowen, Jan. 14, 1993, A.G. Op. #92-0934.

Mace is not considered to be "deadly" weapon within meaning of 97-37-1. Parlin, March 10, 1994, A.G. Op. #93-0865.

Carrying a firearm in a wholly or partially visible sheath, holster, scabbard or case, even though no part of the firearm is visible, does not violate the concealed weapon statute (Section 97-37-1). Lance, June 13, 2013, 2013 Miss. AG LEXIS 111.

If enough of a firearm is visible so that it is readily apparent to common observation, the firearm is not concealed and there is no violation of Section 97-37-1. Lance, June 13, 2013, 2013 Miss. AG LEXIS 111.

While carrying a weapon in a visible belt holster on educational property would not violate the concealed weapon statute (Section 97-37-1) it would violate Section 97-37-17's prohibition against carrying a weapon on education property. Lance, June 13, 2013, 2013 Miss. AG LEXIS 111.

The mere fact that an individual is openly carrying a weapon, absent anything more, does not give a law enforcement officer grounds to detain that individual or to require him to submit to questioning. Lance, June 13, 2013, 2013 Miss. AG LEXIS 111.

A private property owner or manager of a retail store or restaurant may exercise his property rights and deny entry to persons carrying weapons on his property whether those persons are carrying weapons openly or under an enhanced concealed permit. Lance, June 13, 2013, 2013 Miss. AG LEXIS 111.

A sheriff has the authority, if he determines it reasonable and necessary, to exclude openly carried firearms from courthouse premises. Lance, June 13, 2013, 2013 Miss. AG LEXIS 111.

(2)(a) If the weapon to be forfeited is merchantable, the court may order the weapon forfeited to the seizing law enforcement agency.

(b) A weapon so forfeited to a law enforcement agency may be sold at auction as provided by Sections 19-3-85 and 21-39-21 to a federally-licensed firearms dealer, with the proceeds from such sale at auction to be used to buy bulletproof vests for the seizing law enforcement agency.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.
2. Forfeiture improper.

1. In general.

Defendant, who was convicted of illegal possession of firearms by convicted felon, had a constitutionality protected property interest in the firearms which could not be extinguished without according the defendant due process. Cooper v. City of Greenwood, 904 F.2d 302 (5th Cir. 1990), reh'g denied, 912 F.2d 1465 (5th Cir. 1990).

Defendant's acquittal on criminal charges involving firearms does not preclude subsequent in rem forfeiture proceeding against same firearms because neither collateral estoppel or double jeopardy bars civil, remedial forfeiture proceeding initiated following acquittal on related criminal charges. United States v. One Assortment of 89 Firearms, 465 U.S.

354, 104 S. Ct. 1099, 79 L. Ed. 2d 361 (1984), overruled on other grounds, Ferguson v. United States, 911 F. Supp. 424 (C.C. Cal. 1995), but see Cooper v. Greenwood, 904 F.2d 302 (5th Cir. 1990).

A pistol seen under a leg of a motorist and removed by a patrolman who had halted the car to check the driver's license is not obtained by an unlawful search and seizure so as to be inadmissible in a prosecution for carrying a concealed weapon. Morgan v. Town of Heidelberg, 246 Miss. 481, 150 So. 2d 512 (1963).

2. Forfeiture improper.

Forfeiture of minor defendant's handgun was improper in a case where there was no charge filed against the minor that would have made the seizure of the handgun legal. Miss. Comm'n on Judicial Performance v. Lewis, 830 So. 2d 1138 (Miss. 2002).

ATTORNEY GENERAL OPINIONS

There is no requirement that the confiscated weapons be destroyed; the court may order the disposition of such weapons by public auction after all appeal rights have been exhausted or such further time as the court deems proper. Donald, April 10, 1998, A.G. Op. #98-0193.

The fact that the judge who heard the case is no longer in office does not remove jurisdiction over confiscated weapons from the court in which the case was disposed. Aldridge, October 9, 1998, A.G. Op. #98-0627.

The statute places the manner of disposition of confiscated weapons in the discretion of the court having jurisdiction over the offense. Aldridge, October 9, 1998, A.G. Op. #98-0627.

The Mississippi Department of Public Safety may not recognize a Louisiana first offender pardon for the purposes of issuing a weapons permit. Spann, Jan. 25, 2002, A.G. Op. #02-0012.

If an individual is convicted of a crime in municipal court and a weapon was used in that crime, the court may forfeit the weapon to the municipality. Spearnock, Feb. 27, 2004, A.G. Op. 04-0072.

If a city wishes to dispose of the firearms it acquired in drug-related cases it must follow the requirements set out in this section. Elliott, Nov. 30, 2004, A.G. Op. 04-0581.

§ 97-37-5. Unlawful for convicted felon to possess any firearms, or other weapons or devices; penalties; exceptions.

(1) It shall be unlawful for any person who has been convicted of a felony under the laws of this state, any other state, or of the United States to possess any firearm or any bowie knife, dirk knife, butcher knife, switchblade knife, metallic knuckles, blackjack, or any muffler or silencer for any firearm unless such person has received a pardon for such felony, has received a relief from disability pursuant to Section 925(c) of Title 18 of the United States Code, or has received a certificate of rehabilitation pursuant to subsection (3) of this section.

(2) Any person violating this section shall be guilty of a felony and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined not more than Five Thousand Dollars ($5,000.00), or committed to the custody of the State Department of Corrections for not less than one (1) year nor more than ten (10) years, or both.

(3) A person who has been convicted of a felony under the laws of this state may apply to the court in which he was convicted for a certificate of rehabilitation. The court may grant such certificate in its discretion upon a showing to the satisfaction of the court that the applicant has been rehabilitated and has led a useful, productive and law-abiding life since the completion of his sentence and upon the finding of the court that he will not be likely to act in a manner dangerous to public safety.

(4)(a) A person who is discharged from court-ordered mental health treatment may petition the court which entered the commitment order for an order stating that the person qualifies for relief from a firearms disability.

(b) In determining whether to grant relief, the court must hear and consider evidence about:

(i) The circumstances that led to imposition of the firearms disability under 18 USC, Section 922(d)(4);

(ii) The person's mental history;

(iii) The person's criminal history; and

(iv) The person's reputation.

(c) A court may not grant relief unless it makes and enters in the record the following affirmative findings:

(i) That the person is no longer likely to act in a manner dangerous to public safety; and

(ii) Removing the person's disability to purchase a firearm is not against the public interest.

1. In general.

Amendment to an indictment to change the crime that defendant was previously convicted of from murder to manslaughter was not a substantive change since it would not have mattered what felony defendant was previously convicted of for the crime of possession of a firearm by a felon. Speagle v. State, 956 So. 2d 237 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), writ of certiorari denied en banc by 957 So. 2d 1004, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 296 (Miss. 2007).

Where witness testimony, including that of a defense witness, placed defendant at the crime scene with a gun, the evidence was sufficient to find defendant guilty of being a felon in possession of a firearm. Hope v. State, 840 So. 2d 747 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

While defendant offered contrary testimony, the State produced witnesses who either identified defendant as the shooter or to whom he was alleged to have confessed, creating a classic credibility question which the jury resolved adversely to defendant; considering that testimony, there was no error when the jury found that defendant possessed a weapon beyond a reasonable doubt. Fort v. State, 752 So. 2d 458 (Miss. Ct. App. 1999).

A sentence of life imprisonment without probation or parole for a defendant convicted of carrying a concealed weapon after conviction of a felony under this section did not violate the prohibition against cruel and unusual punishment. Baker v. State, 394 So. 2d 1376 (Miss. 1981).

In a prosecution for possession of a deadly weapon by a defendant previously convicted of a felony, failure to charge in the indictment that the weapon had been “concealed in whole or in part” as provided in § 97-37-1 did not entitle defendant to a directed verdict and a peremptory instruction of not guilty where the defense never objected to the defective indictment by means of a demurrer as required by § 99-7-21, where the defendant was fully informed of the charges against him by the inclusion in the indictment of this section in conjunction with § 97-37-1, and where there was no statute making it a crime to carry a deadly weapon unless it was concealed in whole or in part. Jones v. State, 383 So. 2d 498 (Miss. 1980).

This section requires that the indictment allege with particularity and specificity the state or federal jurisdiction of the prior felony conviction; additionally, such indictment must also substantially set forth the date of judgment of prior conviction, and nature or description of offense constituting previous felony conviction. Morgan v. United States Fid. & Guar. Co., 291 So. 2d 741 (Miss. 1974).

2. Constitutionality.

This section does not violate the rights of citizens to keep and bear arms, as provided in Article 3, Section 12 of the Constitution. James v. State, 731 So. 2d 1135 (Miss. 1999).

3. Construction.

Insufficient evidence was presented at trial to support a guilty verdict on a felon in possession of a knife count because the pocket knife that was used in an altercation was not one of the weapons that Miss. Code Ann. § 97-37-5(1) deemed unlawful for a convicted felon to possess. The knife was a small ordinary pocket knife with a two-and-a-half-inch blade. Williams v. State, 37 So. 3d 717 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010).

The court rejected the contention that this section should be read in pari materia with § 97-37-1 to permit a convicted felon to possess a firearm in his own home. James v. State, 731 So. 2d 1135 (Miss. 1999).

4. Sufficiency of Indictment.

Dismissal of an indictment charging defendant with being a felon in possession of a weapon and reversal of the conviction thereunder were required because the indictment failed to specify which, if any, of the four types of prohibited knives defendant was alleged to have possessed in violation of defendant's federal and state constitutional rights. Thomas v. State, 126 So. 3d 877 (Miss. 2013).

5. Admission of evidence.

Where a witness testified that defendant was parked on his property, he saw a shotgun underneath the car seat and threw it into a ditch; a deputy testified that he retrieved the shotgun from the ditch and locked in it his trunk until he turned it over to the sheriff. The shotgun was then placed in the evidence locker where it remained until an employee of the sheriff's office brought it to court on the morning of the trial; the testimony was sufficient to establish the chain of custody so that the shotgun was properly admitted into evidence during defendant's trial for possession of a firearm by a convicted felon in violation of Miss. Code Ann. § 97-37-5(1). Cooley v. State, 14 So. 3d 63 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

6. Jury instructions.

Defendant was not entitled to a jury instruction on self-defense because self-defense was not a viable defense to possession of a firearm by a convicted felon. Possession of a firearm by a convicted felon was a criminal act void of a third party to defend against. Roberson v. State, 19 So. 3d 95 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Defendant, in his trial for being a felon in possession of a firearm, argued that a State proffered jury instruction peremptorily told the jury that defendant had not received a pardon, a relief from a disability or a certificate of rehabilitation, thereby resulting in plain error by relieving the jury from finding each element of the offense; however, the absence of a pardon, relief from a disability, or a certificate of rehabilitation were not essential elements of the crime of possession of a firearm by a convicted felon. Whether defendant received a pardon for the felony, or received a certificate of rehabilitation pursuant to Miss. Code Ann. § 97-37-5(4)(c) was an affirmative defense that was incumbent upon defendant to raise. Hicks v. State, 973 So. 2d 211 (Miss. 2007).

Trial court did not err in failing to issue a limiting jury instruction, sua sponte, regarding defendant's prior felony convictions because Miss. Code Ann. § 97-37-5 did not limit the number of prior felony convictions to be proven to show that defendant was a felon in possession of a firearm; thus, while giving a limiting instruction sua sponte might have been the better practice, failure to give the limiting instruction sua sponte was not reversible error. Ferguson v. State, 856 So. 2d 334 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

Application of the Biggers factors to defendant's case established that: (1) the victim of the armed robbery had ample opportunity to observe defendant; (2) while defendant was present in the store, there was nothing to distract the victim's attention from him; (3) the victim phoned a description of the robber to the police department immediately after the robbery; (4) the victim did not express any uncertainty about the identification of defendant; and (5) the time between the robbery and the identification was short; thus, there were sufficient indicia of reliability to allow the identification of defendant, and defendant's convictions for armed robbery and possession of a firearm by a convicted felon were affirmed. Ferguson v. State, 856 So. 2d 334 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

8. Insufficient evidence.

Defendant's conviction for possession of a dirk knife by a convicted felon in violation of Miss. Code Ann. § 97-37-5 (Supp. 2009) was overturned as evidence failed to show that he was in possession of a dirk knife. A dirk knife had to have a blade with one sharpened edge that tapered to a point and had to be designed for use primarily as a stabbing weapon. Summerall v. State, 41 So. 3d 729 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010).

9. Sufficient evidence.

As defendant's counsel stipulated to the prior conviction for purposes of a charge against him of possession of a firearm by a convicted felon in order to avoid introduction of evidence that defendant had at least four prior felony convictions, the evidence was sufficient to support the possession conviction. Rogers v. State, 130 So. 3d 544 (Miss. Ct. App. 2013), writ of certiorari denied by 131 So. 3d 577, 2014 Miss. LEXIS 58 (Miss. 2014).

Appellant's suit against the State for wrongful conviction and imprisonment for possession of a firearm by a convicted felon was properly dismissed. His claim that the firearm was inoperable was unavailing because he offered no evidence that it could not be readily converted to expel a projectile, and the State was not required to prove that the weapon was operable at the time of his arrest. Hymes v. State, 121 So. 3d 938 (Miss. Ct. App. 2013).

State met its burden of proving each of the elements of possession of a firearm by a convicted felon beyond a reasonable doubt because a handgun, discovered by a police officer during a protective sweep of a vehicle, was found under the driver's seat; because defendant was the driver of the vehicle, the handgun was subject to his dominion and control, even though it was not discovered in his actual physical possession. Lewis v. State, 112 So. 3d 1092 (Miss. Ct. App. 2013).

Conviction of possession of a weapon by a convicted felon, Miss. Code Ann. § 97-37-5, was supported by sufficient evidence because defendant's uncle unequivocally testified that defendant was the one who delivered a shotgun to him, and a deputy testified that defendant admitted that he took the gun and sold it to his uncle; defendant made the admission to the deputy when the deputy was merely beginning an investigation and defendant volunteered the information without questioning or prompting, so Miranda warnings were not required. Henderson v. State, 117 So. 3d 636 (Miss. Ct. App. 2013), writ of certiorari dismissed by 121 So. 3d 918, 2013 Miss. LEXIS 507 (Miss. 2013).

There was sufficient evidence for the jury to convict defendant of being a felon in possession of what it determined was a butcher knife because what type of knife defendant used was a question of fact for the jury to determine; direct evidence was admitted in the form of eyewitness testimony, the handle of the knife was placed in evidence, and circumstantial evidence was presented as to the length of the blade and its strength. Thomas v. State, — So. 3d —, 2012 Miss. App. LEXIS 605 (Miss. Ct. App. Oct. 2, 2012), affirmed in part and remanded in part by 126 So. 3d 877, 2013 Miss. LEXIS 528 (Miss. 2013).

Defendant's conviction for being a felon in possession of a firearm was supported by the evidence because the jury was presented with testimony and evidence that defendant attempted to feloniously take money from victims against their will by putting them in fear of immediate injury by the exhibition of a deadly weapon, i.e., a gun; defendant admitted to being a prior-convicted felon. Tugle v.

State, 68 So. 3d 691 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010), writ of certiorari denied by 69 So. 3d 767, 2011 Miss. LEXIS 416 (Miss. 2011), dismissed by 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 64383 (N.D. Miss. May 6, 2013).

Trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion for a directed verdict because there was sufficient evidence for a reasonable juror to find defendant guilty of being a convicted felon in possession of a firearm, in violation of Miss. Code Ann. § 97-37-5(1); the State met its burden of proof based on a police officer's testimony, coupled with the fact that the gun was recovered where the officer had seen defendant drop it. Conner v. State, 45 So. 3d 300 (Miss. Ct. App. Oct. 5, 2010).

Circuit court properly denied defendant's motion for a new trial based on defendant's argument that the guilty verdicts were based on insufficient evidence and/or were contrary to law or the weight of the evidence because: (1) allowing the conviction for convicted-felon-in-possession-of-firearm charge in violation of Miss. Code Ann. § 97-37-5(1) (Rev. 2006) to stand would not have been prejudicial to defendant since all of the evidence pointed to defendant, a prior convicted felon, being in possession of a firearm while not under duress, a conclusion that could have been reached by any rational juror; and (2) since there was conflicting testimony in the case, reasonable and fairminded jurors in the exercise of impartial judgment could have reached different conclusions as to the verdict, thus resulting in the appellate court's finding that there was legally sufficient evidence to convict defendant of motor-vehicle theft Miss. Code Ann. § 97-17-42(1) (Rev. 2006). Davis v. State, 18 So. 3d 842 (Miss. 2009).

Where defendant disarmed his victim and fired the gun in the victim's direction and into a crowded nightclub, killing the victim and another and wounding three others, the trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion for a judgment notwithstanding the verdict because the evidence was sufficient to support defendant's convictions of murder, aggravated assault, and felon in possession of a firearm. Roberson v. State, 19 So. 3d 95 (Miss. Ct. App. 2009).

Defendant's conviction for possession of a firearm by a convicted felon in violation of Miss. Code Ann. § 97-37-5(1) was appropriate because defendant had been previously convicted of a felony and two witnesses testified that defendant was in possession of no less than three pistols. It was for the jury to decide whether to believe or disbelieve the testimony of those two witnesses. Vickers v. State, 994 So. 2d 200 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 998 So. 2d 1010, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 675 (Miss. 2008).

Evidence was sufficient to show defendant was a felon in possession of a firearm when witnesses testified that they saw defendant retrieve a rifle and load the rifle; thereafter, the witnesses said defendant followed someone outside and gunshots were heard. Moreover, a records clerk testified that she had been subpoenaed to produce certain court documents, which showed, among other things, social security numbers and that defendant had been convicted of a felony. Hicks v. State, 973 So. 2d 211 (Miss. 2007).

There was sufficient additional incriminating evidence for a reasonable juror to find beyond a reasonable doubt that defendant was in constructive possession of the handgun found in his bedroom. Williams v. State, 971 So. 2d 581 (Miss. 2007).

Evidence was sufficient to convict defendant of being a felon in possession of a firearm where defendant's prior felony conviction was not at issue and witnesses testified that defendant was seen shooting a firearm into the ground; witness credibility was for the jury to decide. Edwards v. State, 966 So. 2d 837 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Evidence was sufficient to sustain defendant's convictions for aggravated assault, kidnapping, and unlawful possession of a firearm where, according to the victim's testimony, she was accosted by defendant who grabbed her, placed a gun to her head, and physically forced her into a van against her will; an eyewitness testified that he saw the victim jump out of the van and saw the van swing back in such a fashion so as to accomplish a "perfect hit" on the woman in flight. In addition, the State presented two witnesses attesting to the fact that defendant was in possession of a firearm, and it introduced the gun into evidence with additional proof that the gun was recovered when defendant was arrested. Jones v. State, 920 So. 2d 465 (Miss. 2006).

Evidence was sufficient to support defendant's conviction for possession of a firearm by a felon when witnesses testified that defendant pointed a gun, a witness testified defendant fired shots, a 911 dispatcher heard someone say, "put the gun down," and police found guns inside a trailer where defendant had been; the jury was the arbiter of conflicting evidence when two witnesses recanted their original statements. Townsend v. State, 939 So. 2d 796 (Miss. 2006).

There was sufficient evidence to sustain a conviction for possession of a firearm by a felon under Miss. Code Ann. § 97-37-5(1) based on the fact that defendant was found with a gun in his waistband; it was irrelevant that he was not seen shooting the gun, and the jury could have disbelieved his self-defense claim or found that he retained the weapon for a significant period after the danger had passed. Hatten v. State, 938 So. 2d 365 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006).

Sufficient evidence existed to convict the defendant for being a felon in possession of a firearm in violation of Miss. Code Ann. § 97-37-5(1) as (1) the State presented a "pen pac" which revealed that defendant had been previously convicted of grand larceny and pled guilty to manslaughter at different times, (2) defendant knew he could not possess a gun, and (3) the gun was located in the bedroom occupied by defendant and his wife. Koger v. State, 919 So. 2d 1058 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Sufficient evidence supported defendant's conviction for possession of a firearm by a felon under Miss. Code Ann. § 97-37-5(1) because the evidence was sufficient to show defendant was intentionally and consciously in possession of the weapon on the day charged. Defendant admitted that she had previously been convicted of a felony and that she knew that the weapon belonged to her ex-husband, that it had been reported stolen, and that she was required to return it if she found it in her home after their divorce, but that she had not yet returned it. Young v. State, 908 So. 2d 819 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

Defendant's convictions for murder and for being a felon in the possession of a firearm were proper where he admitted during cross-examination that he lied when he was interrogated by police. Further, the State produced witnesses who testified that defendant had a gun in his possession before the shooting and that defendant was angry and desired to get even with the victim. Hayes v. State, 907 So. 2d 385 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005), writ of certiorari denied by 910 So. 2d 574, 2005 Miss. LEXIS 451 (Miss. 2005).

Where police recovered a handgun directly behind defendant's house and the gun was identified as the one used by defendant to shoot at his girlfriend, defendant was properly convicted of possession of a firearm by a convicted felon. He was sentenced to three years in the custody of the Mississippi Department of Corrections. Griffin v. State, 883 So. 2d 1201 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

Where defendant's wife testified that defendant killed her ex-boyfriend, set his house on fire, and threw the pistol into the Tennessee River, the evidence was sufficient to convict defendant of murder, arson, and possession of a firearm by a felon. A diver recovered the pistol pieces from the river; the trial court properly denied defendant's motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict. Roland v. State, 882 So. 2d 262 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

In defendant's trial for resisting arrest and possession of a firearm by a convicted felon, defendant's motion for new trial was properly denied where the arresting officers both testified that defendant pointed a chrome-colored pistol at them during the initial struggle, a third officer testified to finding a chrome-colored pistol in residents' yard near the scene of the altercation, and the resident testified to having heard an object hit the roof about the time of the incident. Harvey v. State, 875 So. 2d 1133 (Miss. Ct. App. 2004).

In a guilty plea of manslaughter and possession of a firearm by a convicted felon, the record lacked any evidence that defendant presented himself as anything but mentally competent and there was no evidence to indicate that defendant's attorney was on notice of any psychiatric problem or that defendant's mind was or could be impaired; thus, there was no basis for defendant's attorney to request a mental evaluation for defendant, he was not incompetent for failing to request a mental evaluation for defendant, and defendant's motion for post-conviction relief was properly denied. Richardson v. State, 856 So. 2d 758 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

In a guilty plea of manslaughter and possession of a firearm by a convicted felon, defendant testified under oath that he understood what he was doing and that his mind was clear, and, additionally, he did not produce any supporting affidavits to the appellate court to establish his alleged mental deficiency, as required by Miss. Code Ann. § 99-39-9(1)(e); thus, the trial judge did not abuse her discretion in not ordering, upon her own motion, a psychiatric evaluation of defendant pursuant to Miss. Code Ann. § 99-13-11 because she determined that the accused was competent to understand the nature of the charges as required by Miss. Unif. Cir. & County Ct. Prac. R. 8.04(4)(a) and defendant's motion for post-conviction relief was denied. Richardson v. State, 856 So. 2d 758 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

In a guilty plea of manslaughter and possession of a firearm by a convicted felon, defendant was fully informed of the nature of the charge against him, the rights he would waive by pleading guilty, and the maximum sentence he could receive, and he expressed full satisfaction with his attorney, denying that he had been coerced into pleading guilty; thus, defendant entered his plea voluntarily, knowingly, and intelligently and his motion for post-conviction relief was properly denied. Richardson v. State, 856 So. 2d 758 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

There was sufficient evidence presented to support defendant's conviction for possession of a firearm by a felon because defendant had been convicted of at least two separate felonies arising out of different incidents, defendant owed a laser sighted weapon, and a clip for the weapon was found under the seat where defendant had been riding. Crosby v. State, 856 So. 2d 523 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), writ of certiorari denied by 860 So. 2d 1223, 2003 Miss. LEXIS 814 (Miss. 2003).

Evidence was sufficient to support defendant's convicted felon in possession of firearm conviction, because defendant admitted he was a convicted felon; a woman who called the police testified that she saw that defendant had a gun in his hand; and an officer testified that he saw defendant walk toward the front of a nearby vehicle, take his hand from his pocket and make a stopping movement and then kicking movement with his foot, and later found a gun under the vehicle. McNulty v. State, 847 So. 2d 274 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003).

10. "Convicted felon."

Where an inmate argued that counsel was ineffective in allowing the inmate to plead guilty to being a felon in possession of a deadly weapon when the prior conviction was based upon a California nolo contendere plea to a marijuana possession charge, which the inmate argued could not be used against the inmate in the Mississippi charges, the inmate failed to establish a prima facie case of ineffective assistance of counsel because, inter alia, the inmate admitted on the record that he had been convicted of a felony. Knight v. State, 983 So. 2d 348 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 981 So. 2d 298, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 267 (Miss. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 555 U.S. 998, 129 S. Ct. 492, 172 L. Ed. 2d 363, 2008 U.S. LEXIS 8079, 77 U.S.L.W. 3265 (2008).

11. Directed verdict.

Where a witness testified that defendant had a shotgun underneath his car seat, he was convicted of possession of a firearm by a convicted felon under Miss. Code Ann. § 97-37-5(1); the trial court did not err by denying defendant's motion for a directed verdict, because he presented no evidence to show that the shotgun was inoperable. By his own admission, the shotgun worked; furthermore, Miss. Code Ann. § 97-37-5(1) did not require the State to prove that the weapon was operable. Cooley v. State, 14 So. 3d 63 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008).

12. Double jeopardy.

Same elements test did not apply because the statute is a sentence enhancement, not a separate crime, and thus defendant's double jeopardy claim related to his conviction of possession of a firearm by a felon was without merit. Stewart v. State, 131 So. 3d 569 (Miss. 2014).

Defendant's sentence under Miss. Code Ann. §§ 97-37-5(1) and 97-37-37(2) was proper; section 97-37-37(2) merely imposes an elevated sentence for use or display of a firearm during the commission of a felony, and it does not delineate an independent substantive offense in violation of double jeopardy protections. Lewis v. State, 112 So. 3d 1092 (Miss. Ct. App. 2013).

As a conviction of possession of a firearm by a convicted felon (Miss. Code Ann. § 97-37-5) required proof of a prior felony, while conviction of carrying a concealed weapon (Miss. Code Ann. § 97-37-1) required proof that the weapon be concealed, each offense had an element not present in the other; therefore, defendant's conviction of both charges did not violate the double jeopardy ban. Wilson v. State, 95 So. 3d 1282 (Miss. Ct. App. 2012).

13. New trial.

Defendant was not entitled to a new trial on a felony possession charge since the jury was entitled to believe the victim's testimony that defendant had a gun on his person when he came outside, and that defendant produced the gun and shot him; the finding that defendant willfully possessed the firearm with which he shot the victim was supported by the victim's testimony, and officer one's testimony that he saw defendant holding the gun. Gilmore v. State, 119 So. 3d 278 (Miss. 2013).

ATTORNEY GENERAL OPINIONS

Possession of weapon by convicted felon is simply prima facie evidence of violation of statute prohibiting carrying concealed weapon; in order for convicted felon to be able to qualify for gun permit, he could receive governor's pardon or executive order expressly restoring his privilege to obtain gun permit, and provisions of statute would have no application to convicted felon who has received pardon from governor, or who has received executive order expressly placing him outside operation statute. Murphy, Nov. 20, 1992, A.G. Op. #92-0861.

A muzzle loading rifle or a muzzle loading shotgun is within the meaning of the term "firearm" as used in this section. A convicted felon may possess and consequently hunt with a traditional bow and arrow or crossbow. Maples, Feb. 13, 2004, A.G. Op. 04-0043.

The name of one convicted of the crime of receiving stolen property must be removed from the voter rolls. Dill, Apr. 1, 2005, A.G. Op. 05-0145.

Issuance of a certificate of rehabilitation pursuant to Section 97-37-5 only restores the right to possess a weapon and does not remove a conviction and does not allow a convicted felon to be qualified as a candidate for public office. Ramsey, Apr. 1, 2005, A.G. Op. 05-0143.

If the original owner of weapons in the possession of the sheriff is classified as a convicted felon, the weapons should be disposed of according to established legal methods. Welford, Aug. 12, 2005, A.G. Op. 05-0354.

§ 97-37-7. Deadly weapons; persons permitted to carry weapons; bond; permit to carry weapon; grounds for denying application for permit; required weapons training course; reciprocal agreements.

(1)(a) It shall not be a violation of Section 97-37-1 or any other statute for pistols, firearms or other suitable and appropriate weapons to be carried by duly constituted bank guards, company guards, watchmen, railroad special agents or duly authorized representatives who are not sworn law enforcement officers, agents or employees of a patrol service, guard service, or a company engaged in the business of transporting money, securities or other valuables, while actually engaged in the performance of their duties as such, provided that such persons have made a written application and paid a nonrefundable permit fee of One Hundred Dollars ($100.00) to the Department of Public Safety.

(b) No permit shall be issued to any person who has ever been convicted of a felony under the laws of this or any other state or of the United States. To determine an applicant's eligibility for a permit, the person shall be fingerprinted. If no disqualifying record is identified at the state level, the fingerprints shall be forwarded by the Department of Public Safety to the Federal Bureau of Investigation for a national criminal history record check. The department shall charge a fee which includes the amounts required by the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the department for the national and state criminal history record checks and any necessary costs incurred by the department for the handling and administration of the criminal history background checks. In the event a legible set of fingerprints, as determined by the Department of Public Safety and the Federal Bureau of Investigation, cannot be obtained after a minimum of three (3) attempts, the Department of Public Safety shall determine eligibility based upon a name check by the Mississippi Highway Safety Patrol and a Federal Bureau of Investigation name check conducted by the Mississippi Highway Safety Patrol at the request of the Department of Public Safety.

(c) A person may obtain a duplicate of a lost or destroyed permit upon payment of a Fifteen Dollar ($15.00) replacement fee to the Department of Public Safety, if he furnishes a notarized statement to the department that the permit has been lost or destroyed.

(d)(i) No less than ninety (90) days prior to the expiration date of a permit, the Department of Public Safety shall mail to the permit holder written notice of expiration together with the renewal form prescribed by the department. The permit holder shall renew the permit on or before the expiration date by filing with the department the renewal form, a notarized affidavit stating that the permit holder remains qualified, and the renewal fee of Fifty Dollars ($50.00); provided, however, that honorably retired law enforcement officers shall be exempt from payment of the renewal fee. A permit holder who fails to file a renewal application on or before its expiration date shall pay a late fee of Fifteen Dollars ($15.00).

(ii) Renewal of the permit shall be required every four (4) years. The permit of a qualified renewal applicant shall be renewed upon receipt of the completed renewal application and appropriate payment of fees.

(iii) A permit cannot be renewed six (6) months or more after its expiration date, and such permit shall be deemed to be permanently expired; the holder may reapply for an original permit as provided in this section.

(2) It shall not be a violation of this or any other statute for pistols, firearms or other suitable and appropriate weapons to be carried by Department of Wildlife, Fisheries and Parks law enforcement officers, railroad special agents who are sworn law enforcement officers, investigators employed by the Attorney General, criminal investigators employed by the district attorneys, all prosecutors, public defenders, investigators or probation officers employed by the Department of Corrections, employees of the State Auditor who are authorized by the State Auditor to perform investigative functions, or any deputy fire marshal or investigator employed by the State Fire Marshal, while engaged in the performance of their duties as such, or by fraud investigators with the Department of Human Services, or by judges of the Mississippi Supreme Court, Court of Appeals, circuit, chancery, county, justice and municipal courts, or by coroners. Before any person shall be authorized under this subsection to carry a weapon, he shall complete a weapons training course approved by the Board of Law Enforcement Officer Standards and Training. Before any criminal investigator employed by a district attorney shall be authorized under this section to carry a pistol, firearm or other weapon, he shall have complied with Section 45-6-11 or any training program required for employment as an agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. A law enforcement officer, as defined in Section 45-6-3, shall be authorized to carry weapons in courthouses in performance of his official duties. A person licensed under Section 45-9-101 to carry a concealed pistol, who has voluntarily completed an instructional course in the safe handling and use of firearms offered by an instructor certified by a nationally recognized organization that customarily offers firearms training, or by any other organization approved by the Department of Public Safety, shall also be authorized to carry weapons in courthouses except in courtrooms during a judicial proceeding, and any location listed in subsection (13) of Section 45-9-101, except any place of nuisance as defined in Section 95-3-1, any police, sheriff or highway patrol station or any detention facility, prison or jail. The department shall promulgate rules and regulations allowing concealed pistol permit holders to obtain an endorsement on their permit indicating that they have completed the aforementioned course and have the authority to carry in these locations. This section shall in no way interfere with the right of a trial judge to restrict the carrying of firearms in the courtroom.

(3) It shall not be a violation of this or any other statute for pistols, firearms or other suitable and appropriate weapons, to be carried by any out-of-state, full-time commissioned law enforcement officer who holds a valid commission card from the appropriate out-of-state law enforcement agency and a photo identification. The provisions of this subsection shall only apply if the state where the out-of-state officer is employed has entered into a reciprocity agreement with the state that allows full-time commissioned law enforcement officers in Mississippi to lawfully carry or possess a weapon in such other states. The Commissioner of Public Safety is authorized to enter into reciprocal agreements with other states to carry out the provisions of this subsection.

Any person indicted or charged for a violation of Section 97-37-1 may show as a defense:

(a) that he was threatened, and had good and sufficient reason to apprehend a serious attack from any enemy, and that he did so apprehend; or

(b) that he was traveling and was not a tramp, or was setting out on a journey and was not a tramp; or

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. Apprehension of attack.
2. Carrying while traveling.
3. Peace officers.
4. Burden of proof.
5. Instructions.
6. —Peremptory instructions.

1. Apprehension of attack.

Whether the carrying of a weapon is justified by threats and is in good faith is a jury question. Morgan v. Town of Heidelberg, 246 Miss. 481, 150 So. 2d 512 (1963).

Where, in defense of indictment for carrying concealed weapon, defendant proved that he apprehended attack, conviction could not be had on evidence that defendant had exhibited weapon in rude, angry, or threatening manner. Talley v. State, 174 Miss. 349, 164 So. 771 (1935).

In prosecution for carrying concealed weapon, defendant held entitled to show reason for and purpose of carrying weapon concealed. Loggins v. State, 161 Miss. 272, 136 So. 922 (1931).

Where defendant claimed he was carrying pistol because another had threatened him, evidence regarding reasons for threat held incompetent. Sullivan v. State, 156 Miss. 718, 126 So. 646 (1930).

Not necessary that pistol carried in anticipation of attack be loaded or usable. Thomas v. City of Tupelo, 133 Miss. 166, 97 So. 522 (1923).

Sufficient defense to charge of carrying deadly weapon to show apprehension of attack by one making threats. Huffstickler v. State, 129 Miss. 769, 93 So. 1 (1922).

One threatened with attack may carry a concealed weapon, though he does not anticipate the attack at a particular time and place; and he need not disarm himself whenever he is temporarily so situated that for the time being he is in no immediate danger. Harvey v. State, 102 Miss. 544, 59 So. 841 (1912).

Under paragraph (a) that a person accused of carrying a deadly weapon was informed that he had been threatened, and had good reason to apprehend an attack, constitutes a defense, and testimony of witness telling accused of threats was competent. Hurst v. State, 101 Miss. 402, 58 So. 206 (1912).

Good faith of accused person in carrying deadly weapon after threats is a question for the jury. Hurst v. State, 101 Miss. 402, 58 So. 206 (1912).

That defendant had been informed of threats of violence made against him, which he had reasonable grounds to believe in, is a defense to a prosecution for carrying concealed a deadly weapon. Page v. State, 99 Miss. 72, 54 So. 725 (1911).

Accused's testimony that on a previous night there had been a disturbance among the chickens on his premises and he believed one or two chickens had been stolen, and that on an earlier occasion a window in his home had been broken, was too indefinite to constitute a defense to charge of carrying a concealed pistol since it was not shown that the breaking of the window had anything to do with the disturbance of the chickens, and it was not proved that any chickens had been stolen. Wilson v. State, 81 Miss. 404, 33 So. 171 (1903).

This statute [Code 1942, § 2081] requires the apprehension of bodily harm, which constitutes a defense, to be the apprehension of great bodily harm. Strother v. State, 74 Miss. 447, 21 So. 147 (1897).

One threatened with an attack may lawfully carry a concealed weapon, although the attack be not threatened to be made at a particular time or on a particular occasion. Suddith v. State, 70 Miss. 250, 11 So. 680 (1892).

The threats must not be too remote. McGuirk v. State, 64 Miss. 209, 1 So. 103 (1887).

Even if the accused be "threatened" and entertain the "apprehension," it will be no defense if he carried the weapon for some other reason, and for some other purpose. McGuirk v. State, 64 Miss. 209, 1 So. 103 (1887).

"Threatened with an attack" does not contemplate mere denunciation, but menace such as to cause a reasonable apprehension of an attack that might properly be resisted with the deadly weapon. Tipler v. State, 57 Miss. 685 (1880).

2. Carrying while traveling.

In a prosecution for carrying a concealed weapon, the defendant was authorized by statute to carry a weapon, whether concealed or not, where the evidence showed that he had about $100 on his person, and was therefore not a tramp, and was transporting a large amount of valuable musical equipment a distance of 85 miles for the purpose of conducting a record hop as a disc jockey. Joseph v. State, 299 So. 2d 211 (Miss. 1974).

Where a defendant was able to show without contradiction that he was traveling on a gravel road through a wooded area, at the time when an officer stopped him and asked to see his driver's license, and then, upon observing a ceremonial sword in the defendant's automobile, conducted a thorough search of the automobile which disclosed a loaded revolver in the unlocked glove compartment, and further testified without contradiction that he was a longtime citizen of the county and not a tramp, he made a complete defense to the charge of carrying a concealed weapon, under the specific provisions of this section [Code 1942, § 2081]. Jefferson v. State, 241 So. 2d 679 (Miss. 1970).

A person, not a tramp, traveling 62 miles from his place of residence, beyond the circle of his friends in the pursuit of legitimate business, and having a substantial sum of money on his person, is not guilty of unlawfully carrying a concealed weapon. Patterson v. State, 251 Miss. 565, 170 So. 2d 635 (1965).

Traveler carrying concealed weapon ten miles from home, and who was unacquainted with people living between home and place to which he was traveling, and who was carrying weapon for purpose of protection, held not guilty of offense of carrying concealed weapon. Basham v. Town of Sebastopol, 172 Miss. 194, 159 So. 847 (1935).

A person ceases to be a traveler within the meaning of this section [Code 1942, § 2081] when he reaches the point of his destination and engages a room at a boarding house or hotel, intending to stay an indefinite time and to return home only after the business for which he made the journey is completed. Rosaman v. City of Okolona, 85 Miss. 583, 37 So. 641, 107 Am. St. R. 303 (1905).

The pursuit of a fugitive daughter begun without knowing where it will lead to is "traveling on a journey." Heywood v. State, 66 Miss. 402, 6 So. 237 (1889).

The "traveling or setting out on a journey" in the statute means a travel of some distance as to take one beyond the circle of his friends and acquaintances. McGuirk v. State, 64 Miss. 209, 1 So. 103 (1887); Morgan v. Heidelberg, 246 Miss. 481, 150 So. 2d 512 (1963).

3. Peace officers.

This section [Code 1942, § 2081] authorizes a deputy United States marshal, while executing criminal process in this state and also in his district, to carry a concealed weapon. State v. Williams, 72 Miss. 992, 18 So. 486 (1895).

The revised statutes of the United States § 788 authorizes a deputy marshal executing criminal process in his district, to carry concealed weapons. State v. Williams, 72 Miss. 992, 18 So. 486 (1895).

4. Burden of proof.

A defendant charged with carrying a concealed weapon has the burden of establishing as a defense that he was traveling and was not a tramp, or was setting out on a journey and was not a tramp. Bush v. Mississippi Emp. Sec. Comm'n, 184 So. 2d 866 (Miss. 1966).

One charged with carrying deadly weapons has burden of establishing defense of threats and apprehension of attack. Huffstickler v. State, 129 Miss. 769, 93 So. 1 (1922); Garland v. State, 130 Miss. 310, 94 So. 210 (1922).

Burden on one accused of carrying concealed weapons to show apprehended attacks; burden on state to prove accused guilty beyond reasonable doubt. Garland v. State, 130 Miss. 310, 94 So. 210 (1922).

5. Instructions.

In a prosecution for murder, the trial court committed reversible error in refusing a requested defense instruction stating that the defendant had a right to carry a concealed weapon if he had been threatened and had good reason to fear a serious attack from an enemy, and did in fact fear such an attack, where the prosecuting attorney pointed out in his argument before the jury that the victim was not armed, from which the jury might have inferred that the defendant was in the wrong in being armed. Duvall v. State, 634 So. 2d 524 (Miss. 1994).

In a prosecution for murder the accused is entitled to an instruction as to his right to carry and use a concealed weapon. Ray v. State, 381 So. 2d 1032 (Miss. 1980).

Instruction to find accused guilty of carrying a concealed weapon, unless while carrying same 10 miles from home he had good reason to apprehend and did apprehend attack, held too restrictive. Haley v. State, 106 Miss. 358, 63 So. 670 (1913).

Instruction against carrying deadly weapon where accused threatened, held erroneous in view of evidence. Harvey v. State, 102 Miss. 544, 59 So. 841 (1912).

Where the evidence on the trial of an accused for carrying a deadly weapon concealed showed that defendant had been threatened and the threats communicated to her, it is error to ignore the threats and instruct the jury to convict upon the belief that she carried the weapon concealed. Mendin v. State, 82 Miss. 507, 33 So. 944 (1903).

6. —Peremptory instructions.

Defendant establishing his defense that he was carrying pistol because of threats held entitled to peremptory instruction requested. Sullivan v. State, 156 Miss. 718, 126 So. 646 (1930).

On disputed evidence that one accused of carrying concealed weapon was making journey beyond neighborhood of his acquaintance, and was not a tramp, he was entitled to peremptory instruction to acquit. McLeod v. State, 140 Miss. 897, 105 So. 757 (1925).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.

In an action based on common-law negligence and violation of this section and federal statute, discount department store and sales clerk were found liable for injuries sustained by a customer while held hostage by a mentally deranged customer who obtained a pistol, along with ammunition, from the sales clerk who had made no effort to ascertain that the minor customer to whom she was about to deliver a deadly weapon was high on alcohol and drugs. Howard Bros. of Phenix City, v. Penley, 492 So. 2d 965 (Miss. 1986).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.

A high school student was properly adjudicated delinquent for having handguns on school grounds, where the guns were found in the student's locker; the student had exclusive possession of the locker and kept it under lock and key, and a second student testified that the first student had offered to sell him 2 handguns and had told him that he had the guns at school. S.C. v. State, 583 So. 2d 188 (Miss. 1991).

ATTORNEY GENERAL OPINIONS

Except for the circumstances allowed in subsection 6, it appears to be a violation of state law for a school principal to carry a weapon, whether concealed or not, on school property, and neither the superintendent nor the school board may grant permission for such an action. Webster, July 31, 1998, A.G. Op. #98-0427.

While carrying a weapon in a visible belt holster on educational property would not violate the concealed weapon statute (Section 97-37-1) it would violate Section 97-37-17's prohibition against carrying a weapon on education property. Lance, June 13, 2013, 2013 Miss. AG LEXIS 111.

If any person, having or carrying any dirk, dirk-knife, sword, sword-cane, or any deadly weapon, or other weapon the carrying of which concealed is prohibited by Section 97-37-1, shall, in the presence of another person, brandish or wield the same in a threatening manner, not in necessary self-defense, or shall in any manner unlawfully use the same in any fight or quarrel, the person so offending, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined in a sum not exceeding Five Hundred Dollars ($500.00) or be imprisoned in the county jail not exceeding three (3) months, or both. In prosecutions under this section it shall not be necessary for the affidavit or indictment to aver, nor for the state to prove on the trial, that any gun, pistol, or other firearm was charged, loaded, or in condition to be discharged.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.
2. Indictment.
3. Defenses.

1. In general.

In prosecution for exhibiting a deadly weapon, it was not necessary for the state to prove that weapon was exhibited at any particular individual but only that the deadly weapon was exhibited in the presence of three or more persons. Sykes v. City of Crystal Springs, 216 Miss. 18, 61 So. 2d 387 (1952).

In prosecution for unlawfully exhibiting a deadly weapon, it was not necessary for the city to introduce into evidence a certified copy of the city ordinance making all offenses under the penal laws of this state which are misdemeanors, criminal offenses against the city within whose corporate limits the offense was committed. Sykes v. City of Crystal Springs, 216 Miss. 18, 61 So. 2d 387 (1952).

A pistol is a “deadly weapon” within statute denouncing the exhibition or carrying of such weapon, even without proof that the pistol is loaded or presently capable of committing a violent injury. Cittadino v. State, 199 Miss. 235, 24 So. 2d 93 (1945).

This section [Code 1942, § 2086] applicable generally to any persons committing acts prohibited by Code 1906, §§ 1106-1109 [Code 1942, §§ 2082-2085]. State v. Ware, 102 Miss. 634, 59 So. 854 (1912).

Section [Code 1942, § 2086] not limited to the person described in the four preceding sections [Code 1942, §§ 2082-2085], but the word "such" should be regarded as having been inserted by a clerical mistake, and this section should be construed as applicable generally to any person. State v. Ware, 102 Miss. 634, 59 So. 854 (1912).

Pocket knife is deadly weapon. State v. Ware, 102 Miss. 634, 59 So. 854 (1912).

2. Indictment.

A charge under this section [Code 1942, § 2086] cannot be consolidated with a charge of carrying concealed a deadly weapon and a charge of assault and battery with fists, and the consolidated case had in one trial. Woods v. State, 200 Miss. 527, 27 So. 2d 895 (1946).

Indictment must allege that accused exhibited a deadly weapon in the presence of three or more persons. Parrett v. State, 101 Miss. 306, 58 So. 1 (1912).

The omission of the word "manner," after the words "rude, angry and threatening," in an indictment, is a formal defect, and may be amended as such. In such indictment it is unnecessary to aver that the defendant was "carrying" the weapon. Gamblin v. State, 45 Miss. 658 (1871).

3. Defenses.

Where defendant, in indictment for carrying concealed weapon, proved that he apprehended attack, conviction could not be had on ground he had exhibited weapon in rude, angry, or threatening manner. Talley v. State, 174 Miss. 349, 164 So. 771 (1935).

A provocation to justify the exhibiting of a deadly weapon must arise at the time of the exhibition. Cannon v. State, 75 Miss. 364, 22 So. 827 (1897).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.

Three 13-year old youths found to be delinquent for violating a statute making it a misdemeanor to falsely report the placement of a bomb in a public place, were not subjected to cruel and unusual punishment or a deprivation of equal protection of the law by being sentenced to a training school until they attained the age of 20 years or until the earlier further orders of the court, despite the fact that the statute violated provided a penalty of imprisonment in the county jail not to exceed one year and a fine not to exceed $500, since there is a distinction and difference between the penal statutes and the juvenile delinquency statutes. § 97-37-23. Unlawful possession of explosives; duty of officers to make search and to seize explosives; exception to prohibition.

(1) Except for persons who are engaged in lawful business activities or persons who are engaged in educational activities conducted by educational institutions, it is unlawful for any person to have in his possession:

(a) Dynamite caps, nitroglycerine caps, fuses, detonators, dynamite, nitroglycerine, explosives, gas or stink bombs, or other similar explosives peculiarly possessed and adapted to aid in the commission of a crime; except such person or persons who are engaged in a lawful business which ordinarily requires the use thereof in the ordinary and usual conduct of such business, and who possess said articles for the purpose of use in said business;

(b) Any:

(i) Bomb;

(ii) Grenade;

(iii) Rocket having a propellant charge of more than four (4) ounces;

(iv) Missile having an explosive or incendiary charge of more than one-quarter ($\frac{1}{4}$) ounce;

(v) Mine;

(vi) Any combination of parts either designed or intended for use in converting any device into one or more of the destructive devices described in this paragraph (b); or

(vii) Any device which consists of or includes a breakable container including a flammable liquid or compound and a wick composed of any material which, when ignited, is capable of igniting such flammable liquid or compound and can be carried or thrown by one (1) individual acting alone; and

(viii) Or other similar explosives peculiarly possessed and adapted to aid in the commission of a crime; and

(c) Upon conviction of any person thereof, he shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary for a term not to exceed five (5) years. The possession of such explosives by one who does not customarily use same in his regular and ordinary occupational activities shall be prima facie evidence of an intention to use same for such unlawful purposes.

(2) It shall be the duty of any sheriff, constable, marshal, or policeman in a municipality, or any person vested with general police authority, who has reason to believe and does believe that the above described explosives are being transported or possessed for aid in the commission of a crime, forthwith to make a reasonable search of such person or vehicle, and to seize such explosives and to at once arrest the person or persons having possession or control thereof. Such officer or officers proceeding in good faith shall not be liable either civilly or criminally for such a search and seizure without a warrant, so long as said search and seizure is conducted in a reasonable manner, it appearing that the officer or officers had reason to believe and did believe that the law was being violated at the time such search was instituted. And the officer or officers making such search shall be competent to testify as a witness or witnesses as to all facts ascertained by means of said reasonable search or seizure, and all such explosives seized shall be admitted in evidence. But this section shall not authorize the search of a residence or home, or room, or building, or the premises belonging to or in the possession lawfully of the party suspected, without a search warrant.

(3) In order to invoke the exception provided in subsection (1) for persons who possess explosive articles for business purposes, such person must comply with the provisions of this subsection as follows:

(a) One or more individuals shall be designated by the owner of a business employing explosive articles subject to this section as the custodian for such articles; and

(b) The custodian shall notify the sheriff of any county wherein such articles are utilized or employed by registering with the sheriff in writing prior to such use and including in such registration:

(i) The business name and address of the owner of the articles;

(ii) The name, address and local address of the custodian;

(iii) The location of the job site where such articles shall be employed;

(iv) In the event subject articles will not be in the immediate possession of the custodian, the custodian shall advise the sheriff of the specific location where such articles are left or stored;

(v) Whenever business operations subject to this section or the storage of articles subject to this section occur within an incorporated municipality, the mayor or chief of police shall also be notified as required by this subsection.

(4) Any person who fails to comply with the provisions of subsection (3) of this section shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished by imprisonment in the state penitentiary for a term not to exceed one (1) year or by a fine in an amount not to exceed Ten Thousand Dollars ($10,000.00), or by both.

(5) The provisions of subsections (3) and (4) of this section are supplemental to any other statutory provision, ordinances of local governments or liabilities or duties otherwise imposed by law.

at imprisonment in the State Penitentiary for any term as the court, in its discretion, may determine, but not to be less than five (5) years.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.

A capital case is any case where the permissible punishment prescribed by the legislature is death, even though such penalty may not be inflicted since the decision of the United States Supreme Court in Furman v. Georgia, 408 U.S. 238, 33 L. Ed. 2d 346, 92 S. Ct. 2726, reh den 409 U.S. 902, 34 L. Ed. 2d 163, 93 S. Ct. 89 and on remand 229 Ga 731, 194 SE2d 410. Hudson v. McAdory, 268 So. 2d 916 (Miss. 1972).

This section [Code 1942, § 2143] makes it unlawful for any person to plant any bomb or other explosive matter or thing near any building where there is being stored any goods, wares, merchandise, or anything of value, with a felonious intent to harm the personal property. Tarrant v. State, 236 So. 2d 360 (Miss. 1970), cert. denied, 401 U.S. 920, 91 S. Ct. 907, 27 L. Ed. 2d 823 (1971).

It is not necessary that a bomb have a fuse or detonating device in order to constitute a violation of this section [Code 1942, § 2143]. Tarrant v. State, 236 So. 2d 360 (Miss. 1970), cert. denied, 401 U.S. 920, 91 S. Ct. 907, 27 L. Ed. 2d 823 (1971).

The particular evil sought to be curbed by the enactment of this section [Code 1942, § 2143] was violence to persons or property, and the classifying characteristics of that particular evil is the employment or use of bombs or other explosives in, upon or near any bus or other objects and places designated in the statute as a means and place to accomplish the evil. Rogers v. State, 228 Miss. 873, 89 So. 2d 860 (1956).

The noun “bomb” was intended to designate an infernal machine employing explosives contrived by criminals to accomplish bodily injury or destruction of property. Rogers v. State, 228 Miss. 873, 89 So. 2d 860 (1956).

The court is not authorized to limit the application of this section [Code 1942, § 2143] to cases where the bus in question was carrying passengers on public ways, or when there was a strike in progress. Rogers v. State, 228 Miss. 873, 89 So. 2d 860 (1956).

It is not necessary to hurl, throw or drop a bomb onto a bus to constitute the bombing of a bus. Rogers v. State, 228 Miss. 873, 89 So. 2d 860 (1956).

Where, pursuant to a plan to kill a bus driver, the accused attached dynamite to an empty bus in such a manner that it exploded upon the ignition being turned on, and the intended victim was horribly injured, the presence of the bus driver at the time of the explosion satisfied the statutory requirements that the bus must be occupied. Rogers v. State, 228 Miss. 873, 89 So. 2d 860 (1956).

Where the accused, pursuant to a plan to kill a bus driver, attached dynamite to a bus in such a manner that it exploded upon the ignition being turned on, and the intended victim was horribly maimed, the offense came within the purview of this section [Code 1942, § 2143], rather than

Code 1942, § 2011. Rogers v. State, 228 Miss. 873, 89 So. 2d 860 (1956).

If any person shall willfully and unlawfully shoot or discharge any pistol, shotgun, rifle or firearm of any nature or description into any dwelling house or any other building usually occupied by persons, whether actually occupied or not, he shall be guilty of a felony whether or not anybody be injured thereby and, on conviction thereof, shall be punished by imprisonment in the state penitentiary for a term not to exceed ten (10) years, or by imprisonment in the county jail for not more than one (1) year, or by fine of not more than five thousand dollars ($5,000.00), or by both such imprisonment and fine, within the discretion of the court.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.
2. Sentence proper.
3. Evidence.
4. Double Jeopardy.

1. In general.

Miss. Code Ann. § 97-37-29 should be classified as a general intent crime since the term “willfully,” without more, indicates the person intended to do the unlawful bodily movements: that is, to shoot the firearm; there is no further language in the statute for an intent to do a further act or achieve another consequence, as there would be in a specific intent crime. Johnson v. State, 44 So. 3d 400 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion by admitting defendant’s prior conviction of shooting into an occupied dwelling into evidence under Miss. R. Evid. 609 because he opened the door to the state’s questions concerning the conviction, as he testified that he did not get angry with his loved ones and that he, at best, simply walked away if he started getting angry; the prior conviction involved defendant’s shooting into his ex-girlfriend’s house. White v. State, 962 So. 2d 728 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

Defendant’s convictions for murder, armed robbery, and shooting into an occupied dwelling were appropriate because the evidence was sufficient: two witnesses testified to seeing defendant shoot the victim; a witness further testified to observing defendant removing the victim’s clothing and wallet; and a female testified to a shot being fired through her front door at approximately the time that the victim was shot. Conner v. State, 971 So. 2d 630 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007), writ of certiorari denied by 973 So. 2d 244, 2007 Miss. LEXIS 682 (Miss. 2007).

Where defendant admitted to firing a shot while near or at a victim’s front door, witnesses saw him at the scene, he threatened to shoot everyone inside the residence, and there were no bullet holes there earlier in the day, there was sufficient evidence to support a conviction under Miss. Code Ann. § 97-37-29; therefore, a trial court did not err by refusing to grant a peremptory instruction or by denying defendant’s motions for a directed verdict and judgment notwithstanding the verdict and/or a new trial. Miles v. State, 956 So. 2d 349 (Miss. Ct. App. 2007).

dwelling were not against the overwhelming weight of the evidence because: (1) the victim and a witness testified that they told police right away that defendant was the shooter; (2) the victim's mother testified that one week before the shooting the victim's sister and defendant's ex-girlfriend called home scared because defendant had threatened to shoot up the house or to set it on fire; (3) the victim's mother testified that it was that same week she spotted defendant trying to break into the home; and (4) defendant's brother-in-law testified that defendant admitted that he shot the victim. Brown v. State, 986 So. 2d 308 (Miss. Ct. App. 2006), reversed by, remanded by 986 So. 2d 270, 2008 Miss. LEXIS 340 (Miss. 2008).

Trial judge properly refused to direct a verdict in defendant's favor where the evidence offered by the State was such that fair-minded jurors could find defendant guilty as charged; eyewitnesses testified that they had seen the defendant kill the victim and shoot into the air and gun residue tests indicated that defendant had been in the environment of a discharged weapon. Maxwell v. State, 856 So. 2d 513 (Miss. Ct. App. 2003), writ of certiorari denied by 892 So. 2d 824, 2005 Miss. LEXIS 11 (Miss. 2005).

Having been indicted separately for both murder, under § 97-3-19, and for felony of shooting into occupied building, under this section, defendant who was tried on murder indictment alone, and who had been convicted only of manslaughter, could not be prosecuted in second trial for shooting felony, since, under circumstances of case, it was lesser offense that was included in murder charge. Davis v. Herring, 800 F.2d 513 (5th Cir. 1986).

When defendant has been tried for murder and convicted of lesser offense of manslaughter, subsequent indictment for separate felony of shooting into occupied building based on same criminal episode is barred on double jeopardy grounds. Davis v. Herring, 800 F.2d 513 (5th Cir. 1986).

The evidence was sufficient to support a conviction of shooting into a building usually occupied by other people under this section where there was overwhelming evidence that shot gun pellets went into the exterior of a door to a motel room; the meaning and intention of the statute were met even though there was no evidence as to the condition of the inside of the door. May v. State, 569 So. 2d 1188 (Miss. 1990).

The offenses of aggravated assault under § 97-3-7 and shooting into a dwelling house under this section did not constitute the "same offense" for double jeopardy purposes where at least 18 shots were fired into the house and the victim was not struck with all 18 shots; the 2 statutes require proof of different facts in that shooting into a dwelling house is not required to establish an aggravated assault, and neither injury nor attempt to injure is required to prove the offense of shooting into a dwelling house. Shook v. State, 552 So. 2d 841 (Miss. 1989).

Defendant accused of shooting into occupied building is not deprived of fair and impartial trial by improper admission of testimony concerning threats made to chief prosecuting witness and witness' family and employees, as well as improper hearsay testimony as to police chief's opinion of reason for shooting; testimony by eyewitness that defendant participated in crime and evidence that gun used was found in defendant's possession is sufficient to support conviction. Walker v. State, 473 So. 2d 435 (Miss. 1985).

Conviction for shooting into occupied dwelling may not be based upon practically unsupported testimony of witness whose story is constantly changing, particularly in case which also involves possible perjury, inadequate instructions and possibility of illicit attempts to influence jury. Rainer v. State, 473 So. 2d 172 (Miss. 1985).

Evidence offered pursuant to a void indictment returned under this section [Code 1942, § 2086.5] would be sufficient, were the indictment not void, to withstand a motion by the defendants for a directed verdict. Whitney v. State, 205 So. 2d 284 (Miss. 1967).

2. Sentence proper.

Inmate was not entitled to post-conviction relief simply because he was sentenced to 10 years for the shooting into a dwelling house, which was the maximum sentence, even though he was a first time offender, because sentences were generally upheld on appeal if they were within the statutory range. Johnson v. State, 908 So. 2d 900 (Miss. Ct. App. 2005).

3. Evidence.

Defendant's conviction for shooting into a dwelling house was appropriate because the testimony showed that defendant willfully and unlawfully fired the weapon in the direction of the trailer and struck it. The proof also showed that defendant was aiming at the victim, who was standing in front of the trailer. Johnson v. State, 44 So. 3d 400 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010).

Defendant's conviction for shooting into a dwelling house was appropriate because the appellate court rejected defendant's contention that "willfully" in Miss. Code Ann. § 97-37-29 must be interpreted to mean that he had to have the specific intent to shoot into the trailer. Defendant was presumed to have known that when he attempted to shoot the victim while the fight ensued in front of the trailer, a natural probable result of this illegal act was the possibility of shooting into the trailer. Johnson v. State, 44 So. 3d 400 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010).

Although defendant, who was convicted of murder while engaged in the crime of drive-by shooting and for shooting into an occupied dwelling, argued that the State failed to prove that he willfully discharged a pistol into a dwelling, the evidence amply supported the jury's finding that defendant willfully shot into an occupied dwelling. Two witnesses testified that defendant expressed his intent to shoot at the victim's house and that he admitted shooting the victim, and the victim's girlfriend identified defendant's voice during an altercation that took place outside the victim's home immediately prior to the shooting. Boyd v. State, 977 So. 2d 329 (Miss. 2008).

4. Double Jeopardy.

Defendant's convictions for murder and for shooting into an occupied dwelling did not violate the double jeopardy clause of the Fifth Amendment. In order to convict defendant for shooting into an occupied dwelling, the State was required to prove that defendant shot into a dwelling house, but no such showing was required to convict defendant under the felony-murder statute. Boyd v. State, 977 So. 2d 329 (Miss. 2008).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

- 1.-2. [Reserved for future use].
3. Evidence.
4. Overwhelming weight of evidence.
5. Sentence.

1.-2. [Reserved for future use].

3. Evidence.

Defendant's argument that the State failed to prove that he knew the firearm he used in the shootings was stolen and thus, that his conviction for possession of a stolen firearm was improper, was without merit, Miss. Code Ann. § 97-37-35(1). The jury heard the informant testify that he gave defendant a pistol in exchange for crack cocaine and the informant testified that defendant knew the pistol was stolen and that defendant was trying to sell it quickly because it was a stolen gun. Mayers v. State, 42 So. 3d 33 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010), writ of certiorari denied by 42 So. 3d 24, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 437 (Miss. 2010).

To convict a defendant of trafficking in stolen firearms, the State did not need to enter the actual firearms into evidence as (1) there was no best evidence rule with regard to physical evidence that was not writings, recordings, or photographs; (2) requiring the State to offer actual firearms into evidence would impose a high burden on prosecutors and the courts in cases where there were large quantities of physical evidence; and (3) the State satisfied the relevancy and authentication requirements permitting the photographs of the firearms to be introduced into evidence. Riley v. State, 1 So. 3d 877 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 999 So. 2d 1280, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 18 (Miss. 2009).

4. Overwhelming weight of evidence.

Guilty verdict was not against the overwhelming weight of the evidence because (1) the testimony of defendant's accomplice was reasonable, consistent, and substantially uncontradicted; (2) the jury received a cautionary instruction relating to the manner in which the accomplice testimony should be viewed; (3) the accomplice's testimony that defendant knew the firearms were stolen was corroborated because defendant told the investigators that he had nothing to do with the burglaries and only pointed out places where guns were sold; and (4) one of the buyers testified that defendant sold the guns to him. Riley v. State, 1 So. 3d 877 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 999 So. 2d 1280, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 18 (Miss. 2009).

5. Sentence.

Defendant's 30-year sentence for each count of trafficking in stolen firearms was not unconstitutionally disproportionate to the crime committed because (1) it was within the statutory guidelines, which the legislature created as a matter of public policy; (2) it was below the potential life sentence he could have received; and (3) it was not grossly disproportionate to the crime he committed. Riley v. State, 1 So. 3d 877 (Miss. Ct. App. 2008), writ of certiorari denied by 999 So. 2d 1280, 2009 Miss. LEXIS 18 (Miss. 2009).

§ 97-37-37. Enhanced penalty for use of firearm during commission of felony.

(1) Except to the extent that a greater minimum sentence is otherwise provided by any other provision of law, any person who uses or displays a firearm during the commission of any felony shall, in addition to the punishment provided for such felony, be sentenced to an additional term of imprisonment in the custody of the Department of Corrections of five (5) years, which sentence shall not be reduced or suspended.

(2) Except to the extent that a greater minimum sentence is otherwise provided by any other provision of law, any convicted felon who uses or displays a firearm during the commission of any felony shall, in addition to the punishment provided for such felony, be sentenced to an additional term of imprisonment in the custody of the Department of Corrections of ten (10) years, to run consecutively, not concurrently, which sentence shall not be reduced or suspended.

SOURCES: Laws, 2004, ch. 392, § 1; Laws, 2007, ch. 323, § 1, eff from and after July 1, 2007.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. Applicability.
2. Double jeopardy.
3. Evidence.
4. Jury trial.

1. Applicability.

Because defendant was not convicted of any charge involving the use and display of the firearm and the jury was not instructed to determine if defendant had used or displayed the firearm that he possessed in the commission of a felony, the circuit court erroneously used a fact that had not been determined by the jury to enhance his sentence beyond the statutory maximum. Johnson v. State, 132 So. 3d 616 (Miss. Ct. App. 2013).

Because no authority holds that the indictment must make reference to the enhancement statute, and the statute specifying what the indictment must contain does not require such inclusion, and because the counts in the indictment alleged that defendant committed an aggravated assault by shooting the victim in the back with a firearm and that he was a convicted felon in unlawful possession of a firearm, there was no unfair surprise regarding defendant's sentence enhancement, and the enhanced portion of his sentence was legal. Sallie v. State, — So. 3d —, 2013 Miss. App. LEXIS 833 (Miss. Ct. App. Dec. 3, 2013).

Trial court erred in enhancing defendant's sentence for using a firearm during the commission of a felony because the jury did not specifically find defendant guilty of using a firearm in the commission of the crime of manslaughter; because the fact that defendant used a firearm during the commission of the felony crime of manslaughter could be inferred only from the evidence, not the jury's findings, the trial court was not permitted to enhance defendant's sentence. Waits v. State, 119 So. 3d 1024 (Miss. 2013).

Defendant's enhanced sentences for his convictions of aggravated assault on law enforcement officers were inappropriate because he should have been sentenced under Miss. Code Ann. § 97-37-37(1), which became effective on July 1, 2004 and which was in effect at the time his crime was committed. Instead, he was incorrectly sentenced under Miss. Code Ann. § 97-37-37(2), which was not in effect at the time his crime was committed. Mayers v. State, 42 So. 3d 33 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010), writ of certiorari denied by 42 So. 3d 24, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 437 (Miss. 2010).

2. Double jeopardy.

Same elements test did not apply because the statute is a sentence enhancement, not a separate crime, and thus defendant's double jeopardy claim related to his conviction of possession of a firearm by a felon was without merit. Stewart v. State, 131 So. 3d 569 (Miss. 2014).

Defendant's sentence enhancement did not give rise to a double jeopardy claim. Clark v. State, 127 So. 3d 292 (Miss. Ct. App. 2013).

Defendant's sentence enhancement for using a firearm in the commission of a felony, to wit, aggravated assault, did not violate principles of double jeopardy because the legislature clearly intended an additional term of imprisonment be applied cumulatively to the underlying offense. Wansley v. State, 114 So. 3d 793 (Miss. Ct. App. 2013), writ of certiorari denied by 127 So. 3d 1115, 2013 Miss. LEXIS 655 (Miss. 2013).

Miss. Code Ann. § 97-37-37(2) merely imposes an elevated sentence for use or display of a firearm during the commission of a felony, and it does not delineate an independent substantive offense in violation of double jeopardy protections. Lewis v. State, 112 So. 3d 1092 (Miss. Ct. App. 2013).

Defendant's argument that the application of Miss. Code Ann. § 97-37-37 constituted double jeopardy because it required proof of the same elements as the underlying crimes was procedurally barred because it was not raised at trial. Notwithstanding the procedural bar, the argument was without merit because the statute was clearly a sentence enhancement and did not set out separate elements of the underlying felony. Mayers v. State, 42 So. 3d 33 (Miss. Ct. App. 2010), writ of certiorari denied by 42 So. 3d 24, 2010 Miss. LEXIS 437 (Miss. 2010).

3. Evidence.

Trial court improperly applied a sentence enhancement because there was insufficient evidence showing that defendant used or displayed a firearm during the commission of a felony. The evidence reflected that defendant merely possessed the gun, but the trial court incorrectly determined that possession alone constituted use or display. Clark v. State, 127 So. 3d 292 (Miss. Ct. App. 2013).

4. Jury trial.

Trial court's application of a sentencing enhancement violated defendant's right to a trial by jury because defendant was not found to be guilty of every element of the crime beyond a reasonable doubt. The jury found defendant guilty of possession of a weapon by a felon, but did not find that defendant used the firearm during the commission of the felony. Clark v. State, 127 So. 3d 292 (Miss. Ct. App. 2013).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.

Miss. Code Ann. § 97-41-1, under which defendant was convicted of animal cruelty, was unconstitutionally vague; it lacked words of intent, and left defendant no room for discretion in deciding whether he would be able to heal his horse without having to destroy it. Davis v. State, 806 So. 2d 1098 (Miss. 2001).

One merely riding with and paying a fare to another, who hired a team, cannot be convicted of cruelty to the team in overloading and overdriving. Strickland v. State, 81 Miss. 134, 32 So. 921 (1902).

§ 97-41-2. Authority to seize maltreated, neglected, or abandoned animals.

(1) All courts in the State of Mississippi may order the seizure of an animal by a law enforcement agency, for its care and protection upon a finding of probable cause to believe said animal is being cruelly treated, neglected or abandoned. Such probable cause may be established upon sworn testimony of any person who has witnessed the condition of said animal. The court may appoint an animal control agency, agent of an animal shelter organization, veterinarian or other person as temporary custodian for the said animal, pending final disposition of the animal pursuant to this section. Such temporary custodian shall directly contract and be responsible for any care rendered to such animal, and may make arrangements for such care as may be necessary. Upon seizure of an animal, the law enforcement agency responsible for removal of the animal shall serve notice upon the owner of the animal, if possible, and shall also post prominently a notice to the owner or custodian to inform such person that the animal has been seized. Such process and notice shall contain a description of the animal seized, the date seized, the name of the law enforcement agency seizing the animal, the name of the temporary custodian, if known at the time, and shall include a copy of the order of the court authorizing the seizure.

(2) Within five (5) days of seizure of an animal, the owner of the animal may request a hearing in the court ordering the animal to be seized to determine whether the owner is able to provide adequately for the animal and is fit to have custody of the animal. The court shall hold such hearing within fourteen (14) days of receiving such request. The hearing shall be concluded and the court order entered thereon within twenty-one (21) days after the hearing is commenced. Upon requesting a hearing, the owner shall have three (3) business days to post a bond or security with the court clerk in an amount determined by the court to be sufficient to repay all reasonable costs sufficient to provide for the animal's care. Failure to post such bond within three (3) days shall result in forfeiture of the animal to the court. If the temporary custodian has custody of the animal upon the expiration of the bond or security, the animal shall be forfeited to the court unless the court orders otherwise.

(3) In determining the owner's fitness to have custody of an animal, the court may consider, among other matters:

(a) Testimony from law enforcement officers, animal control officers, animal protection officials, and other witnesses as to the condition the animal was kept in by its owner or custodian.

(b) Testimony and evidence as to the type and amount of care provided to the animal by its owner or custodian.

(c) Expert testimony as to the proper and reasonable care of the same type of animal.

(d) Testimony from any witnesses as to prior treatment or condition of this or other animals in the same custody.

(e) Violations of laws relating to animal cruelty that the owner or custodian has been convicted of prior to the hearing.

(f) Any other evidence the court considers to be material or relevant.

(4) Upon proof of costs incurred as a result of the animal's seizure, including, but not limited to, animal medical and boarding, the court may order that the animal's owner reimburse the temporary custodian for such costs. A lien for authorized expenses is hereby created upon all animals seized under this section, and shall have priority to any other lien on such animal.

(5) If the court finds the owner of the animal is unable or unfit to adequately provide for the animal, or that the animal is severely injured, diseased, or suffering, and, therefore, not likely to recover, the court may order that the animal be permanently forfeited and released to an animal control agency, animal protection organization or to the appropriate entity to be euthanized or the court may order that such animal be sold at public sale in the manner now provided for judicial sales; any proceeds from such sale shall go first toward the payment of expenses and costs relating to the care and treatment of such animal, and any excess amount shall be paid to the owner of the animal.

(6) Upon notice and hearing as provided in this section, or as a part of any preceding conducted under the terms of this section, the court may order that other animals in the custody of the owner that were not seized be surrendered and further enjoin the owner from having custody of other animals in the future.

(7) If the court determines the owner is able to provide adequately for, and have custody of, the animal, the court shall order the animal be claimed and removed by the owner within seven (7) days after the date of the order.

(8) Nothing in this section shall be construed to prevent or otherwise interfere with a law enforcement officer's authority to seize an animal as evidence or require court action for the taking into custody and making proper disposition of animals as authorized in Sections 21-19-9 and 41-53-11.

(9) For the purposes of this section the term "animal" or "animals" means any feline, exotic animal, canine, horse, mule, jack or jennet.

§ 97-41-3. Authority to kill injured, neglected, etc. animals other than dogs or cats; authorization to euthanize injured, diseased, etc. dog or cat under certain circumstances; immunity of persons acting in good faith and without malice pursuant to section.

(1) Any sheriff, constable, policeman, or agent of a society for the prevention of cruelty to animals may kill, or cause to be killed, any animal other than a dog or cat found neglected or abandoned, if in the opinion of three (3) respectable citizens it is injured or diseased past recovery, or by age has become useless.

(2)(a) After all reasonable attempts have been made to locate the legal owner of a dog or cat that is found maimed, wounded, injured or diseased, the dog or cat may be euthanized, or caused to be euthanized, by:

- (i) A law enforcement officer;
- (ii) A veterinarian licensed in Mississippi;

§ 97-41-11. Fighting animals or cocks.

Any person who shall keep or use, or in any way be connected with or interested in the management of, or shall receive money for the admission of any person to, any place kept or used for the purpose of fighting any bear, cock or other creature, except a dog, or of tormenting or torturing the same, and every person who shall encourage, aid, or assist therein, or who shall permit or suffer any place to be so kept or used, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor. It shall be the duty of any policeman or other officer of the law, county or municipal, to enter into any such place kept for such purpose, and to arrest each and every person concerned or participating therein.

ATTORNEY GENERAL OPINIONS

In regard to “wild hog baying and catching,” if the animals are fought, killed, maimed, wounded, injured, tormented or tortured, then the practice would be illegal. However, such is a question of fact for the courts to decide. Johnson, Mar. 9, 2004, A.G. Op. 04-0078.

(1) Any person who shall maliciously, either out of a spirit of revenge or wanton cruelty, or who shall mischievously kill, maim or wound, or injure any livestock, or cause any person to do the same, shall be guilty of a felony and upon conviction, shall be committed to the custody of the State Department of Corrections for not less than twelve (12) months nor more than five years, and fined an amount not less than One Thousand Five Hundred Dollars ($1,500.00), nor more than Ten Thousand Dollars ($10,000.00).

(2) In addition to any such fine or imprisonment which may be imposed, the court shall order that restitution be made to the owner of any animal listed in subsection (1) of this section. JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.

Affidavit for maliciously shooting animal which neither gives names nor description of horse, cannot be amended so as to allege ownership in another than persons set out in affidavit. White v. State, 95 Miss. 75, 48 So. 611 (1909).

Guilt is determinable by the intent and purpose which prompts the act. Stephens v. State, 65 Miss. 329, 3 So. 458 (1888).

But an indictment which avers that the offense was “maliciously” done, without adding the words, “out of a spirit of revenge or wanton cruelty,” is good. These words merely describe and define “maliciously.”

Rembert v. State, 56 Miss. 280 (1879).

And the affidavit or indictment must aver one or the other. Thompson v. State, 51 Miss. 353 (1875).

The section [Code 1942, § 2075] defines two distinct attributes of malicious injury, within one or the other of which the facts must bring a case to warrant conviction: (1) that the injury was done “maliciously; either out of a spirit of revenge or wanton cruelty;” or (2) that it was done “mischievously.” Duncan v. State, 49 Miss. 331 (1873).

ATTORNEY GENERAL OPINIONS

As long as animals in dog baying contest involving dogs and wild hogs were not fought, killed, maimed, wounded or injured or tormented, then practice would not be illegal. Simmons, June 16, 1993, A.G. Op. #93-0365.

§ 97-41-16. Mississippi Dog and Cat Pet Protection Law of 2011; legislative intent; simple cruelty; aggravated cruelty; penalty; restitution; activities not constituting cruelty to dog or cat; immunity for good faith reporting of suspected cruelty; registration of organizations that have purpose of protection of or prevention of cruelty to dogs and cats.

(1)(a) The provisions of this section shall be known and may be cited as the “Mississippi Dog and Cat Pet Protection Law of 2011.”

(b) The intent of the Legislature in enacting this law is to provide only for the protection of domesticated dogs and cats, as these are the animals most often serving as the loyal and beloved pets of the citizens of this state. Animals other than domesticated dogs and cats are specifically excluded from the enhanced protection described in this section for dogs and cats. The provisions of this section do not apply, and shall not be construed as applying, to any animal other than a domesticated dog or cat.

(2)(a) If a person shall intentionally or with criminal negligence wound, deprive of adequate shelter, food or water, or carry or confine in a cruel manner, any domesticated dog or cat, or cause any person to do the same, then he or she shall be guilty of the offense of simple cruelty to a dog or cat. A person who is convicted of the offense of simple cruelty to a dog or cat shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and fined not more than One Thousand Dollars ($1,000.00), or imprisoned not more than six (6) months, or both.

(b) If a person with malice shall intentionally torture, mutilate, maim, burn, starve or disfigure any domesticated dog or cat, or cause any person to do the same, then he or she shall be guilty of the offense of aggravated cruelty to a dog or cat.

(i) A person who is convicted of a first offense of aggravated cruelty to a dog or cat shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and fined not more than Two Thousand Five Hundred Dollars ($2,500.00), or imprisoned for not more than six (6) months, or both.

(ii) A person who is convicted of a second or subsequent offense of aggravated cruelty to a dog or cat, the offenses being committed within a period of five (5) years, shall be guilty of a felony and fined not more than Five Thousand Dollars ($5,000.00) and imprisoned for not less than one (1) year nor more than five (5) years.

(c) A conviction entered upon a plea of nolo contendere to a charge of aggravated cruelty to a dog or cat shall be counted as a conviction for the purpose of determining whether a later conviction is a first or subsequent offense.

(d) For purposes of this section, one or more alleged acts of the offenses of simple cruelty to a dog or cat or aggravated cruelty to a dog or cat, committed against one or more domesticated dogs or cats, or any combination thereof, shall constitute a single offense if the alleged acts occurred at the same time.

(3) In addition to such fine or imprisonment which may be imposed:

(a) The court shall order that restitution be made to the owner of such dog or cat. The measure for restitution in money shall be the current replacement value of such loss and the actual veterinarian fees, medicine, special supplies, loss of income and other costs incurred as a result of actions in violation of subsection (2) of this section; and

(b) The court may order that:

(i) The reasonable costs of sheltering, transporting and rehabilitating the dog or cat, and any other costs directly related to the care of the dog or cat, be reimbursed to:

1. Any law enforcement agency; or
2. Any agency or department of a political subdivision that is charged with the control, protection or welfare of dogs or cats within the subdivision. The agency or department may reimburse a nongovernmental organization for such costs, if the organization possesses non-profit status under the United States Internal Revenue Code and has the purpose of protecting the welfare of, or preventing cruelty to, dogs or cats.

(ii) The person convicted:

1. Receive a psychiatric or psychological evaluation and counseling or treatment for a length of time as prescribed by the court. The cost of any evaluation, counseling and treatment shall be paid by the offender upon order of the court, up to a maximum amount that is no more than the jurisdictional limit of the sentencing court.

2. Perform community service for a period not exceeding the applicable maximum term of imprisonment that may be imposed for conviction of the offense.

3. Be enjoined from employment in any position that involves the care of a dog or cat, or in any place where dogs or cats are kept or confined, for a period which the court deems appropriate.

(4)(a) Nothing in this section shall be construed as prohibiting a person from:

(i) Defending himself or herself or another person from physical or economic injury being threatened or caused by a dog or cat.

(ii) Injuring or killing an unconfined dog or cat on the property of the person, if the unconfined dog or cat is believed to constitute a threat of physical injury or damage to any domesticated animal under the care or control of such person.

(iii) Acting under the provisions of Section 95-5-19 to protect poultry or livestock from a trespassing dog that is in the act of chasing or killing the poultry or livestock, or acting to protect poultry or livestock from a trespassing cat that is in the act of chasing or killing the poultry or livestock.

(iv) Engaging in practices that are licensed or lawful under the Mississippi Veterinary Practice Act, Section 73-39-51 et seq., or engaging in activities by any licensed veterinarian while following accepted standards of practice of the profession within the State of Mississippi, including the euthanizing of a dog or cat.

(v) Rendering emergency care, treatment, or assistance to a dog or cat that is abandoned, ill, injured, or in distress, if the person rendering the care, treatment, or assistance is acting in good faith.

(vi) Performing activities associated with accepted agricultural and animal husbandry practices with regard to livestock, poultry or other animals, including those activities which involve:

1. Using dogs in such practices.
2. Raising, managing and using animals to provide food, fiber or transportation.
3. Butchering animals and processing food.

(vii) Training for, or participating in, a rodeo, equine activity, dog show, event sponsored by a kennel club or other bona fide organization that promotes the breeding or showing of dogs or cats, or any other competitive event which involves the lawful use of dogs or cats.

(viii) Engaging in accepted practices of dog or cat identification.

(ix) Engaging in lawful activities that are regulated by the Mississippi Department of Wildlife, Fisheries and Parks or the Mississippi Department of Marine Resources, including without limitation, hunting, trapping, fishing, and wildlife and seafood management.

(x) Performing scientific, research, medical and zoological activities undertaken by research and education facilities or institutions that are:

1. Regulated under the provisions of the Animal Welfare Act, 7 USCS 2131 et seq., as in effect on July 1, 2011;
2. Regulated under the provisions of the Health Research Extension Act of 1985, Public Law No. 99-158; or
3. Subject to any other applicable state or federal law or regulation governing animal research as in effect on July 1, 2011.

(xi) Disposing of or destroying certain dogs under authority of Sections 19-5-50, 21-19-9 and 41-53-11, which allow counties, municipalities and certain law enforcement officers to destroy dogs running at large without proper identification indicating that such dogs have been vaccinated for rabies.

(xii) Engaging in professional pest control activities, including those activities governed by the Mississippi Pesticide Law of 1975, Section 69-23-1 et seq.; professional services related to entomology, plant pathology, horticulture, tree surgery, weed control or soil classification, as regulated under Section 69-19-1 et seq.; and any other pest control activities conducted in accordance with state law.

(xiii) Performing the humane euthanization of a dog or cat pursuant to Section 97-41-3.

(b) If the owner or person in control of a dog or cat is precluded, by natural or other causes beyond his reasonable control, from acting to prevent an act or omission that might otherwise constitute an allegation of the offense of simple cruelty to a dog or cat or the offense of aggravated cruelty to a dog or cat, then that person shall not be guilty of the offense. Natural or other causes beyond the reasonable control of the person include, without limitation, acts of God, declarations of disaster, emergencies, acts of war, earthquakes, hurricanes, tornadoes, fires, floods or other natural disasters.

(5) The provisions of this section shall not be construed to:

(a) Apply to any animal other than a dog or cat.

(b) Create any civil or criminal liability on the part of the driver of a motor vehicle if the driver unintentionally injures or kills a dog or cat as a result of the dog or cat being accidentally hit by the vehicle.

(6)(a) Except as otherwise provided in Section 97-35-47 for the false reporting of a crime, a person, who in good faith and acting without malice, reports a suspected incident of simple cruelty to a dog or cat, or aggravated cruelty to a dog or cat, to a local animal control, protection or welfare organization, a local law enforcement agency, or the Mississippi Department of Public Safety, shall be immune from civil and criminal liability for reporting the incident.

(b) A veterinarian licensed in Mississippi or a person acting at the direction of a veterinarian licensed in Mississippi, who in good faith and acting without malice, participates in the investigation of an alleged offense of simple or aggravated cruelty to a dog or cat, or makes a decision or renders services regarding the care of a dog or cat that is involved in the investigation, shall be immune from civil and criminal liability for those acts.

(7) Other than an agency or department of a political subdivision that is charged with the control, protection or welfare of dogs or cats within the subdivision, any organization that has the purpose of protecting the welfare of, or preventing cruelty to, dogs or cats, shall register the organization with the sheriff of the county in which the organization operates a physical facility for the protection, welfare or shelter of dogs or cats, on or before the first day of October each year. The provisions of this subsection (7) shall apply to any organization that has the purpose of protecting the welfare of dogs or cats, or preventing cruelty to dogs or cats, regardless of whether the organization also protects animals other than dogs or cats.

(8) Nothing in this section shall limit the authority of a municipality or board of supervisors to adopt ordinances, rules, regulations or resolutions which may be, in whole or in part, more restrictive than the provisions of this section, and in those cases, the more restrictive ordinances, rules, regulations or resolutions will govern.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. Constitutionality.

Ordinary person giving a fair reading of Miss. Code Ann. § 97-41-16 would have concluded that defendant's conduct in shooting his neighbor's dog was prohibited, and that § 97-41-16 was not unconstitutionally so vague that it would not have given defendant sufficient notice that the conduct in which he engaged was proscribed; section 97-41-16 was not un-constitutionally vague under the due process clause. Hill v. State, 853 So. 2d 100 (Miss. 2003).

§ 97-41-18. Prohibition against intentionally conducting fight between canine and hog; exceptions; penalties.

(1) For the purposes of this section, "hog" means a pig, swine or boar.

(2) It is unlawful for any person to organize or conduct any commercial event commonly referred to as a "catch" wherein there is a display of combat or fighting among one or more domestic or feral canines and feral or domestic hogs and in which it is intended or reasonably foreseeable that the canines or hogs would be injured, maimed, mutilated or killed.

(3) It is unlawful for any person to organize, conduct or financially or materially support any event prohibited by this section.

(4) The provisions of this section shall not apply to any competitive event in which canines trained for hunting or herding activities are released in an open or enclosed area to locate and corner hogs, commonly referred to as a "bay event," and in which competitive points are deducted if a hog is caught and held.

(5) The provisions of this section shall not apply to the lawful hunting of hogs with canines or the use of canines for the management, farming or herding of hogs which are livestock or the private training of canines for the purposes enumerated in this subsection provided that such training is conducted for the field using accepted dog handling and training practices and is not in violation of the provisions of subsection (1) of this section.

ATTORNEY GENERAL OPINIONS

Interpretation of the phrase "commercial event" as an event primarily organized for the purpose of financial gain is correct. The term would also designate an event that is advertised. Dedeaux, May 12, 2006, A.G. Op. 06-0171.

§ 97-41-19. Dog fights.

(1) If any person (a) shall sponsor, promote, stage or conduct a fight or fighting match between dogs, or (b) shall wager or bet, promote or encourage the wagering or betting of any money or other valuable thing upon any such fight or upon the result thereof, or (c) shall own a dog with the intent to wilfully enter it or to participate in any such fight, or (d) shall train or transport a dog for the purposes of participation in any such fight, he shall be guilty of a felony and, upon conviction, shall be punished by a fine of not less than One Thousand Dollars ($1,000.00) nor more than Five Thousand Dollars ($5,000.00), or by imprisonment in the State Penitentiary for a term of not less than one (1) nor more than three (3) years, or by both such fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court.

(2) If any person shall be present, as a spectator, at any location where preparations are being made for an exhibition of a fight between dogs with the intent to be present at such preparations, or if any person shall be present at an exhibition of a fight between dogs with the intent to be present at such exhibition, he shall be guilty of a felony and, upon conviction, shall be punished by a fine of not less than Five Hundred Dollars ($500.00) nor more than Five Thousand Dollars ($5,000.00), or by imprisonment in the State Penitentiary for a term of not more than one (1) year, or by both such fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court.

(3) Any law enforcement officer making an arrest under subsection (1) of this section may lawfully take possession of all dogs and all paraphernalia, implements, equipment or other property used in violation of subsection (1) of this section. Such officer shall file with the circuit court of the county within which the alleged violation occurred an affidavit stating therein (a) the name of the person charged, (b) a description of the property taken, (c) the time and place of the taking, (d) the name of the person who claims to own such property, if known, and (e) that the affiant has reason to believe, stating the ground of such belief, that the property taken was used in such violation. He shall thereupon deliver the property to such court which shall, by order in writing, place such dogs, paraphernalia, implements, equipment, or other property in the custody of a licensed veterinarian, the local humane society or other animal welfare agency, or other suitable custodian, to be kept by such custodian until the conviction or final discharge of the accused, and shall send a copy of such order without delay to the district attorney of the county. The custodian named and designated in such order shall immediately assume the custody of such property and shall retain same, subject to order of the court.

Upon the certification of a licensed veterinarian or officer of the humane society or animal welfare agency that, in his professional judgment, a dog which has been seized is not likely to survive the final disposition of the charges or that, by reason of the physical condition of the dog, it should be humanely euthanized before such time, the court may order the dog humanely euthanized. The court shall make its finding of whether to issue such an order within seven (7) days from the certification by the veterinarian or officer of the humane society or animal welfare agency. The owner of a dog which is euthanized without an order of the court with such certification of a licensed veterinarian or officer of the humane society or other animal welfare agency shall have a right of action for damages against the department or agency by which the arresting or seizing officer is employed. Upon conviction of the person charged with a violation of subsection (1) of this section, all dogs seized shall be adjudged by the court to be forfeited and the court shall order a humane disposition of the same. In no event shall the court order the dog to be euthanized without the certification of a licensed veterinarian or officer of the humane society or other animal welfare agency that, in his judgment, the dog is not likely to survive or that, by reason of its physical condition, the dog should be humanely euthanized. In the event of the acquittal or final discharge without conviction of the accused, the court shall direct the delivery of the property so held in custody to the owner thereof. All reasonable expenses incurred by the custodian of seized dogs and property shall be charged as costs of court, to be taxed against the owner or county in the discretion of the court.

(4) Nothing in subsection (1) of this section shall prohibit any of the following:

- (a) The use of dogs in the management of livestock, by the owner of such livestock or other persons in lawful custody thereof;
- (b) The use of dogs in lawful hunting; and
- (c) The training of dogs for any purpose not prohibited by law.

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. Euthanization of dogs.

Dogs seized under statute could be humanely euthanized before final disposition of criminal case by reason of the physical condition of the dog; statute meant to prosecute individuals who engaged in business of dog fighting, betting, and attendance, statute made provisions not only for what constituted crime, but seizure and disposition of those things utilized in perpetration of the crime. 32 Pit Bulldogs v. County of Prentiss, 808 So. 2d 971 (Miss. 2002).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.

State RICO Act does not set out level of intent required for prosecution of usury as collection of unlawful debt and, thus, RICO would omit essential element of crime and would be too vague to satisfy due process; although RICO is general intent crime that takes its intent from underlying crimes, level of intent for usury is defined by civil statute and would not apply to criminal prosecution. State v. Roderick, 704 So. 2d 49 (Miss. 1997), reh’g denied, 703 So. 2d 863 (Miss. 1997), cert. denied, 524 U.S. 926, 118 S. Ct. 2319, 141 L. Ed. 2d 694 (1998).

JUDICIAL DECISIONS

1. In general.

State’s RICO Act does not limit enforcement to types of unlawful loans traditionally associated with loansharking and intimidation or brutality. State v. Roderick, 704 So. 2d 49 (Miss. 1997), reh’g denied, 703 So. 2d 863 (Miss. 1997), cert. denied, 524 U.S. 926, 118 S. Ct. 2319, 141 L. Ed. 2d 694 (1998).

State RICO Act does not set out level of intent required for prosecution of usury as collection of unlawful debt and, thus, RICO would omit essential element of crime and would be too vague to satisfy due process; although RICO is general intent crime that takes its intent from underlying crimes, level of intent for usury is defined by civil statute and would not apply to criminal prosecution. State v. Roderick, 704 So. 2d 49 (Miss. 1997), reh'g denied, 703 So. 2d 863 (Miss. 1997), cert. denied, 524 U.S. 926, 118 S. Ct. 2319, 141 L. Ed. 2d 694 (1998).

All crimes used as bases for State RICO Act prosecution are outlined in RICO Act, and there are cross-references between RICO and underlying criminal statutes, and, therefore, application of RICO to usury would violate due process for lack of notice that usury is prosecutable offense; no reference to RICO is made in usury statute or other statutes on interest and finance charges, and person of ordinary intelligence would not be given fair warning that usury is prosecutable offense. State v. Roderick, 704 So. 2d 49 (Miss. 1997), reh'g denied, 703 So. 2d 863 (Miss. 1997), cert. denied, 524 U.S. 926, 118 S. Ct. 2319, 141 L. Ed. 2d 694 (1998).

Usury is not criminal under State law and, thus, application of State's RICO Act to usury would criminalize activity without fair notice and definite warning of prohibited conduct and would violate due process. State v. Roderick, 704 So. 2d 49 (Miss. 1997), reh'g denied, 703 So. 2d 863 (Miss. 1997), cert. denied, 524 U.S. 926, 118 S. Ct. 2319, 141 L. Ed. 2d 694 (1998).

Evidence that State Attorney General's office encouraged check cashers' association to lobby Legislature for regulation of their industry supported determination that State did not give check cashing businesses adequate notice that usury could be prosecuted under State RICO Act and, thus, that RICO was unconstitutionally vague as applied to check cashers; contact between check cashers and Attorney General's office led check cashers to believe that their business was legal. State v. Roderick, 704 So. 2d 49 (Miss. 1997), reh'g denied, 703 So. 2d 863 (Miss. 1997), cert. denied, 524 U.S. 926, 118 S. Ct. 2319, 141 L. Ed. 2d 694 (1998).

(8) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, a criminal or civil action or proceeding under this chapter may be commenced at any time within five (5) years after the conduct in violation of a provision of this chapter terminates or the cause of action accrues. If a criminal prosecution or civil action or other proceeding is brought, or intervened in, to punish, prevent or restrain any violation of the provisions of this chapter, the running of the period of limitations prescribed by this section with respect to any cause of action arising under subsections (5) or (6) of this section which is based in whole or in part upon any matter complained of in any such prosecution, action or proceeding shall be suspended during the pendency of such prosecution, action or proceeding and for two (2) years following its termination.

(9) The application of one (1) civil remedy under any provision of this chapter shall not preclude the application of any other remedy, civil or criminal, under this chapter or any other provision of law. Civil remedies under this chapter are supplemental.

(1) When any property is seized pursuant to Section 97-43-9, proceedings under this section shall be instituted promptly.

(2)(a) A petition for forfeiture shall be filed promptly in the name of the State of Mississippi with the clerk of the circuit court of the county in which the seizure is made. A copy of such petition shall be served upon the following persons by service of process in the same manner as in civil cases:

(i) The owner of the property, if address is known;

(ii) Any secured party who has registered his lien or filed a financing statement as provided by law, if the identity of such secured party can be ascertained by the state by making a good faith effort to ascertain the identity of such secured party as described in paragraphs (b), (c), (d), (e) and (f) of this subsection;

(iii) Any other bona fide lienholder or secured party or other person holding an interest in the property in the nature of a security interest of whom the state has actual knowledge;

(iv) A holder of a mortgage, deed of trust, lien or encumbrance of record, if the property is real estate by making a good faith inquiry as described in paragraph (g) of this section; and

(v) Any person in possession of property subject to forfeiture at the time that it was seized.

(b) If the property is a motor vehicle susceptible of titling under the Mississippi Motor Vehicle Title Law and if there is any reasonable cause to believe that the vehicle has been titled, the state shall make inquiry of the State Tax Commission as to what the records of the State Tax Commission show as to who is the record owner of the vehicle and who, if anyone, holds any lien or security interest which affects the vehicle.

(c) If the property is a motor vehicle and is not titled in the State of Mississippi, then the state shall attempt to ascertain the name and address of the person in whose name the vehicle is licensed, and if the vehicle is licensed in a state which has in effect a certificate of title law, the state shall make inquiry of the appropriate agency of that state as to what the records of the agency show as to who is the record owner of the vehicle and who, if anyone, holds any lien, security interest, or other instrument in the nature of a security device which affects the vehicle.

(d) If the property is of a nature that a financing statement is required by the laws of this state to be filed to perfect a security interest affecting the property and if there is any reasonable cause to believe that a financing statement covering the security interest has been filed under the laws of this state, the state shall make inquiry of the appropriate office designated in Section 75-9-501 as to what the records show as to who is the record owner of the property and who, if anyone, has filed a financing statement affecting the property.

(e) If the property is an aircraft or part thereof and if there is any reasonable cause to believe that an instrument in the nature of a security device affects the property, then the state shall make inquiry of the administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration as to what the records of the administrator show as to who is the record owner of the property and who, if anyone, holds an instrument in the nature of a security device which affects the property.

(f) In the case of all other personal property subject to forfeiture, if there is any reasonable cause to believe that an instrument in the nature of a security device affects the property, then the state shall make a good faith inquiry to identify the holder of any such instrument.

(g) If the property is real estate, the state shall make inquiry at the appropriate places to determine who is the owner of record and who, if anyone is a holder of a bona fide mortgage, deed of trust, lien or encumbrance.

(h) In the event the answer to an inquiry states that the record owner of the property is any person other than the person who was in possession of it when it was seized, or states that any person holds any lien, encumbrance, security interest, other interest in the nature of a security interest, mortgage or deed of trust which affects the property, the state shall cause any record owner and also any lienholder, secured party, other person who holds an interest in the property in the nature of a security interest, or holder of an encumbrance, mortgage or deed of trust which affects the property to be named in the petition of forfeiture and to be served with process in the same manner as in civil cases.

(i) If the owner of the property cannot be found and served with a copy of the petition of forfeiture, or if no person was in possession of the property subject to forfeiture at the time that it was seized and the owner of the property is unknown, the state shall file with the clerk of the court in which the proceeding is pending an affidavit to such effect, whereupon the clerk of the court shall publish notice of the hearing addressed to "the Unknown Owner of _____," filling in the blank space with a reasonably detailed description of the property subject to forfeiture. Service by publication shall contain the other requisites prescribed in Section 11-33-41, and shall be served as provided in Section 11-33-37 for publication of notice for attachments at law.

(j) No proceedings instituted pursuant to the provisions of this article shall proceed to hearing unless the judge conducting the hearing is satisfied that this section has been complied with. Any answer received from an inquiry required by paragraphs (b) through (g) of this section shall be introduced into evidence at the hearing.

(3)(a) An owner of property that has been seized shall file a verified answer within twenty (20) days after the completion of service of process. If no answer is filed, the court shall hear evidence that the property is subject to forfeiture and forfeit the property to the state. If an answer is filed, a time for hearing on forfeiture shall be set within thirty (30) days of filing the answer or at the succeeding term of court if court would not be in progress within thirty (30) days after filing the answer. Provided, however, that upon request by the state or the owner of the property, the court may postpone said forfeiture hearing to a date past the time any criminal action is pending against said owner.

(b) If the owner of the property has filed a verified answer denying that the property is subject to forfeiture, then the burden is on the state to prove that the property is subject to forfeiture. The burden of proof placed upon the state shall be clear and convincing proof. However, if no answer has been filed by the owner of the property, the petition for forfeiture may be introduced into evidence and is prima facie evidence that the property is subject to forfeiture.

(c) At the hearing any claimant of any right, title, or interest in the property may prove his lien, encumbrance, security interest, other interest in the nature of a security interest, mortgage or deed of trust to be bona fide and created without knowledge or consent that the property was to be used so as to cause the property to be subject to forfeiture.

(d) If it is found that the property is subject to forfeiture, then the judge shall forfeit the property to the state. However, if proof at the hearing discloses that the interest of any bona fide lienholder, secured party, other person holding an interest in the property in the nature of a security interest or any holder of a bona fide encumbrance, mortgage or deed of trust is greater than or equal to the present value of the property, the court shall order the property released to him. If such interest is less than the present value of the property and if the proof shows that the property is subject to forfeiture, the court shall order the property forfeited to the state.

(4)(a) All personal property, including money, which is forfeited to the state and is not capable of being sold at public auction shall be liquidated and the proceeds, after deduction of all storage and court costs, shall be forwarded to the State Treasurer and deposited in the General Fund of the state.

(b) All real estate which is forfeited to the state shall be sold to the highest bidder at a public auction to be conducted by the state at such place, on such notice and in accordance with the same procedure, as far as practicable, as is required in the case of sales of land under execution of law. The proceeds of such sale shall first be applied to the cost and expense in administering and conducting such sale, then to the satisfaction of all mortgages, deeds of trusts, liens and encumbrances of record on such property. All proceeds in excess of the amount necessary for the cost of the sale of such land and the satisfaction of any liens thereon shall be deposited in the General Fund of the State Treasury.

(c) All other property that has been seized by the state and that has been forfeited shall, except as otherwise provided, be sold at a public auction for cash by the state to the highest and best bidder after advertising the sale for at least once each week for three (3) consecutive weeks, the last notice to appear not more than ten (10) days nor less than five (5) days prior to such sale, in a newspaper having a general circulation throughout the State of Mississippi. Such notices shall contain a description of the property to be sold and a statement of the time and place of sale. It shall not be necessary to the validity of such sale either to have the property present at the place of sale or to have the name of the owner thereof stated in such notice. The proceeds of the sale shall be delivered to the circuit clerk and shall be disposed of as follows:

(i) To any bona fide lienholder, secured party, or other party holding an interest in the property in the nature of a security interest, to the extent of his interest; and

(ii) The balance, if any, after deduction of all storage and court costs, shall be forwarded to the State Treasurer and deposited with and used as general funds of the state.

(d) The State Tax Commission shall issue a certificate of title to any person who purchases property under the provisions of this section when a certificate of title is required under the laws of this state.

§ 97-44-3. Definitions.

For the purposes of this chapter, the following words and phrases shall have the meanings ascribed herein, unless the context clearly requires otherwise:

(a) “Streetgang” or “gang” or “organized gang” or “criminal streetgang” means any combination, confederation, alliance, network, conspiracy, understanding, or other similar conjoining, in law or in fact, of three (3) or more persons with an established hierarchy that, through its membership or through the agency of any member, engages in felonious criminal activity.

For purposes of this chapter, it shall not be necessary to show that a particular conspiracy, combination or conjoining of persons possesses, acknowledges or is known by any common name, insignia, flag, means of recognition, secret signal or code, creed, belief, structure, leadership or command structure, method of operation or criminal enterprise, concentration or specialty, membership, age or other qualifications, initiation rites, geographical or territorial situs or boundary or location, or other unifying mark, manner, protocol or method of expressing or indicating membership when the conspiracy’s existence, in law or in fact, can be demonstrated by a preponderance of the competent evidence. However, any evidence reasonably tending to show or demonstrate, in law or in fact, the existence of or membership in any conspiracy, confederation or other association described herein, or probative of the existence of or membership in any such association, shall be admissible in any action or proceeding brought under this chapter.

(b) "Public authority" means the state and political subdivisions as defined in Section 11-46-1, Mississippi Code of 1972.

(c) "Streetgang member" or "gang member" means any person who actually and in fact belongs to a gang, and any person who knowingly acts in the capacity of an agent for or accessory to, or is legally accountable for, or voluntarily associates himself with a gang-related criminal activity, whether in a preparatory, executory or cover-up phase of any activity, or who knowingly performs, aids or abets any such activity.

(d) "Streetgang related" or "gang-related" means any criminal activity, enterprise, pursuit or undertaking directed by, ordered by, authorized by, consented to, agreed to, requested by, acquiesced in, or ratified by any gang leader, officer or governing or policymaking person or authority, or by any agent, representative or deputy of any such officer, person or authority:

(i) With intent to increase the gang's size, membership, prestige, dominance or control in any geographical area; or

(ii) With intent to exact revenge or retribution for the gang or any member of the gang; or

(iii) With intent to provide the gang with any advantage in, or any control or dominance over, any criminal market sector, including but not limited to the unlawful manufacture, delivery, possession or sale of controlled substances; arson; traffic in stolen property or stolen credit cards; traffic in prostitution, obscenity or pornography; or that involves robbery, armed robbery, burglary or larceny; or

(iv) With intent to obstruct justice, or intimidate or eliminate any witness against the gang or any member of the gang; or

(v) With intent to otherwise, directly or indirectly, cause any benefit, aggrandizement, gain, profit or other advantage whatsoever to or for the gang, its reputation, influence or membership.

§ 97-44-5. Cause of action.

(1) A civil cause of action is hereby created in favor of any public authority expending money, allocating or reallocating police, firefighting, emergency or other personnel or resources, or otherwise incurring any loss, deprivation or injury, or sustaining any damage, impairment or harm whatsoever, proximately caused by any criminal activity.

(2) The cause of action created by this chapter shall lie against:

(a) Any streetgang in whose name, for whose benefit, on whose behalf or under whose direction the act was committed; and

(b) Any gang officer or director who causes, orders, suggests, authorizes, consents to, agrees to, requests, acquiesces in or ratifies any such act; and

(c) Any gang member who, in the furtherance of or in connection with, any gang-related activity, commits any such act; and

(d) Any gang officer, director, leader or member.

(3) The cause of action authorized by this chapter shall be brought by the Attorney General, the district attorney or attorneys, or the county attorney, or by his or their respective designees. This cause of action shall be in addition to any other civil or criminal proceeding authorized by the laws of this state or by federal law, and shall not be construed as requiring the prosecutor to elect a civil, rather than criminal, remedy, or as replacing any other cause of action. Liability of the gang, its officers, directors, leaders and members shall be joint and several subject only to the apportionment and allocation of punitive damage authorized under Section 97-44-13.

§ 97-44-7. Filing of complaint.

(1) An action may be commenced under this chapter by the filing of a complaint as in civil cases.

(2) A complaint filed under this chapter, and all other ancillary or collateral matters arising therefrom, including matter relating to discovery, motions, trial and the perfection or execution of judgments shall be subject to the Rules of Civil Procedure, except as may be otherwise provided in this chapter, or except as the court may otherwise order upon motion of the prosecutor in matters relating to immunity or the physical safety of witnesses.

§ 97-44-9. Venue.

(1) In an action brought under this chapter, venue shall lie in any county where an act charged in the complaint as part of a gang-related criminal activity was committed.

(2) It shall not be necessary for all offenses necessary to establishing a criminal activity to have occurred in any one county where the district attorneys or county attorneys of several counties, or their designees, each complaining of any offense, elected to join in a complaint. In such instance, it shall be sufficient that the complaint, taken as a whole, alleges a gang-related criminal activity, and each count of any such joint complaint shall be considered as cumulative to other counts for purposes of alleging or demonstrating such an activity.

(3) Where an activity is alleged to have been committed or to have occurred in more than one county, the district attorney or county attorney of each such county, or their designees, may join their several causes of action in a single complaint, which may be filed in any such county agreed to by or among them, but no such joinder shall be had without the consent of the district attorney or county attorney having jurisdiction over each offense alleged as part of the activity.

(1) All streetgangs and streetgang members engaged in a gang-related criminal activity within this state impliedly consent to service of process upon them as set forth in this section, or as may be otherwise authorized by the Rules of Civil Procedure.

(2) Service of process upon a streetgang may be had by leaving a copy of the complaint and summons directed to any officer of such gang, commanding the gang to appear and answer the complaint or otherwise plead at a time and place certain:

- (a) With any gang officer; or
- (b) With any individual member of the gang simultaneously named therein; or
- (c) In the manner provided for service by publication in a civil action; or
- (d) With any parent, legal guardian or legal custodian of any persons charged with a gang-related offense when any person sued civilly under this chapter is under seventeen (17) years of age and is also charged criminally or as a delinquent minor; or
- (e) With the director of any agency or department of this state who is the legal guardian, guardianship administrator or custodian of any person sued under this chapter; or
- (f) With the probation or parole officer of any person sued under this chapter; or

(g) With such other person or agent as the court may, upon petition of the district attorney or his designee or the county attorney, authorize as appropriate and reasonable under all of the circumstances.

(3) If after being summoned a streetgang does not appear, the court shall enter an answer for the streetgang neither affirming nor denying the allegations of the complaint but demanding strict proof thereof, and proceed to trial and judgment without further process.

(4) When any person is named as a defendant streetgang member in any complaint, or subsequently becomes known and is added or joined as a named defendant, service of process may be had as authorized or provided for in the Rules of Civil Procedure for service of process in a civil case.

§ 97-44-13. Punitive damages.

(1) In any action brought under this chapter, and upon the verified application of the district attorney or his designee or the county attorney, the circuit court may at any time enter such restraining orders, injunctions or other prohibitions, or order such other relief as it deems proper, including but not limited to ordering any person to divest himself of any involvement or interest, direct or indirect, in any illegal streetgang activity and imposing other reasonable restrictions on the future illegal activities of any defendant.

(2) A final judgment in favor of a public authority under this chapter shall entitle it to recover compensatory damages for all damages, losses, impairments or other harm proximately caused, together with the costs of the suit and reasonable attorney's fees. Punitive damages may be assessed against any streetgang, against any streetgang officer or member found guilty of actual participation in, or to be legally accountable for, a criminal activity under this chapter. One hundred percent (100%) of punitive damages awarded will be expended by the public authority to implement preventative programs for juveniles or to fund existing programs.

§ 97-44-15. Injunction, abatement, damages, or other remedies for unlawful use of private building by criminal street gang.

(1) Every private building or place used by members of a criminal street gang for the commission of illegal activity is a nuisance and may be the subject of an injunction or cause of action for damages or for abatement of the nuisance as provided for in this chapter.

(2) Any person may file a petition for injunctive relief with the appropriate court seeking eviction from or closure of any premises used for commission of illegal activity by a criminal street gang. Upon clear and convincing proof by the plaintiff that the premises are being used by members of a criminal street gang for the commission of illegal activity, the court may order the owner of record or the lessee of the premises to remove or evict the persons from the premises and order the premises sealed, prohibit further use of the premises, or enter such order as may be necessary to prohibit the premises from being used for the commission of illegal activity by a gang and to abate the nuisance.

(3) Any action for injunction, damages, abatement, or other relief filed pursuant to this section shall proceed according to the provisions of the Rules of Civil Procedure.

(4) The court shall not issue an injunction or assess a civil penalty against any owner of record or the lessee of the private building or place, unless there is a showing by clear and convincing proof that the person knew or should have known or had been notified of the use of the premises by a gang for illegal activity. Any injunctive relief other than that specifically authorized in subsection (6) of this section shall be limited to that which is necessary to protect the health and safety of the residents or the public or that which is necessary to prevent further illegal activity.

(5) A petition for injunction shall not be filed until thirty (30) days after notice of the unlawful use or criminal conduct has been provided to the owner of record or the lessee, by mail, return receipt requested, postage prepaid, to the owner's last known address, or by personal service. If the premises are abandoned or closed, or if the whereabouts of the owner of record or lessee is unknown, all notices, process, pleadings, and orders required to be delivered or served under this section may be attached to a door of the premises and mailed, return receipt requested, to the last address which is reflected on the ad valorem tax receipt on file in the office of the tax collector of the county where the property is located, and this shall have the same effect as personal service on the owner of record or lessee. No injunctive relief authorized by subsection (6) of this section shall be issued in the form of a temporary restraining order.

(6) If the court has previously issued injunctive relief ordering the owner of record or the lessee of the premises to close the premises or otherwise to keep the premises from being used for the commission by a gang of illegal activity, the court, upon proof of failure to comply with the terms of the injunction and that the premises continue to be used by a gang for the commission of illegal activity, may do one or more of the following:

- (a) Order the premises demolished and cleared at the cost of the owner.
- (b) Order the premises sold at public auction and the proceeds from the sale, minus the costs of the sale and the expenses of bringing the action, delivered to the owner.
- (c) Order the defendant to pay damages to persons or local governing authorities who have been damaged or injured or have incurred expense as a result of the defendant's failure to take reasonable steps or precautions to comply with the terms of any injunction issued pursuant to the provisions of this chapter.
- (d) Assess a civil penalty not to exceed Five Thousand Dollars ($5,000.00) against the defendant based upon the severity of the nuisance and its duration. In establishing the amount of any civil penalty, the court shall consider all of the following factors:

(i) The actions taken by the defendant to mitigate or correct the problem at the private building or place or the reasons why no such action was taken.

(ii) Any failure of the plaintiff to provide notice as required by subsection (5) of this section.

(iii) Any other factor deemed by the court to be relevant.

(7) No nonprofit, fraternal or charitable organization which is conducting its affairs with ordinary care or skill nor any governmental entity shall be enjoined pursuant to the provisions of this chapter.

(8) Nothing in this chapter shall preclude any aggrieved person from seeking any other remedy provided by law.

SOURCES: Laws, 2001, ch. 525, § 1, eff from and after July 1, 2001.

§ 97-44-17. Forfeiture of firearms, ammunition, and dangerous weapons used by criminal street gangs; disposition of property seized; procedure.

(1) Any firearm, ammunition to be used in a firearm, or dangerous weapon in the possession of a member of a criminal street gang may be seized by any law enforcement agency or peace officer when the law enforcement agency or peace officer has probable cause to believe that the firearm, ammunition to be used in a firearm, or dangerous weapon is or has been used by a gang in the commission of illegal activity.

(2) The district attorney or an attorney for the seizing agency shall initiate, in a civil action, forfeiture proceedings by petition in the circuit courts as to any property seized pursuant to the provisions of this section within thirty (30) days of seizure. The district attorney shall provide notice of the filing of the petition to those members of the gang who become known to law enforcement officials as a result of the seizure and any related arrests, and to any person determined by law enforcement officials to be the owner of any of the property involved. After initial notice of the filing of the petition, the court shall assure that all persons so notified continue to receive notice of all subsequent proceedings related to the property.

(3) Any person who claims an interest in any seized property shall, in order to assert a claim that the property should not be forfeited, file a notice with the court, without necessity of paying costs, of the intent to establish either of the following:

(a) That the persons asserting the claim did not know of, could not have known of, or had no reason to believe in its use by a gang in the commission of illegal activity; or

(b) That the law enforcement officer lacked the requisite reasonable belief that the property was or had been used by a gang in the commission of illegal activity.

(4) An acquittal or dismissal in a criminal proceeding shall not preclude civil proceedings under this section; however, for good cause shown, on motion by the district attorney, the court may stay civil forfeiture proceedings during the criminal trial for related criminal indictment or information alleging a violation of this section. Such a stay shall not be available pending an appeal.

(5) Except as otherwise provided by this section, all proceedings hereunder shall be governed by the provisions of the Mississippi Rules of Civil Procedure.

(6) The issue shall be determined by the court alone, and the hearing on the claim shall be held within sixty (60) days after service of the petition unless continued for good cause. The district attorney shall have the burden of showing by clear and convincing proof that forfeiture of the property is appropriate.

(7) Any person who asserts a successful claim in accordance with subsection (3) of this section shall be awarded the seized property by the court, together with costs of filing such action. All property as to which no claim is filed, or as to which no successful claim is made, may be destroyed, sold at a public sale, retained for use by the seizing agency or transferred without charge to any law enforcement agency of the state for use by it. Property that is sold shall be sold by the circuit court at a public auction for cash to the highest and best bidder after advertising the sale for at least once each week for three (3) consecutive weeks, the last notice to appear not more than ten (10) days nor less than five (5) days prior to such sale in a newspaper having a general circulation in the county. Such notice shall contain a description of the property to be sold and a statement of the time and place of sale. It shall not be necessary to the validity of such sale either to have the property present at the place of sale or to have the name of the owner thereof stated in such notice. The proceeds of the sale, less any expenses of concluding the sale, shall be deposited in the seizing agency's general fund to be used only for approved law enforcement activity affecting the agency's efforts to combat gang activities.

(8) Any action under the provisions of this section may be consolidated with any other action or proceedings pursuant to this section relating to the same property on motion of the district attorney.

§ 97-44-19. Penalties for criminal street gang activity.

(1) Any person who intentionally directs, participates, conducts, furthers, or assists in the commission of illegal gang activity shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than one (1) year nor more than one-half ($\frac{1}{2}$) of the maximum term of imprisonment provided for an underlying offense and may be fined an amount not to exceed Ten Thousand Dollars (\$10,000.00). Any sentence of imprisonment imposed pursuant to this section shall be in addition and consecutive to any sentence imposed for the underlying offense.

(2) Any person who is convicted of a felony or an attempted felony which is committed for the benefit of, at the direction of, or in association with any criminal street gang, with the intent to promote, further, or assist in the affairs of a criminal gang, shall, upon conviction of that felony, in addition and consecutive to the punishment prescribed for the felony or attempted felony of which he or she has been convicted, be imprisoned for not less than one (1) year nor more than one-half ($\frac{1}{2}$) of the maximum term of imprisonment provided for that offense.

shall fail to deliver or have delivered the designated documents at the time and place required in the subpoena, on application of the Attorney General the circuit or chancery court having approved the issuance of the subpoena may issue an attachment for such person, returnable immediately, or at such time and place as the court may direct. (d) The provisions of paragraphs (a), (b) and (c) of this subsection shall not prohibit the enforcement of, or prosecution under, any other statutes of this state.

(4)(a) If any person shall refuse, or is likely to refuse, on the basis of his privilege against self-incrimination, to produce the designated documents as requested by a subpoena issued under this section or issued by a court, the Attorney General may request the court, ex parte and in camera, to issue an order requiring such person to produce the documents information which he refuses to give or provide on the basis of his privilege against self-incrimination. The Attorney General may request said order under this subsection when, in his judgment:

(i) The documents sought from such individual may be necessary to the public interest; and

(ii) Such individual has refused or is likely to refuse to produce the designated document on the basis of his privilege against self-incrimination.

Following such request, an order shall issue in accordance with this section requiring such person to produce the documents which he refuses to produce on the basis of his privilege against self-incrimination.

nation, but no documents or information compelled under the aforesaid order, or any information directly or indirectly derived from such documents may be used against the witness in any criminal proceeding, except a prosecution for perjury, giving a false statement, or otherwise failing to comply with the order.

(5) Documents in the possession of the Attorney General gathered pursuant to the provisions of this section and subpoenas issued by him shall be maintained in confidential files with access limited to prosecutorial and other law enforcement investigative personnel on a “need to know” basis and shall be exempt from the provisions of the Mississippi Public Records Act of 1983, except that upon the filing of an indictment or information, or upon the filing of an action for recovery of property, funds or fines, such documents shall be subject to such disclosure as may be required pursuant to the applicable statutes or court rules governing the trial of any such judicial proceeding.

(6) No person, including the Attorney General, a member of his staff, prosecuting attorney, law enforcement officer, witness, court reporter, attorney or other person, shall disclose to an unauthorized person documents, including subpoenas issued and served, gathered by the Attorney General pursuant to the provisions of this section, except that upon the filing of an indictment or information, or upon the filing of an action for recovery of property, funds or fines, or in other legal proceedings, such documents shall be subject to such disclosure as may be required pursuant to applicable statutes and court rules governing the trial of any such judicial proceeding. In event of an unauthorized disclosure of any such documents gathered by the Attorney General pursuant to the provisions of this section, the person making any such unauthorized disclosure shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine of not more than One Thousand Dollars ($1,000.00), or imprisonment of not more than six (6) months, or by both such fine and imprisonment.
